210 Tons Of Steel Arrive For Library

Some 210 tons of steel in seven trailer loads arrived Monday to begin the first real visible signs of construction of the new addition to the Thomas Crane Public Library on Washington Street.

Another 190 tons of steel will be delivered later, according to Paul Hemphill, the city's clerk of the works.

"When you see the cranes putting the steel in place, you're beginning to see the shape of the new addition," said Mayor James Sheets. When the matching brick of the Richardson library is put in place, it will be even more impressive, said the mayor.

The 65,000-square-foot addition, which includes a cable studio and a meeting room for 150 people, will double the library space, said Ann McLaughlin, library director. The addition is the first phase of the project; the second phase calls for renovating the Richardson building and linking the addition to the Coletti Building.

Total cost of the project is about $15 million, she said. That includes the land acquisition and the furnishings. Actual construction costs are about $13 million, added Hemphill.

The general contractor is W.T. Rich Company Inc. of Boston; CBT/Childs Bertman Tseckares Inc. of Boston designed the addition to complement the original library building designed in 1882 by noted architect H.H. Richardson. The rear portion of that building was added in 1907 by another architect in Richardson's firm, William Aiken.

Keating Picks Quincy Attorney As Top Aide

Norfolk County District Attorney William Keating, who was sworn into office yesterday (Wednesday) morning, named Dennis Mahoney of Quincy as his first assistant district attorney.

Mahoney most recently had been head of the white collar crime unit in District Attorney Jeffrey Locke's office.

This is the fourth district attorney for whom he has worked, starting in 1972 when he joined then-District Attorney George Burke's office as an administrator in the district court prosecution program.

In 1977, when he received his juris doctorate and passed the bar, he began working as a prosecutor for then-District Attorney William Delahunt and lecturing at the Massachusetts Criminal Justice Training Council.

After a year in private practice, he returned to the district attorney's office in 1986. He also served as a special assistant in Worcester, Middlesex and Plymouth counties from 1986 to 1991 where he helped prosecute cases in which wiretaps in prison were used to gather information, said Keating.

Mahoney, who served as president of the Quincy Bar Association from 1989 to 1990, is the immediate past president of the Norfolk County Bar Association.

Keating announced several other appointments as well.

Richard D. Grundy of Salem, who was an assistant in Middlesex County, will be the chief trial attorney in Keating's office.

Sheets At Mid-Term: Achievements, And A Challenge

'Hospital Must Find A Partner'

By MARILYN JACKSON

In his state of the city mid-term address, Mayor James Sheets listed many of the past year's accomplishments.

But he noted the biggest challenge still lies ahead: Finding another health care provider with which to merge or form a partnership with Quincy Hospital.

For the past year, the city has been exploring an affiliation with several different entities, realizing it is time for the city to get out of the hospital business, the mayor told The Quincy Sun last week.

During the past year, the hospital has continued to operate with a $9 million to $10 million deficit, although the hospital has reserves to cover that loss. But, last October, the hospital was forced to close the maternity ward after 108 years of delivering babies, including Sheets' four children.

"We have made substantial progress in finding another entity with whom we could partner or merge," Sheets told the City Council Monday, "and I am confident that we are going to complete an arrangement which should allow Quincy Hospital to retain all of its basic community services."

"I also believe we may still have an opportunity to restore the maternity ward services to the people of this great city."

"The next three months will be extremely critical. It is my hope that by the end of the hospital's fiscal year in October, this issue will have been completely resolved," said Sheets.

IN HIS FIFTH mid-term address Monday, Mayor James Sheets reflected on what he called "an unprecedented year of accomplishment and growth" while outlining challenges to be met in 1999.

He added that it will require the state legislative delegation, the mayor and the hospital board to work closely together.

Sheets credited the strong economy in Massachusetts and in Quincy with the city's ability to accomplish much as it stands poised to enter the 21st century.

"Low interest rates continue to drive economic development forward. Fiscal year 1999 should continue to be a strong year economically, as we await the formal announcement of the construction of a 435-room, full-service hotel at Crown

NATO Peacekeeper To Speak At King Breakfast Jan. 18

The City of Quincy and Quincy Human Rights Commission will co-sponsor the fifth annual Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. Breakfast Monday, Jan. 18 at 9 a.m. at the George F. Bryan VFW Post, 24 Broad St.

Guest speaker will be Assistant U.S. Attorney and Marine Corps Reserve Lt. Col. William Sinnott, who spent eight months in 1998 assisting the NATO peacekeeping forces in Sarajevo, Bosnia-Herzegovina. Lt. Col. Sinnott assisted in establishing organizations to maintain long-term peace and shaping public policy on refugee returns and civil-military relations. He helped refugees return to their prewar homes.

Students from the Broad Meadows Middle School Human Rights Squad and students from the Snug Harbor Community School will also participate in the morning events.

Tickets are $8 for adults and $5 for seniors, students and the disabled. For tickets, call Jonathan Yip, Quincy's Equal Opportunity Administrator, at (617) 376-1515.

For additional information, call Charlene McDonald, event chairperson, at (617) 750-0830.

Estimated 35,000 Enjoy Festivities

Quincy First Night Celebration 'Spectacular'

By BERT GARR

An estimated 35,000 people enjoyed an alcohol and drug-free New Year celebration at the seventh annual First Night held in Quincy's downtown, according to Mike Cheney, chairman of Quincy First Night.

"As early as first thing Friday morning, my answering machine was already filled with messages from people telling me how much they liked the First Night Quincy festivities, and just how much fun they had," Cheney told The Quincy Sun.

Cheney said that the praise even flowed in from beyond city limits.

"I had people from Weymouth calling to say how much they enjoyed the fireworks."

Exit polling conducted by Cheney and other members of the First Night committee indicates that, of the 15 different events and performances offered, the average First Night attendee saw four different performances and participated in four different events, some of which had waiting lists and standing room only.

The night revolved around a Mardi-Gras theme which organizers emphasized by placing speakers around Quincy Square that blared Mardi-Gras jazz, and handing out over 500 Mardi-Gras beads and over 2000 Hawaiian leis.

"On top of all the performances," said Cheney, "you also had families outside in the square, dancing to the music."

Festivities included two laser light shows, a festival of lights parade, and a fireworks display that Cheney said held particular interest for those residents who chose to spend the night at home.

"The actual number of people who experienced First Night goes far beyond the number of people who went downtown if you include the citizens who stood outside their houses to see the First Night midnight fireworks display," Cheney said. "People who may not have wanted to deal with the crowds or the cold or have parties in their homes could still experience the fireworks."

Of particular interest this year were the laser light shows, the first held after a festival of lights parade that featured a procession of brightly lit floats and trucks, and the second held at 20 minutes before midnight.

The second laser light show lasted until the midnight fireworks display and attracted 5,000 - 7,000 First Night viewers.

"People seemed particularly impressed by the second laser light show," said Cheney, "and it was impressive to see how many people stayed around until midnight to witness it."

Many revelers returned to Quincy Square over the weekend to witness the "Village of Ice Sculptures" - 16 fantastical statues carved from blocks of ice originally intended to last only through New Year's Eve.

The statues had to be dismantled on Sunday, due to the rain, but Cheney said that they were still attracting visitors even at that late date.

"Hundred of families came back all weekend just to see the statues," he said. "The positive aftereffects of this event were great."

However, he said none of it would be possible without

80 Channels In Basic Package RCN Granted Provisional Cable License

By MARILYN JACKSON

By the end of the year 2000, Quincy will have a second provider not only for cable but for telephone and high-speed Internet access as well.

"Competition will affect [prices] and keep prices under control, particularly for seniors and those on fixed incomes," said Mayor James Sheets who formally issued a provisional license to RCN Tuesday.

He said he hopes a final license could be issued by June, at which time RCN would begin wiring the city.

Thomas K. Steel, vice president of municipal relations for RCN, said the work in Quincy represents approximately a $20 million investment.

For subscribers, RCN will offer in its basic package about 80 channels which will be available without a converter on cable-ready television sets for about $28 a month, said Steel.

One of those channels will be a foreign language channel, and in Quincy, RCN would include the Jade Channel which would appeal to Quincy's large Asian community, said Steel. There will be about 30 other channels available for an extra fee.

In addition, local telephone service will be offered at a 5 percent discount from Bell Atlantic rates; subscribers who buy both cable and telephone service would get a bigger discount on the cable service, he said.

Rates for high-speed Internet access, which already is extremely competitive, have not yet been set, he added.

Citizens who have a demonstrated financial need — such as those receiving SSI, fuel assistance, certain veterans' benefits, Medicare — or those over 65 could receive a $2 monthly discount on the basic package.

RCN, of which BeCom or Boston Edison is a minority partner, was the only bidder for a second license. MediaOne and its predecessors have held a cable franchise in Quincy for several years and secured a 10-year non-exclusive agreement two years ago.

For the past three years, MediaOne has been upgrading its cable network in the Northeast at a cost of $1 billion, according to Rick Jenkinson, director of communications. The work in Quincy is expected to be completed during the second quarter of this year, at which time it will be able to offer MediaOne Express or high-speed Internet access and MediaOne digital telephone service.

Jenkinson said that MediaOne also has spent about $250,000 for 500 new outlets in 17 Quincy buildings, in addition to what was agreed upon in its original license.

RCN, which is headquartered in New Jersey, has been aggressively marketing its services in the Greater Boston area for the past two years. Quincy marks the 11th community with which RCN has obtained license agreements.

The first system was built in Somerville and in full operation, said John Conroy Jr., manager of Boston Edison's government affairs. Arlington is

Lebo Occupational Education Director

Emily Lebo of Quincy, coordinator of the health and human service programs at Quincy High School since 1992, has been named director of occupational education at Quincy High School.

Since the resignation of Angela Avery as director for the Center for Technical Education last summer, a retired former director, Joseph Mazarella, has been serving as the acting director.

Monday was Mrs. Lebo's first day in her new post.

Mrs. Lebo joined the Quincy school department in 1987, serving as an instructor at the Center for Technical Education. She also served as a VICA adviser for five years and as a Thomas Jefferson adviser for four years.

For the past seven years she worked with students enrolled in the school's allied health and early childhood education programs.

A registered nurse, Mrs. Lebo received her R.N. and an associate degree in nursing from Labour College in Boston and a bachelor of science degree in nursing 10 years later. In 1990 she earned her teaching credentials in the occupational education division from the University of Massachusetts at Boston.

In 1995 she began working toward a master's degree in administration and education at Northeastern University's Graduate School of Nursing.

Last summer, she worked as a part-time nurse in the post-anesthesia care unit of Boston Medical Center, and previously had worked as a per diem nurse with the Quincy Visiting Nurse Association for five years. During the summer of 1993, she was a part-time nurse at Quincy Hospital.

One of her first orders of business in her new assignment is drawing up a budget for fiscal year 2000 for the Center for Technical Education.

In addition to health and human services cluster, she oversees the construction technology, business and finance, automotive and communication clusters. She also oversees the consumer science, business education and industrial arts classes in the schools.

"Student contact is one thing I'm going to miss," she said of her new post. "I want to work on that."

TB... IT'S BACK!

Nearly dormant for many years, tuberculosis is staging a striking comeback. TB's steady increase since 1985 has public health officials concerned. As recently as the first half of this century, it still claimed 5 million lives. The years of TB sanitariums came to an end in 1951 with the introduction of streptomycin and isoniazid, which made home treatment easy and convenient. Caused by the mycobacterium tuberculosis, TB is spread by airborne transmission of droplets from an infected person's breath, cough, sneeze, or even normal speaking and laughing. Many adults test positive for TB antibodies, and many carry the bacteria without becoming ill. The increase in TB has been most dramatic in groups with immunodeficiency disorders or poor hygiene. It's wise to make sure you have the immunizations you need. Call us if you need more information. At AFFILIATED MEDICAL GROUPS, located at 700 Congress St., Quincy, we listen to your concerns. We are affiliated with Quincy and South Shore Hospitals. Please call us at 617-472-2550; office hours by appointment. P.S. Typical treatment of TB today includes the use of the drugs INH and rifampin, as well as pyrazinamide for the first two months.

Clinton And The Opinion Polls

Do you ever wonder about those opinion polls? Do they truly reflect how most Americans feel about issues and people?

The latest one really makes me wonder.

It's the one that says President Bill Clinton is the man most admired by Americans.

And, according to that poll, Americans admire him even more than before the Monica Lewinsky scandal and all the lying.

Not only that, they admire him more than they do Pope John Paul II and Rev. Billy Graham who finished a distant second and third behind him.

That's kind of hard to understand.

The man -- who messed around with an intern -- in the White House, lied to everyone about it and then wagged his finger in America's face and told another huge whopper, is the man most admired by Americans! And he still hasn't gotten around to the truth.

If he is the most admired man, moral values can't mean beans anymore in this country.

According to the Reuters news report on the poll conducted by Gallup, Clinton was placed first or second on the most admired list by 18 percent of those queried.

Pope John Paul got 7 percent, Rev. Graham 5 percent and Michael Jordan, 4 percent.

Kenneth Starr, the independent counsel and Clinton's nemesis, got 1 percent. He was tied with Jesse Jackson, Bob Dole, British Prime Minister Tony Blair and General Norman Schwarzkopf who led the U.S. forces in the Gulf War.

Twelve percent said the man they admired the most was a relative or friend.

So, Clinton got 18 percent or the vote but does that really make him the man most Americans admire?

If 18 percent said they admired him the most, didn't some 82 percent say they admired someone else?

There were only 1,055 adults polled and how they responded is supposed to be how the rest of us feel. The rest of us number 264.6 million people. Are just 1,055 a true barometer of how 264.6 million feel?

I think the guys who take these polls should answer a few questions themselves. Like:

How many of those called are men and how many women? How many were Democrats, Republicans, independents? What age group? What part of the country?

And, include that breakdown with the information they release to the media.

After seeing the results of some of these polls, I wonder if they keep calling the same people.

I don't know about you, but I've never been called. And, I don't know anyone else around this area who has? Have you?

I just don't get how 1,055 people can truly speak for 264.6 million others.

Maybe the country would be better off if we all ignored these polls.

Right now we seem to have so-called leaders in Washington who are afraid to do any leading without first checking the latest poll.

They keep popping up with new proposals to short-cut the impeachment trial of Clinton in the Senate. Make it a quickie and get it over with. They want the easy way out: censure, which regardless of how you slice it, is still just a slap on the wrist.

What these leaders should be doing is forgetting public opinion polls and paying more attention to the Constitution of the United States.

The Constitution provides for an impeachment vote in the House of Representatives and a trial in the Senate to acquit or convict. Not "censure."

And we also have those who not only want a quickie trial but one without witnesses.

Have you ever heard of a trial without witnesses? Or pre-determining the length of a trial or its outcome?

When Starr was calling witnesses before the federal grand jury, Clinton defenders were all over television and in newspapers complaining that they didn't have a chance to cross examine witnesses.

Well, here's their chance.

I wouldn't mind a few of the key players, like Linda Tripp, Betty Currie, Vernon Jordan, Lewinsky and Clinton himself called to testify. Let them tell their story directly to the people. And let them all be cross-examined.

Spare the country the sordid details, is now the cry. It will split the country with diversity, etc. etc.

Well, I think most people want the truth and a full trial is the best way of getting it.

The country has weathered momentous events before.

It survived Abraham Lincoln's assassination, Andrew Johnson's impeachment, the Depression, World War II, John Kennedy's assassination, the Vietnam War, and a few other biggies.

And it will survive a trial of William Jefferson Clinton.

Prefers Oil To Shipbuilding

Editor, The Quincy Sun: There are a number of reasons why I believe it is unlikely that we will see ships built at the Quincy shipyard again.

Last year we witnessed Congress lending $138 million to Casco, a Chinese corporation, to build ships in Alabama. Admittedly, a stupid move, but nonetheless it says something about a Republican controlled Congress and an all Democratic delegation from Massachusetts. It says something about the likelihood of Massachusetts Heavy Industries getting a $320 million loan from the U.S. Maritime Administration (MARAD).

There are too many places in the nation and in the world that are building ships which lack a union tradition as well as the Commonwealth's stifling employment regulations. World economies are very fragile and long-range, high-risk ventures are especially dangerous in these times.

The shipbuilding hope has been a rallying cry for Democrats to get out the union vote. It is time for union bosses and voters to give up the ghost and see it for what it is: election year politicking.

There is one alternative to ships. It is oil: black gold. But this will require an extraordinary shift in priorities. Those who have seen fabrication sights in Louisiana, Texas and California will understand the magnitude of what I am suggesting. This is an industry that does not blink at union wages and sees billions of dollars as merely a cost of investment without government subsidies.

Georges Bank offers one of the world's largest untapped oil resources, yet we spend countless billions of dollars and continuously risk and sacrifice the lives of our young men and women to defend the availability of oil in the Middle East and in other parts of the troubled world. We gamble the welfare of our nation and the American culture trusting blindly that we can transport oil across the oceans in times of war.

If and when we drill Georges Bank, the Quincy yard is the obvious sight to fabricate the three and four hundred foot steel towers which will become the oil rigs. There is the physical plant with which to start and a labor source already skilled in steel fabrication and hungry for work.

The bottom line is that Quincy and the surrounding area needs industry. Oil is big business and America needs oil. We are blessed with one of the world's largest supplies in our front yard. It is time to open this discussion, but it is a discussion that will frighten the timid and infuriate the politically correct.

Clinton Should Resign

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Perish the thought, but if I were in Bill Clinton's unenviable position, I would resign the office pronto to prevent any more misery for my family, and, more importantly, to stop further erosion of the Presidency.

My stance is buttressed by my recent discovery that, because of a 1956 Act of Congress, our embattled president would lose these benefits if removed from office: his pension which now totals $151,800 a year and several other post-presidency perks... These include Secret Service protection, free health care and office and travel expenses which currently average $546,000 per annum for the four living ex-presidents: Ford, Carter, Reagan, and Bush.

Should Clinton resign or manage to avoid conviction by the Senate, he retains all of those valuable benefits. I predict that if more damaging evidence is forthcoming,

"Slick Willie" will swallow that power-lusting pride and slink back to Arkansas. Unless he joins those Hollywood Hacks who worship a draft dodging serial adulterer, perjurer, congenital liar, and Lord knows what else. Stay tuned.

No Date Set For Shipyard Re-Opening

By PAUL HAROLD

Despite news reports, a spokesman for the Electric Boat Division of the General Dynamics (GD) Corporation, said this week there is no date set for the re-opening of the Fore River Shipyard which the corporation recently bought from Bethlehem Steel.

A February first date was speculated since GD officials said they expected to re-open the yard with 30-60 days of the purchase.

There were also no announcements as to managerial personnel, although it was previously reported that Robert Laney would be manager.

Meanwhile, former Bethlehem general manager Sam Wakeman and a small staff were retained to assist in the transfer of ownership.

Bethlehem spokesmen said that a number of former technical and administrative personnel would be transferred to other Bethlehem operations, while others were pensioned.

NO TAX DEAL FOR SHIPYARD

Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa said that he was scheduled to meet this week with officials from the General Dynamics Corporation but said he would promise no "tax deals."

"I will listen to what the GD officials have to say, but I will not promise them anything during our meeting with the assessors," Della Chiesa said.

GD paid $6 million for the yard. It was assessed for $12.8 million.

'PARADE PRIEST' FR. THOMAS TIERNEY DIES

Fr. Thomas Tierney, the "parade priest," died at age 60 at the rectory of St. Joseph's in Roxbury where he was pastor.

Fr. Tierney served as curate at St. John's for 11 years where he was active in numerous community activities. While he was mostly known for his work in promoting the Quincy Christmas parade, he also served as chaplain for both the Quincy fire and police departments.

Additionally, he was recognized by President Franklin Roosevelt for his work in selling war bonds and was awarded the "Kate Smith" award for his rescue work at the Coconut Grove fire.

QUINCY-ISMS

On the fourth ballot, Joseph LaRaia was elected president of the City Council, with seven votes out of nine. George McDonald gave him the winning vote. Denise Coll Receives Women's Leadership Award

Denise Coll of Quincy was recently presented a Women's Leadership Award from the Central New England Chapter of the National Multiple Sclerosis Society.

The award recognizes outstanding contributions to the business, civic and cultural life and for raising $30,000 to further the society's mission to end the devastating effects of multiple sclerosis.

Coll is general manager at the Seaport Hotel in Boston.

Shannon Lee Named Bunche Scholar At Colby

Sharon K. Lee of Quincy, a freshman at Colby College in Waterville, ME., was named a Ralph J. Bunche Scholar for the 1998-99 academic year.

Lee, a graduate of North Quincy High School, received a four year scholarship at Colby through the Bunche Scholars program established in 1979 in memory of the American statesman and diplomat. The program recognizes students of color who have demonstrated scholastic strength, leadership potential, integrity, and perseverance. Lee is the daughter of Man Lee and Yuen Chan-Lee of Quincy.

Lee was one of 54 Bunche scholars recognized at the annual Ralph J. Bunche Symposium at Colby this fall.

Women's Fitness At Fore River Clubhouse

The Quincy Recreation Department is conducting women's fitness classes at the Fore River Clubhouse on Monday, Wednesday, or Friday mornings at either 8:30 a.m. or 9:30 a.m.

The instructor is Mrs. Mary Manoli.

Each class includes exercise to improve and strengthen flexibility, endurance and overall fitness.

Adaptations in the exercise allow each participant to work out at their own pace.

Cost of the program is $3.00 for 20 classes. Classes run Jan. 4 through Feb. 26. Registration is on a first come, first serve basis at the Quincy Recreation Department, One Merrymount Parkway from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. weekdays.

RCN Granted Provisional Cable License

nearly built, and wiring is under way in Waltham, Newton and Brookline, he said.

Councillor-at-large Paul Harold, chairman of the city's oversight committee, said Quincy has been looking into having a second provider for the past year-and-a-half but did not want to be the first municipality. "We are benefiting from the experience of Somerville," he said.

"Quincy is attractive in terms of the percentage of subscribers and the number of those who take the second and third tier of services," said Harold.

Steel said there are more than 30,000 homes passed in Quincy, with about 25,000 cable subscribers.

According to RCN projections, about 1,200 residential subscribers would sign up for cable while about 12,300 will have signed up by the then year.

"To be competitive, we need to reach between 33 and 35 percent of the homes we pass to make a significant profit," said Steel. "What's different is that we're offering a bundle of services."

"This is not easy, which is why it has not been done already," Steel said. The passage of the Telecommunications Act allowed other providers, like RCN, to offer these other services, added Conroy.

"The consumers in the city of Quincy will be getting a choice," added Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymond. "We have a tremendous number of seniors, and many are on a fixed income." This will be beneficial, he said.

Sheets vowed to simplify for the citizens what the various packages of services offer, "to summarize what's available in a clear-cut, informative way to help them make a decision."

He said the information would be enclosed with tax bills.

Benefits also will accrue to the city. RCN has pledged 5 percent of its gross revenues, plus a minimum of $300,000 in equipment over the life of the contract.

By comparison, MediaOne pledges 4.25 percent of its gross revenue for local programming, which is about $300,000. Those funds are earmarked for public access and are shared with the schools, the library and the mayor's office.

While Raymond nudged RCN officials to consider opening a customer service office on lower Washington Street, between the Fore River Bridge and Southern Artery, Sheets suggested that RCN work with Quincy 2000, the city's public-private partnership, to find a suitable location.

Steel said RCN would need a site, ideally in the center, to house all the electronics of the system.

What's unique in the provisional license, added attorney Howard Horton, who served as special counsel to the city to negotiate the license, is that RCN is willing to build an institutional network linking the schools and municipal buildings. If the mayor so chooses, the $300,000 worth of equipment promised during the license would be reduced to $100,000 worth.

"There is a way to provide via the Internet a virtual private network without using a physically constructed network," said Horton. "It hasn't been tested, but RCN is willing to spend $50,000 in goods and services to do the test" without reducing the $300,000 pledge, he said.

At the appropriate time, a hotline will be opened to answer various questions to potential subscribers. Sheets added it would be a good idea to have someone at the Council on Aging be fully conversant about the various cable services too to help seniors.

Quincy Islamic Center Observing Ramadan

Quincy members of the Islamic Center of New England are observing the holy month of Ramadan at their mosque at South and Chubbuck Sts. in Quincy Point.

For them and Muslims around the world, Ramadan is a special time of reflection and renewal through fasting and reading of the Koran.

The Islamic Center mosques in Quincy, the first in New England, and the one in Sharon have approximately 1,000 families who attend, some 400 to 500 from Quincy and the South Shore.

Members at the Quincy mosque represent an estimated 26 different countries.

Iman Talal Eid has been the religious leader at the Quincy mosque since 1982. He is a native of Lebanon.

The founding families of the Quincy mosque come in large part from the Quincy Point area around Des Moines Rd. and Winter St.

President Bill Clinton issued the following statement regarding Ramadan to Muslims in Quincy and around the world:

"Warm greetings to all those observing the holy month of Ramadan."

"Ramadan is a special time of reflection and renewal for Muslims around the world, including the six million Americans who are making Islam one of our fastest-growing religions."

"Through fasting and devoted reading of the Koran, Muslims strengthen their faith in God and deepen the compassion that gives their faith such dignity and power in the eyes of Muslims and non-Muslims alike. It is a time for renewing our spirituality and for recognizing our common humanity. It is a time to remember all that we have done and all that we have yet to do to make this world worthy of its Creator."

"As the crescent moon rises, and the ninth month begins, Hillary joins me in extending best wishes to you and your families for health, prosperity, and happiness. May our prayers for a better world soon be answered."

Westcott Ward 5 Assn. Speaker

Ward 5 Community Association will meet Monday, Jan. 11 at 7 p.m. at the Beechwood Knoll School on Fenno St.

All are welcome. Guest will be fitness expert Dr. Wayne Westcott, fitness director at the South Shore YMCA in Quincy. He has published several books on the topic of strength training for adults and seniors.

Bellotti To Be Sworn In By Father

Sheriff-elect Michael Bellotti will hold a swearing-in ceremony and reception from 7 to 10 p.m. tonight (Thursday) at the Lantana in Randolph.

His father, Francis X. Bellotti, a former attorney general and lieutenant governor, will swear his son into office at 7:30 p.m.

Michael Bellotti, a former state representative, was officially sworn in by the Secretary of State's Office yesterday (Wednesday) and assumed his duties as Norfolk County Sheriff that

The Thursday night event is ceremonial.

Martha Donahue: An Inspiration And Profile In Courage

By NANCY McLAUGHLIN

When Martha Donahue first met the man she would later marry, she was introduced by a friend who wasn't just trying to be a matchmaker.

Martha's future husband, Tom Zielinski, had been injured in a car accident and her friend, Karen Hutchinson, was his physical therapist.

"She just wanted to give him an example that you can go on with a very happy, successful life, even in spite of a spinal cord injury," said Martha.

And it would be hard to find a better example than Martha, 34, who recently became a new partner in her family's business, David J. Donahue Insurance Agency, 345 Hancock St., North Quincy.

Despite being paralyzed from the chest down after a gymnastics accident in high school, she went on to graduate summa cum laude from Boston University in 1987.

Then she went to work at the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Company in Boston for the next 11 years.

While she worked there, she earned the recognition of Fellow in the Society of Actuaries in March, 1995, the highest professional recognition an actuary can receive.

"As far as I know, I was the first person to earn this honor while confined to a wheelchair," said Martha. "It never occurred to me that I couldn't do everything I wanted to do. You can do it if you're determined.

"Coming to the agency is an exciting opportunity. I think I can add another dimension to Donahue Insurance and I'm looking forward to working with my family.

"I'd also like to thank all those who have helped me along the way, especially those in the communities of Quincy and St. Agatha in Milton."

Her father, David Donahue, is happy to have Martha at the agency.

"She's worth her weight in gold," he said. "She's already made all the arrangements to update the computer for the year 2000. And that's pretty complicated, especially in the insurance business. We're all very proud of her, needless to say. She's an inspiration."

One of eight children of Margaret and David Donahue of West Quincy, Martha was just 17 years old when she broke her neck Jan. 7, 1982, after falling while moving onto the bars in gymnastics. But she never gave up her plans to go to college and live the life that she wanted.

"There was no reason that I couldn't go to college," said Martha. "Your brain is exactly the same as before your accident."

Martha drove herself to BU's campus in a specially-equipped Ford Econoline van purchased through a fundraising effort by neighbors, friends and local churches.

"I loved my van," said Martha, who drove the vehicle until earlier this year when it developed a leaky valve. It was finally replaced by Dodge Caravan which is specially equipped."

That van not only got her to college but also to work in Boston at John Hancock after graduation. She would arrive early each day to get a parking space on the street because the van was too high to fit in the insurance company's garage.

While at John Hancock, Martha spent nearly eight years studying to become a Fellow in the Society of Actuaries. An actuary computes such things as insurance risks and premiums.

"You have to give up a lot of your free time to do it," said Martha. "But I was determined. It was a very big achievement and something I worked hard for. Some people might liken it to a Ph.D., but I think it's much harder."

It was also while working at John Hancock around 1990 that she realized a small miracle occurred. She noticed that she could push some buttons on the elevator that she couldn't push before.

Donahue has had a successful academic and professional career despite being paralyzed from the chest down in a 1982 gymnastics accident in high school.

"I got some muscles back in my triceps," she said. "It was like a miracle. It's very rare to have it happen so many years after your accident. I have so much more that I can do even with just these little tiny muscles. It's made a huge, huge difference."

"I used to not be able to transfer myself out of bed. Now I can get up by myself if I need to. A small advantage makes a huge difference in the life of a quadriplegic. I feel much more independent."

It was also around that time that she met Tom Zielinski, the man she would marry. He was recovering at Braintree Rehabilitation Hospital after a car accident.

"We just hit it off, and we kept in touch for a long time and eventually started going out. He uses a manual wheelchair and has more use of his arms than I do," said Martha, who uses a power wheelchair.

"I had dated before," said

Tom, 37. "But she was the first person I ever really had an interest in."

They were married June 20, 1993 at St. Agatha's Church in Milton. "It was a beautiful wedding," said Martha, who kept her maiden name. They live in Braintree in a home that had been made handicapped accessible by the previous owner. And Tom works part-time at Donahue Insurance selling personal insurance.

"Tom's a great salesman," said Martha proudly.

They enjoy playing games such as Cribbage and Trivial Pursuit, cooking and entertaining. And they're planning a trip to Disney World in Florida next spring with one of Martha's sisters.

Martha works on commercial accounts with her brother Harry, senior partner. She also works on special accounts with brother Brian, who heads the personal accounts. In addition to her husband, Tom, there are also two other part-time employees.

"My parents started the agency," said Martha. "After a couple of years, my brother Harry came on, in a few more years Brian came on, and everybody who joined the agency worked well together."

"My brother Mark came on, too. He was like the computer whiz. He got them all up to date and upgraded in computers. But then he missed all that computer work once the agency was computerized."

"So there was room to grow, for someone else in the family to come in. Plus, my parents are retired. They still come in every day, but they want to ease out more. So, my brothers could hopefully use the help that I could bring."

"It seemed like a good move for me. It seemed like it would help them. It just seemed like the right time."

Hours at Donahue Insurance Agency are 9 a.m. to 6 p.m., Monday to Friday.

Colony," he said.

Other projects on the table for 1999 include the following:

- Completing the addition to the Thomas Crane Public Library. "To build a library of quality and beauty, we owe our historical city no less," he said. "Future generations will know we kept faith with Quincy's historical richness and educational needs."

- Opening the Point-Webster Middle School, the city's fifth middle school, next September as part of the city's $73 million capital improvement program for the city's 20 schools.

- Approving final design plans for a new comprehensive Quincy High School to be built on 18 acres of land abutting Faxon Park.

Along with last year's opening of the new Clifford Marshall Elementary School and the wiring of every public school for computers, cable and telephone as well as improving security, these school programs present "a giant step to ensure not only our children's future but the educational destiny of generations of children yet to come," Sheets said.

- Ensuring the success of community policing efforts, a program for which Councillor Daniel Raymondi pushed and was finally embraced, supported by the hiring of 22 new officers, the largest police manpower increase in 27 years, who serve "as an early warning system against community deterioration and the insidious intrusion of crime."

The officers are working with neighborhood and community associations, city department heads, business people, the public schools and churches throughout the city in Quincy Point, Brewers Corner, Germantown and the Quincy center, Wollaston and North Quincy business districts.

- Working with the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development in developing 96 additional units of housing at Squantum Gardens for senior citizens and a 30,000-square-foot senior center with 100 units of assisted care attached.

"This continuum of care facility will be one-of-a-kind in the Commonwealth and will be funded through two different HUD programs without any financial obligation by the city," said Sheets.

- Expanding the transvan program to serve 800 seniors. This program started with 263 seniors and has climbed to 492.

- Seeing the completion of the modernization of the fabrication center at the Quincy shipyard. All robotic equipment has been delivered and will be put into place and undergo quality testing.

"Shortly thereafter," he said, "the keel of the first ship will be laid, and once again shipyard will be in operation. This time, the yard will be the most modern commercial shipyard in the world," he said.

- Continuing the effort to preserve the Souther Tide Mill. While the CVS Corporation of Woonsocket, R.I., has agreed to buy the five-acre site and turn over three acres to a private, non-profit corporation, funds must be secured and engineering work must be completed to preserve the mill, said Sheets.

- Overseeing the transformation of the former landfill on Ricciuti Drive and the adjacent Milton landfill — at no cost to the city — into a 27-hole golf course. To date, said the mayor, more than 3 million cubic yards of fill from the Big Dig have been spread throughout the Quarry Hills site to help create one of the most beautiful and professional courses in the Northeast, he said. Contours of the course will begin to take shape by mid-summer.

- Overseeing restoration work on the USS Salem with a $2 million state appropriation. Capt. Robert Duetsch was named the new director of the U.S. Naval Shipbuilding Museum Corporation last fall.

"Through our working together, we have had an unprecedented year of accomplishment growth," he continued, citing the opening of a Wal-Mart and a Walgreens and the construction of the new South Shore Savings Bank in Quincy Point and the opening of a 99 Restaurant on Newport Avenue.

In addition, renovations of the Fore River Clubhouse began, $3.7 million in infrastructure improvements outside the shipyard started, and the MDC began $5 million worth of improvements at Wollaston Beach.

Tim Naehring proposed building a little Fenway Park on Ricciuti Drive, and subsequently, a bill was filed in the legislature to allow MDC to lease the land for the project. Other recreation projects were completed, such as a new playground at the Parker Elementary School, a new park named in honor of former Councillor Leo Kelly, and work started on two additional soccer fields on Quarry Street.

Last October, Sheets noted, the federal government agreed to appropriate additional funds to allow the expansion of the Adams National Historical Park. Last March, the Mendi Bible, stolen from the library of the Adamses' "Old House" was returned.

Other accomplishments in 1998 Sheets noted were the opening of a new home for homeless veterans on Burgin Parkway and the Neponset River Bridge was named in honor of Joseph Harold Sr., former head of the state's disabled veterans.

In 1998 Quincy was recognized for its community block grant program by the U.S. Conference of Mayors which also presented Quincy with an award declaring Quincy as a great place to live, a theme to which Sheets returned repeatedly during his address.

ALFRED HELFRICH, 93, the oldest living former city councillor and his wife, Lillian, were guests Monday at the mayoral-city council mid-term ceremonies at City Hall. They are shown here with former Mayor Arthur Tobin, Mayor James Sheets, Council President Peter Kolson, Councillor and former Mayor Frank McCauley, and former Mayors Joseph LaRaia and Walter Hannon. - Granted a Motor 11 License to Peter M. Gaven and Brian Bartkus to store two vehicles at the Auto-Connect, 500 Adams St., pending permission from the Zoning Board.

City Republican Committee Meeting Monday

The Quincy City Republican Committee will meet Monday, Jan. 11 at 7 p.m. at Roche Brothers Supermarket community room, floor two, 101 Falls Boulevard, Granite Crossing in Quincy. Dan Dewey has succeeded Alex Mann as chairman of the committee. Mann stepped down because he recently moved to Holbrook. He said he will remain in Republican party politics.

Dewey will serve as chairman until the next city-wide election of the committee's membership. He has served as vice-chairman.

Dewey's succession is in accordance to committee by-laws.

Reelected Council President

Kolson: 'T-E-A-M Has No I In It'

T-E-A-M has no I in it, said Councillor Peter Kolson, who was re-elected Monday by his peers to serve another year as council president.

"It is my very deep privilege and honor to serve again," he said, noting he is called upon to represent the city at various state and national organizations as well.

"I have a deep, abiding love for the place we call home, where we work and live," he added.

Speaking after Mayor James Sheets delivered his mid-term address, Kolson noted that teamwork among the individual councillors and the mayor had led to many of last year's accomplishments.

"I can tell you flat out that we are so lucky to have the people here who work together, who cooperate to get things done," he said. "There's nothing like it anywhere else."

He praised Sheets' leadership in making the city run in the best possible way. "Going around the horseshoe" of councillors' table, Kolson singled out each councillor for his contributions.

"We're counting on you," he told Ward 6 Councillor and Rep.-elect Bruce Ayers. "You've been straightforward with your constituents...and you have tended to the needs of the handicapped."

Kolson thanked Ward 4 Councillor Michael D'Amico for his hard work on several development issues, such as the Quarry Hills golf course and the proposed hotel complex development.

He noted Ward 5 Councillor Stephen Durkin's collaborative efforts with the MDC and the EPA as well as with the mayor to address the problems along Wollaston Boulevard.

Councillor-at-large Timothy Cahill is "the champion of the finance committee," said Kolson. "He makes sure we have funds to guide us to the 21st century and makes sure we have sound economic policies."

Kolson thanked Councillor-at-large Francis McCauley, a former mayor and school committee member, for his leadership regarding Quincy Hospital. "Anyone with a name on a building would vote carefully," he said, referring to the addition named in McCauley's honor. "You have a strong sense of commitment, and Jeff [Doran] and his team appreciate your efforts."

As for Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymond, Kolson noted his work to see the redevelopment of Washington Street near the shipyard as well as his efforts to establish a community policing program in the city. "You've done an outstanding job and should be applauded."

Ward 3 Councillor Patrick McDermott also has demonstrated a collaborative effort in working with the community in addressing the largest proposed development project in the city. Kolson said he had shown leadership in formulating coalitions regarding environmental issues as well as development issues in the downtown area.

Councillor-at-large Paul Harold also received kudos as chairman of the oversight committee and his work regarding a second cable provider. A former state senator and city councillor, Harold also has introduced many international visitors to the city too.

"Myself, I've been a wonderful city councillor," said Kolson amid laughter. "The first thing I learned was to not take myself too seriously, but to take what I do very seriously."

He said during the past year he has worked in securing seawall work in Ward 1 which encompasses most of Quincy's 28 miles of coastline, supported good development and safety in the schools and in the community.

in Mayor James Sheets' mid-term address Monday," said Keating. "There will be more emphasis on that."

"And we must continue to work strongly against drug abuse. I've been talking with Lieutenant Detective Brooks about focusing on major dealers. It takes a lot of manpower and money, which are limited, and a lot of patience."

"I recognize these major efforts take time. It could take years, but nevertheless it should be one of our major focus points."

"When the mayor mentioned these issues, he hit home with our priorities as well," he added. Rae Cunningham already has a working relationship with Police Chief Thomas Franc, he said.

state police headquarters in Framingham, will head the state police contingent attached to the district attorney's office.

"As you can see, this team of leaders brings a lot of experience," said Keating. "It's a blend of old and new."

"I am excited with all the appointments," he continued. "We've kept great stability in the Superior Court. Of the 17 assistants, I've kept 14 who are working on the most serious cases, and I have brought in some new leadership."

"When people voted Nov. 3 for change, that was something I was serious about during the campaign. I am working very hard with the ongoing concern of domestic violence and child abuse issues, as mentioned

McCauley, Harold Elected To Hospital Board

The City Council unanimously elected Councillors Francis X. McCauley and Paul Harold to the board of supervisors of Quincy Hospital.

The council also unanimously elected city auditor Robert Roy and William M.

Mahoney Retiring From School Post

John (Butch) Mahoney, Social Health Coordinator for the Quincy Public Schools for nearly 27 years, is retiring.

Mahoney, who is 63, submitted his request for retirement to the School Committee to be effective tomorrow (Friday).

He has been the Social Health Coordinator since August, 1972 during which time he has built a fair but no-nonsense reputation in dealing with students with problems.

He has dealt mainly with drug prevention and education, treatment and rehabilitation, and future detection. His immediate plan for retirement is to stay busy writing a book.

"I am going to write a book on what I think education should be all about," he says. "I bought a computer and I'm ready to start."

Mahoney, a Quincy resident, was an outstanding football player at North Quincy High School, which he graduated in 1953, and later at American International College. He played for the then Boston Patriots in 1961.

He was voted into both the Quincy-North Quincy and AIC football Halls of Fame.

REAL ESTATE

Scott Buffington Joins Flynn And Co.

Daniel Flynn and Co. is pleased to announce the addition of real estate broker Scott Buffington to its commercial brokerage team.

Buffington brings more than a decade of commercial sales and leasing experience to the Quincy-based firm.

Buffington will focus on converting property listings into property sales by connecting the potential buyers with the right available real estate, and will also take an active role in increasing the firm's number of exclusive listings.

Company CEO Dan Flynn said he's confident that Buffington's experience will be a valuable resource to the firm.

"Scott's background in industrial warehouse sales will increase the depth of our commercial sales capabilities. We are certainly a more well-rounded sales team with Scott on board," Flynn said.

Daniel J. Flynn is a full service real estate firm specializing in commercial sales and leasing, residential real estate and real estate auctions.

South Shore Realtors Assn. Honored For Community Service

The South Shore Association of Realtors and its community service committee were honored with the Silver Award for projects participated in between Sept. 1, 1997 and August 1, 1998. The plaque was presented to Joanne Condon Walsh, Association President, at the Massachusetts Association of Realtors state directors meeting in Framingham.

The South Shore Association was recognized for its many accomplishments in the field of community service, especially in the areas of its continued commitment in the fight against breast cancer. Members of the board participated in the annual breast cancer walk last October and raised over $600.

Another annual event is the Adopt-A-Family and Friends of the Homeless programs. Thirty-three firms provided new clothing and toys to benefit St. Boniface's in Quincy and outer clothing of hats, mittens, scarves, etc., to benefit the Friends of the Homeless program in Weymouth.

Each year, the board helps decorate birdhouses which support Habitat for Humanity at the annual Birdhouse show and Auction. Over 20 birdhouses were donated and two were among the finalists in the judging. Habitat netted an estimated $17,000 from all the birdhouse which went directly towards building affordable housing for low-income families. In addition to the birdhouses, members participated in "The House That Jill Built" project in Quincy.

The South Shore Association of Realtors is one of more than 1,800 boards of Realtors nationwide that comprise the National Association of Realtors, the nation's largest trade association.

Realtors To Hold License Renewal Seminar

the help of the sponsors, volunteers, city departments and the First Night coordinating committee that put forth extra effort each year to assure that the event runs smoothly. He extended special thanks to Mayor James Sheets and the Police Department, both of whom were essential to the night's success. Cheney estimates that over 500 people contributed to making this New Year Celebration a success.

"After coordinating the event for the past seven years, we have a good idea what the people of Quincy want in a First Night and what it takes to give it to them," he said.

To assure next year's success, Cheney and his committee have already started planning additions for the millennium celebration.

He says that he has booked the fireworks and laser light show and is currently looking to increase the space available, the size and location of the event, and to add more events and performances that allow for audience participation.

He also intends to start selling admission buttons and distributing programs earlier.

However, if this year's achievement is any indication, Cheney hardly needs to worry about next year's success.

"This is the seventh year that we've had no police involvement - no arrests, no one taken into protective custody, no tickets issued. Hopefully, next year will go the same way. It's great to provide a drug and alcohol-free alternative to people on New Year's," he said.

"First Night Quincy was a safe and spectacular event this year and I can't wait to make it an even more safe and spectacular event next year."

Presidents Take Unbeaten Streak On The Road

By CHARLES ROSS

With a 3-0-1 record, the Quincy High School hockey team embarks this week on a 5-game road trip that includes stops in top-rated Silver Lake (Wednesday night) and Falmouth (Saturday 7:30 p.m.).

Quincy has been led so far by the goaltending tandem of tri-captain Jeff Langille and Ryan Kerer. The Presidents will hit the road without one of their other tri-captains as junior center Scott Mattson suffered a broken hand and will miss a few weeks.

Coach Bob Sylvia said Mattson's loss means "some of our younger players will have to step up and take some of the load."

While Quincy has a large number of returning players from last year's tourney team, they do have a lot of underclassmen, including freshmen that are playing on the varsity.

The two other captains for the Quincy icemen are center Joe Vallantini and defenseman Jake Flemming.

Coach Sylvia, in his 33rd season behind the Quincy bench, said he does not feel that the road trip in high school hockey is a big deal.

"All of these kids have skated at the rinks we play in from youth hockey on up, the thing that helps us on the road is to have as many Quincy fans come to the games to support us."

The Old Colony League is again loaded with several teams that will have their eyes on post season play, including Quincy and North Quincy. Coach Sylvia put it this way: "On any night in the OCL, if you don't come ready to play, you're going to get beaten."

The Presidents return to the Quincy Youth Hockey Arena on Jan. 20 when they host North Quincy for the first of their two meetings of the season.

Raiders Drop OT Decision To Milton

The North Quincy boys' basketball team got close, but could not pull off an upset against a 5-1 Milton team last Saturday night dropping a 53-46 decision in overtime to the Wildcats.

North, which has played great defensive ball all season long, were led by junior forward Matt McCann's 14 points, junior guard Phil McGillicuddy's 12 and 8 points and 5 assists from Adam Woo to knot the game at 39 at the end of regulation.

North's inexperienced squad and its early season trouble finding the scoring touch led to their downfall as the Wildcats took command in the extra period scoring 16 points to North's

BOYS' BASKETBALL

7. Milton turned a couple of turnovers in OT into points.

North Coach Ted Stevenson had high praise for his squad for the great effort against a Milton team which is a perennial post season tourney participant and past state champions.

"The effort has been outstanding from this team in every game, our defense has held most teams to under 50 points which speaks well of the team", Stevenson said. "Every game, we get better and better as this young team feels more comfortable on the floor and I think that when teams get around to playing us the second time in the schedule, they will see a much better North Quincy team."

The Red Raiders played a tough Taunton team recently and came up on the short end of a 58-48 score. North Quincy trailed by as many as 18 at one point, but could get no closer than 5. Senior Frank McNamara had 12 in that game, Matt McCann 8, Phil McGillicuddy and sophomore guard Joe Holleran each had 7 in the game.

North Quincy plays host to Bridgewater-Raynham this Friday night at 7 p.m.

North Freshmen Fall To 1-3

The North Quincy Freshmen boys' basketball team suffered two losses in recent action to drop their season record to 1-3.

A visit to Boston English showed the freshmen Raiders the value of defense and ball control. The first half was very even with no more than a two-point difference between the two teams for the first seven minutes. English put on a 10-2 run to pull ahead 24-14 with 4:35 remaining. The Raiders managed to narrow the lead to three, 30-27 on three baskets by Wayne Moynihan, as the first half ended.

Jon O'Connell's three-point play tied the score at 30 in the opening moments of the second half. With 10 minutes to go, English's full court pressure and offensive rebounding began to wear the Raiders down. Turnovers and second chance baskets proved too much for the Raiders to overcome as English pulled away and cruised to a 86-52 victory.

Moynihan lead the Raiders with 13 points to go with his three steals. O'Connell added 11 and Matt Donovan 6 points in the losing effort. Sean Ginty and Eric Stanton led North rebounders.

Maybe it was the cold gym or the New Year's Eve morning start time, but the freshmen Raiders never seemed in the game, visiting Taunton. After an early 7-2 lead by North, the Tigers went on a 12-0 run, primarily fueled by Raider turnovers. North Quincy cut the lead to 5, 26-21 by half-time but never found the second half spark as Taunton pulled away to the 61-39 final.

Leo Ahern and Charlie Vidoli's hustle were some of the few bright spots for North as were Mike Haines's 5 rebounds and Adam O'Hara's 6 rebounds and two blocked shots.

North travels to Bridgewater-Raynham this Friday for a 3:30 tip-off.

QUINCY HIGH SCHOOL boys' basketball team recently attended a drill session with Boston Celtics President and Head Coach Rick Pitino. Quincy Boys' Hoop Attend Celtics Coaching Clinic

The men's basketball team from Quincy High School recently tipped off the 1998-99 season during an inspirational drill session with Boston Celtics President and Head Coach Rick Pitino.

Forty local high school teams joined Pitino, the entire Celtics coaching staff, WNBA stars Nykesha Sales and Cindy Blodgett and former Celtics great Jo Jo White at the sixth annual Boston Celtics/Red Auerbach Youth Foundation Basketball Clinic. The event was held at the Red Auerbach gymnasium at Brandeis University.

Pitino, his staff and WNBA stars invited students onto the practice court at Brandeis University in Waltham and led a comprehensive basketball clinic featuring warm-ups, practice drills and coaching techniques of a professional NBA team. Students received complimentary lunch and a Celtics/Red Auerbach Youth Foundation T-shirt. Participating coaches received assorted Gatorade coaching materials and a Celtics clipboard.

"The Celtics organization feels strongly about having a positive influence on high school basketball programs in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts," Pitino said.

"Learning the way things are done in the NBA will demonstrate to these kids that only hard work and persistence will enable them to achieve their dreams. Hopefully, initiatives like this will help instill in them the drive and motivation necessary to achieve success at any level."

The Boston Celtics and Red Auerbach Youth Foundation teamed up with the Massachusetts Basketball Coaches Association and Gatorade to host the event. An invitation was extended to every high school varsity basketball team in the state. Twenty-seven women's teams and 14 men's teams participated in the clinic.

Quincy Volleyball Wins Gold

The Massachusetts Interscholastic Athletic Association has named the Quincy High School Girls Volleyball Program a Gold Medal Winner for outstanding overall academic achievement during the volleyball season.

As a varsity team, the girls maintained a 3.5 grade point average, which qualified them for this award.

The team features four students currently ranked in the top 10 of their respective classes and seven members of the National Honor Society.

The team was also recognized by the Pilgrim Conference with the Team Sportsmanship Award. The team was led by Pilgrim Conference All-Star Jacqui Niosi and Co-captain Liz Ashworth. Other team members include: Sara Ewen, Connie Wong, Michelle Catrambone, Tabitha McLellan (Co-captain), Caitlin Nichol, Colleen Nichol, Meaghan Connolly, Christina Keenan, Llana Saxe and Nini Niamkey. Nina was also selected for the individual Team Sportsmanship Award.

Falcons Down Dedham, Dorchester

Quincy Youth Hockey Squirt A "Falcons" posted two wins and a tie in recent action.

The Falcons shut out Neponset 6-0 behind the outstanding goaltending of Frankie Sorrento.

Pat Devlin scored first for Quincy assisted by Mike MacPherson. Shortly after that, Matt Giordani netted a goal assisted by Brendan Mulcahy. Craig Calley lifted one into the right top corner thanks to an assist by McKeon.

Great backchecking by Sievie Bythrow and Glen Gibbons helped keep the Dorchester offense off balance.

Mike Giordani added a goal unassisted. The final score came when Mike McKeon put the puck in the net with an assist from Chris Rooney.

The defense played hard throughout the game. Paul Fasoli, Ray Marchand, Mike MacPherson, Dan Poggi and Chris Rooney played hard aggressive hockey.

In other games, Quincy defeated Dedham and tied South Boston.

In the Falcons' 2-1 win over Dedham, the team brought a total team effort to the game played in Hyde Park.

In the first period, Pat Devlin scored first for Quincy, assisted by Chris Rooney.

Team captain Mike McKeon scored Quincy's second goal. Devlin assisted for his second point of the game. Craig Calley, Brendan Mulcahy and Matt Tobin played a great game constantly putting pressure on the Dedham forwards.

Another key was the back-checking of the Giordani brothers, Matt and Mike, and the hard work of Stevie Bythrow and Glen Gibbons.

The defense turned in a solid performance, with solid play by Jonathan Conso, Paul Fasoli, Mike MacPherson, Ray Marchand, Dan Poggi and Chris Rooney.

Netminder Frankie Sorrento was superb between the pipes, making clutch saves throughout the game and robbing and frustrating Dedham shooters.

Quincy and South Boston skated to a 2-2 tie. Mike McKeon and Glen Gibbons scored for the Falcons. Assisting were Matt Giordani and Brendan Mulcahy.

SCOTT DEWARE

*A Thought
For The Week'BE A GOOD FORGETTER'

(Author Unknown)
Be a good forgetter. Life is too short to remember that which prevents one from doing his best. "Forgetting the things that are behind, I press forward," said a brave old man in the first century. Yes, the successful man forgets... He knows the past is irrevocable. He lets the dead bury its dead. He is running a race. He cannot afford to look behind. His eye is on the winning post. The magnanimous man forgets. He is too busy to let little things disturb him. He forgets too quickly, and forgets easily. If any man does him wrong, he forgets sweet... It is only the small man who cherishes a low revenge. So, be a good forgetter. Business dictates it, and success demands it...

Granted, it is difficult to empty our hearts and minds of hurt. Yet forgiveness is the constructive answer to hurts. It alone produces wholeness. It is the answer because it alone heals. True forgiveness means not only saying something but being something. It means that we definitely assume a new attitude toward a person. When attitude is changed, it will not be long before emotion is changed also; and when attitude and emotion have both changed, then and only then, have we truly forgiven... FORGIVENESS BLESSES NOT ONLY HIM WHO RECEIVES IT, BUT ALSO THE PERSON WHO GIVES IT.

Your Horoscope by Natasha

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Money matters are favored. Seek out financial advisers and look for ways to invest for future profit. Your charisma sweeps others along this weekend.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) After a heart-to-heart chat with a confidante, you feel much better. Don't be afraid to mix business with pleasure later in the week. Your success is assured.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Although you're making headway with big-wigs, don't push it. The rather unorthodox plan you have in mind won't go over well. The weekend promises some social surprises.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A minor problem you've been experiencing on the home front reaches a satisfactory resolution. Couples need some time along to renew romance over the weekend. Be sure to follow up on this.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) It's not like you to pay attention to idle gossip, especially such vicious fare as you've been hearing. Put this behind you. Concentrate, instead, on tasks at hand.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) This is the week to feel free to promote your ideas. Your charisma and magnetic charm are highlighted. There's a bit of confusion this weekend over domestic disputes.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) This isn't a week for you to take unnecessary risks. Your judgment and intuition are sharp, so follow your gut instincts. A happy missive arrives over the weekend.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) You are on a high with your communication skills. This comes in handy since you find you must rearrange an appointment. Good news comes your way this weekend.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) The stars favor anything of a literary nature this week. Thus, projects involving research are favored. Someone you're counting on will disappoint you, but this is for a good reason.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) While you shouldn't be lured into taking financial risks, you can still accomplish much. Leisure and romance highlight the latter part of the week. Put aside work worries over the weekend.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Your business acumen comes to the fore as you found yourself dealing with some shady, evasive types. Do some inquiring about these people. What you learn is invaluable in the long run.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) The loan you seek for that certain special project is forthcoming. However, be realistic and don't ask for more than you can repay comfortably. This weekend, romance simmers.

Crime Watch

How To Stop Car Thieves

The Basic Prevention Policy

- Never leave your car running or the keys in the ignition when you're away from it, even for just a minute.
- Always roll up the windows and lock the car, even if it's in front of your home.
- Never leave valuables in plain view, even if your car is locked. Put them in the trunk or at least out of sight. Buy radios, tape and CD players that can be removed and locked in the trunk.
- Park in busy, well-lighted areas.
- Carry the registration and insurance card with you. Don't leave personal identification documents or credit cards in your vehicle.
- When you pay to park in a lot or garage, leave just the ignition key with the attendant. Make sure no personal information is attached. Do the same when you take your car for repairs.

Add Extra Protection

- Etch the Vehicle Identification Number (VIN) on the windows. This helps discourage professional thieves who have to either remove or replace etched glass before selling the car. Copy the VIN and your license plate number and keep it in a safe place. If your vehicle is stolen, the police need this information.
- Install a mechanical locking device -- commonly called clubs, collars or j-bars -- that lock to the steering wheel, column or brake to prevent the wheel from being turned more than a few degrees. And don't forget to use it.
- If you live in a high-theft area investigate auto security devices. You may get a discount on your auto insurance.

Beware Of The 'Bump and Rob' Scheme

- It works like this: A car, usually with a driver and at least one passenger, rear-ends or "bumps" you in traffic. You get out to check the damage. The driver or one of the passengers jumps in your car and drives off.
- If you're bumped by another car, look around before you get out. Make sure there are other cars around, check out the car the car that's rear-ended you and who's in it. If the situation makes you uneasy, stay in your car and insist on moving to a police station or busy well-lighted area to exchange information.

BLOWING COLD AIR

Even on the coldest of days, the temperature of the air pouring from your vehicle's floor register should reach at least 120 to 130 degrees F. If not, it may be due to an accumulation of rust and sediment in the heater core that has reduced its efficiency. Before thinking of replacing it, try having the cooling system flushed. At the same time, the engine thermostat should be replaced. Aside from clogging the heater core and compromising its ability to heat the car's interior, failure to drain and flush the car's cooling system regularly (every three years) also causes antifreeze to lose its rust-inhibiting properties and ability to prevent corrosion. This can lead to a clogged radiator.

HINT: If the heat in your vehicle is not working, check to see if the fan is blowing.

Romano To Return To Court On Murder Charge

Joseph Romano, 41, of Quincy was scheduled to return to Quincy District Court today (Thursday) for a status report on charges of murdering his wife, Katherine Leonard Romano, 39, who was reported missing Sept. 29 by her father.

Romano pleaded innocent at his court arraignment last Thursday and was ordered held in lieu of $50,000 bail.

At the arraignment, District Attorney Jeffrey Locke told the court that investigators believe Romano killed his wife either Sept. 27 or Sept. 28 and dismembered her body with a heavy-duty saw he had borrowed from a neighbor.

Investigators allege Romano then placed the body parts in trash bags for trash collection day and helped load the bags onto the truck Sept. 28. The bags are believed to have been incinerated.

For three months, Quincy and state police detectives interviewed dozens of people and searched for evidence regarding Mrs. Romano's disappearance.

Their investigation took them to the Scituate wastewater treatment plant where Romano had worked briefly and to Plymouth to property owned by Romano's family and to a Bourne landfill.

The case broke open when the wife of the neighbor who loaned Romano the saw telephoned police about her suspicions.

Locke said bone fragments and human tissue were found on the housing and blade guard of the saw. The blade itself had been replaced, investigators said.

They then were able to compare blood and DNA samples found in the victim's home.

According to relatives, Mrs. Romano had given her husband an ultimatum to move out of the Houghs Neck home they shared by Sept. 30. Their 2-year-old son, Bruno, now is living out of state with a relative of his mother.

Lt. David Schofield this week discounted published reports that the Romano home had been burglarized while the defendant was being arraigned. Schofield said police, armed with a no-knock warrant, broke into the rear door of the house to arrest Romano. He said personal items belonging to Mrs. Romano were removed from the house by her family.

Another addition, designed by the late Quincy architect Paul Coletti, was constructed in 1938 as part of the Works Progress Administration, said McLaughlin.

Hemphill said he is targeting the end of 1999 for completion of the construction. Sheets added he wants to have dedication ceremonies held in early 2000 in celebration of the millennium.

During his mid-term address to the City Council Monday, Sheets said the new library would be one of quality and beauty, a library for the 21st century.

"We look now and see the foundation for the new addition. This concrete is to be built upon with steel, symbolic of the strength of our dreams" and the results that can be achieved.

"Our generation knows this dream is coming true. Future generations will know we kept faith with Quincy's historical richness and educational needs," he said.

In addition to two bond issues Quincy issued for the library construction, the state's Board of Library Commissioners and the Massachusetts Historical Commission have provided funds for the project.

Other participants in the project include Mary Smith Associates of Quincy, which will design the landscaping; Weidinger Associates Inc. Of Cambridge, which provided the structural engineering, and SAR Engineering of Quincy, which did the mechanical and electrical engineering.

Preservation Technology Associates of Boston provided consultation for historic preservation.

Bellotti Takes Over As Sheriff Community Corrections Center Will Open Here In March

By MARILYN JACKSON

Michael Bellotti, the new 35-year-old Norfolk County sheriff, has a lot on his plate.

The former three-term state legislator, elected in a tough battle against Sheriff Jack Flood, was formally sworn into office last week.

Jack McCarthy of Norwood, chief of staff for Secretary of State William Galvin, administered the oath of office at 6 a.m. Jan. 6 at the Norfolk County jail's roll call room.

Bellotti's father, Francis X. Bellotti, former state attorney general and lieutenant governor, swore his son again into office in ceremonies held Jan. 7 at the Lantana in Randolph.

One of his first orders of business was to name Courtney Cahill of Quincy as a special sheriff. Altogether there are about 385 sheriff department employees, including about a dozen who work part-time. Cahill had been an assistant district attorney in Norfolk County.

"Right now, I'm revising the budget, trying to get a handle on the exact amount that has been budgeted for this office," said Bellotti.

"During the campaign, Flood said the [operating] budget was between $30 million and $33 million. But capital expenditures are included in there that refer to some new prison expansion," he said.

"I think the budget is about $25 million to $30 million."

Bellotti is proceeding with Flood's initiative to establish a community corrections center in Quincy and is looking into adding two modular units at the Dedham House of Correction, he said this week.

Inmates are renovating the Quincy facility, located at 14 Revere Road, which is scheduled to open in March.

Bellotti said in lieu of incarceration, between 100 and 200 non-violent offenders will be required to attend day treatment programs as part of their court-ordered community sanctions. These are individuals who may be required to wear an electronic bracelet, he said.

Using a $700,000 grant

to establish the facility, Bellotti said the funds help pay for vendor contracts, drug and alcohol testing, Alcoholics Anonymous meetings and the bracelet or electronic incarceration program.

At the Dedham House of Correction, Bellotti would like to add a couple of modular units, linked by breezeways to the main facility, in order to handle an additional 100 to 120 inmates. The units would be erected about 100 yards from the Dedham Alternative Correction Center which is next to the jail.

All totaled, there are 660 inmates under the sheriff's jurisdiction. At the Braintree alternative center, there are 42 inmates, 27 men and 15 women. The Dedham alternative center houses 50 inmates

Paid Speakers Could Risk Perjury Harold Asks 'Truth' Oath At Council Meetings

By MARILYN JACKSON

Councillor-at-large Paul Harold has drafted new language to require individuals who provide information to the City Council to testify truthfully under penalty of perjury.

Harold was prompted to seek the tougher language added to the council's rules after learning that an attorney representing shipyard owner Sotiris Emmanouil had allegedly misrepresented the deliberations of the U.S. Maritime Administration (MARAD) regarding pledged guarantees.

According to Harold, the attorney had stated that MARAD had already reviewed and approved the application of the Massachusetts Heavy Industries which proposes to build six tankers for $40 million.

After the attorney had met with the City Council, Harold learned MARAD had not approved the application of Internare Navigation, SA, for the loan guarantees nor had it determined the economic soundness of the proposed transaction, in part because so much time had elapsed since it was first proposed.

Later, the attorney apologized for his misstatement and explained he had meant that MARAD had received all the materials needed to help the agency decide about the loan guarantees.

But Harold said that those remarks were "deliberate misrepresentations."

Meanwhile, Mayor James Sheets remains confident that the federal government will issue the guarantees and that the first keel will be laid at the shipyard this spring.

At Monday's City Council rules committee meeting,

Brian McNamee Candidate For Ward 6 Council Seat

Brian McNamee of Billings Rd., North Quincy, has announced he will run a second time for the Ward 6 City Council Seat.

McNamee, 42, an accountant and management consultant, has remained steadfast in his commitment to representing Ward 6 since his loss in 1997.

"My candidacy represents an effort to re-introduce dedicated, ward-based representation in providing constituent services," he said.

McNamee holds a Bachelor of Arts degree from Villanova University as a government major and a Master's Degree in Business Administration from the University of Massachusetts at Boston. He is a two-time recipient of the University of Massachusetts at Boston MBA award for Distinguished Service for the years 1986 and 1991.

He is a Corporate Advisory Board Member for the College of Management at the University of Massachusetts at Boston and is a Technical Advisory Board Member for Boston Fund Services, Inc. He is also a former president of the University of Massachusetts at Boston MBA Association. McNamee is also a Lifetime Voting Member of the Irish Cultural Center and is a charity fund raiser.

Chief among McNamee's concerns he said are improving our understanding of the impact of development as it relates to open space preservation, traffic, and the quality of life in Ward 6.

"He advocates an Economic Development Council for North Quincy and continuation of strong efforts to clean Wollaston Beach.

"I am also concerned that the city exercise fiscal restraint so as to limit further increases to residential and commercial tax rates," he said.

"I view myself as a strong neighborhood guy with an intense interest in the North end of the City. Many have urged me to avoid the 'neighborhood guy' stuff because often that's the guy who didn't show up to paint the fence. I can assure you, if I say I'm going to paint the fence, I'll paint the fence."

McNamee, who is 42, and his wife, the former Donna Avallone, are parents of a daughter, Maura, 8.

A kick-off event will be held Sunday, Jan. 24 at Pat Flannagan's in the Parkway from 2 to 5 p.m.

3 Meetings A Month Proposed For Council

After an hour's discussion Monday, the rules committee of the City Council agreed to present to the other council members a proposal to schedule committee meetings and public hearings on the second Monday of the month so that the council can focus its attention to business at hand on the first and third Mondays.

Streamlining council business has occupied the rules committee's attention for three separate nights in an effort to conduct business more efficiently and allow the public to have its say during public hearings.

Furthermore, the committee agreed to recommend that any committee business scheduled prior to a council meeting be concluded by 7:15 p.m. or continued to another date so that council deliberations won't be disrupted.

Exceptions could be made by council vote if a matter needed to be acted upon within a certain time period, the rules committee agreed.

An earlier proposal to not schedule council meetings on the eve of an election or during Jewish holidays was incorporated into the newly proposed Council procedure rules.

Monday night's discussion focused on the lack of communication between the Council president and the councilors in scheduling various committee hearings without anticipating how much time would be needed.

For example, the finance committee or the oversight committee may need more than 10 or 20 minutes to discuss matters before it. Next week, the oversight committee has a tentatively scheduled meeting regarding cable television, and 10 minutes may not be sufficient, suggested Ward 2 Councilor Daniel Raymond, who first proposed the reorganization of the Council.

Likewise, finance committee matters may require more than an hour to discuss fully, Raymond noted.

An initial proposal to establish a set time for an open forum before a Council or committee meeting was withdrawn but may be introduced as an amendment to the rules when the full Council discusses its procedures at its next meeting.

Councilor-at-Large Paul Harold repeated Monday that there was no need to change council rules because scheduling additional meetings is already permissible under the existing rules, he said.

"For the three years we have been sitting together, nothing has changed," said a frustrated Raymond who noted that committee hearings often are sandwiched in between agenda items of the regular council meeting or are not convened at the scheduled time.

"We're all busy," said Raymond, adding that it would be helpful if all councilors realize that the first and third Monday nights are reserved for council meetings and the second Monday of the month is "lopped off" for committee meetings.

Ward 3 Councilor Patrick McDermott said he thought some of the smaller committees, such as the Downtown Committee, could meet on a Tuesday morning or on a late afternoon and not interfere with the Monday meeting schedule.

He also questioned whether the scheduling issue should be debated only by members of the rules committee who make a recommendation to the full council, rather than including all council members during the initial discussions.

Ward 5 Councilor Stephen Durkin, a member of the rules committee, did not attend Monday's meeting.

In another committee matter, members agreed to recommend that any matters to be discussed by a committee should first be submitted to the city council before it is referred to a committee.

Raymond said it was critically important that every councilor, whether a committee member or not, have an opportunity to participate in the discussion.

At the end of the meeting, Raymond noted the work the committee had accomplished in an effort to streamline council business. Ward 4 Councilor Michael D'Amico, chairman of the rules committee, pointed out that the hearing had been convened on the second Monday of the month.

Ward 4 Crime Watch Meeting Jan. 20

In conjunction with the Quincy Police Department, Ward 4 Councilor Michael D'Amico will conduct a session of the Ward 4 Crime Watch Wednesday, Jan. 20 at 7 p.m. at the Ward 4

Community Center, 100 Brooks Ave., South Quincy.

The meeting will address reported and attempted break-ins in the West Street area. The new community policing division will be introduced and Crime Prevention Officer Robert Hanna will make a presentation.

D'Amico also announces working traffic signals are being placed at West, Center and Common Sts. The intersection is currently under the control of blinking lights.

Why Live With Headaches?

Headaches are a sign that something's wrong. Because they are so common, some people think headaches are normal.

Misalignments of the spinal bones in the neck and upper back are a common cause of many kinds of headaches. These misalignments can be caused by falls, car accidents, sport injuries, repetitive motion (computer keyboarding), stress...

Chiropractic adjustments help correct the underlying structural cause in turn relieving painful symptoms.

Board Approves Liquid Hydrogen Storage Increase

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

The License Board voted unanimously to permit Twin Rivers Technologies Manufacturing Company to modify their storage permit and increase their liquid hydrogen.

The board approved the modification to reduce the liquid flammable storage from 153,000 gallons to 33,000. The modification will eliminate 150,000 gallons of liquid methanol and install 30,000 gallons of liquid hydrogen for the manufacturing of natural fats and oil products.

Paul Angelico, senior vice president of Twin Rivers told the board that in order to produce the large amount of fatty acids which go into the making of soaps and detergents, hydrogen gas is used to make the product more stable.

He said the added storage of the hydrogen gas will result in a decrease in deliveries with the trailers travelling to the farthest end of the plant with the least amount of traffic.

Fire Chief Thomas Gorman said hydrogen gas is one of the "lightest gasses in the he world" and said instead of the plant being full of trailers parked under the Fore River Bridge, that the added storage would eliminate the traffic.

He said more storage would be the "safest way to go" and added that the company has a "state of the art" monitoring system.

He said however, if he was "not satisfied" with they way the extra storage is handled, that the company "would be back before the board."

Gorman said the company plans a "training session" with the fire department so in a crisis, the department would "handle it in a proper manner."

Bar Association, DOVE Receive Grants For Legal Services

The Massachusetts Bar Foundation has granted funding for several local programs that offer law-related services, including civil legal assistant for low-income and underrepresented residents, primarily woman and children.

Funds for the grants are generated by the Interest on Lawyer's Trust Accounts," or IOLTA program.

Local recipients are:

Bar Association of Norfolk County, located in Quincy, $20,000 to sponsor monthly evening legal clinics in Norfolk courthouse.

The Bar Association also received $11,000 for Probate and Family Court Pro Bono to implement a pro bono program at the Dedham Probate and Family Court to represent pro se litigants on the legal issues of divorce, custody, modifications, visitation rights and contempt.

DOVE, Inc. was awarded $12,000 for the legal advocacy program to provide for partial funding of a part-time legal advocate who offers legal counseling and court accompaniment and who will also coordinate a monthly series of legal workshops for shelter residents.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL.

On January 14, 1794, Congress ratified the peace treaty between Britain and the U.S., ending the Revolutionary War ... January 16, 1883, the Pendleton Act was passed, reforming civil service ... January 12, 1939, President Franklin Roosevelt asked for another hike in the defense budget ... January 17, 1950, masked bandits robbed Brink's, Inc.'s Boston express office of $2.8 million of which $1.2 million was in cash ... January 11 and 15, 1973, five of the seven defendants in the Watergate break-in trial pleaded guilty ... January 17, 1977, convicted murderer Gary Gilmore was executed by a Utah firing squad in the first exercise of capital punishment in the U.S. since 1967 ... January 17, 1991, the U.S. and its allies launched a devastating attack on Iraq from the air in their efforts to free Kuwait ... January 17, 1994, a pre-dawn earthquake struck the Los Angeles area, claiming 61 lives and causing significant damage ... January 17, 1995, a bill to end Congress' exemption from federal labor laws, the first in a series of measures in the Republican's "Contract With America," cleared Congress ... January 17, 1997, Rep. Jim McDermott (D-Wash.) resigned from the House Ethics Committee, following allegations that he had illegally leaked to the press a tape recording of a phone conversation among Speaker Newt Gingrich (R-Ga.) and other GOP leaders in December during which they discussed how to respond to the committee's December report on Gingrich ... January 17, 1997, the House Ethics Committee considered a report from its counsel, James Cole, concluding that Speaker Gingrich had violated tax laws and lied to the committee; however, members of the committee were unable to agree to these conclusions ... January 17, 1997, the House Ethics Committee, by a 7-1 vote, approved a compromise punishment agreeing to refrain from saying that Gingrich "knew" he had provided inaccurate information to the committee, only that he "should have known"; in return, Gingrich agreed to accept a reprimand and a $300,000 fine to cover the approximate costs of the investigation incurred because of his misrepresentations.

A Quiet Election Year Unless ...

This looks like it will be one of the quietest election years in the city's history.

Unless, of course, something unexpected happens.

Like, for example, Jim Sheets being tapped by his good friend, Gov. Paul Cellucci for a state appointment.

In fact there is some speculation right now that Sheets may be offered an education post by Cellucci.

Or is that just wishful thinking on the part of mayoral hopefuls and ward councillors who would like to move up to at-large seats?

Certainly, if Sheets was offered such a post and thought it one he just couldn't refuse, it would open things up along the local political front like the Titanic hitting that iceberg.

Sheets, a Democrat, developed a friendship with Republicans Cellucci and then Gov. William Weld starting in 1994.

Sheets didn't officially endorse either Cellucci or Scott Harshbarger last year but on a number of occasions on official visits introduced Cellucci as "my friend." And on election day, they were around town together.

It must have helped Cellucci who carried 52 percent of the vote in Quincy, a Democratic stronghold, crucial votes in a close gubernatorial race.

Just think if Sheets did take an appointment instead of running for a sixth term.

It would have a domino effect all up and down the local political landscape, opening up not only the mayor's office but council at-large and ward council seats and probably school committee posts.

If Tim Cahill and Paul Harold ran for mayor it would leave two at-large seats up for grabs. If Dan Raymond ran, Ward 2 would be open.

Council President Peter Kolson and Mike D'Amico would probably go for those two open at-large seats, leaving openings in Ward 1 and Ward 4. Other ward councillors like Pat McDermott and Steve Durkin might get into it, too, opening Ward 3 and Ward 5.

And school committee members like Christine Cedrone, Sean Barry and Linda Stice might make a run for the ward seats or maybe even the at-large.

You'd really need a scorecard to keep track of who was running for what.

But, of course, unexpected things don't happen very often.

But, they do now and then.

MEANWHILE, the lone political hot spot seems to be the Ward 6 city council seat Bruce Ayers will be leaving at the end of the year now that he is the new state representative in the First Norfolk District.

Problem Gambling Program At Quincy Hospital

Quincy Hospital will host the Prevention Institute "Gambling: Just How High Are The Stakes?" from 8 a.m. to noon Wednesday, Feb. 3.

The program will be held at Quincy Hospital, 114 Whitwell St. in conference room A. Cost is $30 per person. Three PDPs and three Social Worker CEUs will be offered.

The program, a joint effort of Mount Auburn Hospital Center for Community Health and the Massachusetts Prevention Center, will focus on defining problem gambling as well as prevention and intervention strategies.

Advance registration is required. To register or for more information, call 888-272-5155

Brian McNamee, who ran two years ago, entered the race this week with an official announcement. He's not only the first official Ward 6 candidate but the first of the election year.

McNamee has remained active in the community since his 1997 run. A campaign kickoff is set for Sunday, Jan. 24 from 2 to 5 p.m. at Pat Flanagan's in the Parkingway.

Maryann Mahony, Ayers' campaign manager in his runs for city council and state representative, is a definite candidate.

"I'm definitely going to run," she says. "I will be making an official announcement later--probably in April."

She is already putting her committee together with Quincy Police Detective Ralph Ames as campaign manager and Frank Mahony, her brother-in-law as treasurer.

Three others have expressed interest in running: Joseph Newton, who was a candidate two years ago; and Tracy Wilson and Sal Giarratani, both of whom have run for school committee.

ANN McLAUGHLIN, director of the Thomas

Crane Library, was among those attending last week's mid-term ceremonies at City Hall.

She smiled appreciatively when Mayor Sheets, noting that work on the addition to the library is underway, commented: "Future generations will know we kept faith with Quincy's historical richness and educational needs."

After listening to the mayor, she returned to the library and found something else to smile about:

A $500 check from Peter and Dora MacDonald of Presidents Lane as a donation to the library building fund.

And with it, this note: "In honor of Mayor Sheets for his wonderful work making Quincy a beautiful city."

JAMES McCORMACK, former Ward councillor and state senator, has been "found" by the committee planning the City Council reunion Thursday, Jan. 21 at the Quincy Neighborhood Club.

He was the only one of the 28 living former councillors, whose address was unknown. He was living in Riva, MD, at the last reunion in 1994 which he attended but since had moved.

The committee, through this column, asked for help in locating him.

And, as it turned out, his niece, Lauren Griffiths lives on Common St. Her husband, Tom, spotted the item and gave Paul Harold McCormack's Naples, Fla. address and phone number. Frank McCauley then made the contact. McCormack is now in the banking field in Florida, says McCauley, and will try to make the reunion.

INCIDENTALLY, Peter Kolson gave McCauley, a Republican, a life-size cut-out of Newt Gingrich for Christmas.

McCauley says he is going to take it to the council reunion and invite everyone to have their picture taken with Newt.

Question: how many will want to?

Of the 37 present and former councillors invited to the reunion, McCauley is the lone Republican.

Scenes From Yesterday

St. John's Catholic Church, Quincy, Mass.

THIS 1915 POSTCARD is a view of St. John's Catholic Church on School Street in Quincy Center. Built in 1853, this was the second Catholic church established in Quincy. St. Mary's in West Quincy was built in 1842. This property was originally used by Christ Church that moved down the street but whose ancient cemetery is just to the right of this view. Through mission churches in Atlantic and Houghs Neck, St. John's aggressively served the growing Catholic population of Quincy in the late 19th century. St. John's still fosters programs of leadership beyond its parish borders.

Dennis Mahoney A Man Of Integrity

Editor, The Quincy Sun:
As the former District Attorney of Norfolk County I would like to commend District Attorney William Keating for his appointment of Dennis Mahoney as First Assistant of his staff.

I first met Dennis Mahoney many years ago when he was in junior high school. Later I appointed him as an Administrator in the District Attorney's Office. When he graduated from law school and became a lawyer, I appointed him as an Assistant District Attorney.

He has dedicated his life as a career prosecutor in the Norfolk District Attorney's Office. He is a man of great integrity and is one of the most honest men I have ever met in my life. We are indeed fortunate in having men like Dennis Mahoney who are willing to give their lives to prosecuting criminals. I am sure he will do an outstanding job for the citizens of Norfolk County in his new position.

Red Cross Expresses Holiday Stocking Generosity Thanks

Editor, The Quincy Sun:
The American Red Cross South Area Office in Quincy would like to express sincere thanks to the members of the community who took part in the Holiday Stocking Program of 1998, for needy children.

We are told these are good times, economically, yet there were still many parents in our community who faced the holiday season with dread, knowing they would not have the financial means to provide a little extra for their children. Made aware of this situation, many, many of you, reached deep down into your pockets, and provided help for those so fortunate. Through the generosity of the community, the American Red Cross was able to provide over 1500 magnificent stockings and gifts to children in our community who otherwise might not have received a Holiday Stocking this year.

Thanks to each and every one of your who made a contribution, because, TOGETHER, we were able to light up the faces of needy children over this holiday period.

Wishing you a very Happy and Healthy 1999.

City Mourns Death Of Henry Faxon

By PAUL HAROLD

Henry M. Faxon, Quincy's "richest man" died at age 85 in his Adams St. home this week. Flags across the city were lowered to half-staff.

Faxon was a major donor, having given the city several playgrounds and parks. He made his money from a real estate company he started in 1885, later organized as the Faxon Trust. In 1888 he founded the Quincy Electric Light and Power. He was a trustee of the Quincy Savings Bank, a member of the Adams Temple and School Fund and a member of the city council from 1900-1901.

The funeral was scheduled for the First Parish Church with burial in Mt. Wollaston Cemetery.

VOTE TO FILL SCHOOL COMMITTEE POST

Mayor Charles Ross called for a convention of the City Council and School Committee to fill the vacancy on the school board caused by the death of member, Mrs. Helen Spenser.

A possible replacement was Dominic Chiminello, a young engineer and lieutenant colonel in the recent war, who was the runner-up for School Committee in the last election.

Chiminello's chances, however, were clouded when women's groups, including the League of Women Voters, called for a woman to replace Mrs. Spenser. They noted that with the loss of Mrs. Spenser, the School Committee would be without a woman member for the first time in a quarter of a century.

REPORT CALLS FOR TWO NEW SCHOOLS, TWO ADDITIONS

The School Committee considered the first phase of a long range plan for school expansion that called for the construction of two new schools.

To ease congestion at the Coddington and Cranch schools, a new school was planned for the area between Furnace Brook Parkway and Newport Ave. A new school at Beechwood Knoll, off Fenno St., would ease the crowding at the Massachusetts Field School.

Additions were recommended for the Wollaston and Atherton Hough Schools. Assistant Supt. Rudolph Loggren made the site recommendations for the committee's consideration.

QUINCY-ISMS

A number of Red Sox players attended the wedding and reception for Sam Mele and Constance Clemens. The wedding was held at Our Lady of Good Counsel Church with the reception at the Fox and Hounds Restaurant. . . Melvin Thorner announced that a mock "PR" election was planned at Woodward School by the Quincy Civic Committee, to familiarize Quincy voters with the Plan E form of voting (under Plan E votes were made with numbers next to the candidate's name rather than the placing of an "x.") . . . Roydon Burke of Adams St. won the first and second prize at the South Shore Camera Club. . . Joseph Fantucchio was elected president of the Quincy-Aragona Association. . . Quincy Artist Featured At South Shore Conservatory

By ELAINE NORTON

"Watercolor and I have always had a special relationship," claims artist Anne Belson whose exhibit Inspirations is featured in South Shore Conservatory's Staircase Gallery from January through the end of February.

Inspirations is an exhibit of small watercolor paintings from Belson's life. Belson, a South Shore Art Center artist, often chooses her subject matter when something she has seen over and over again catches her attention and holds it until she returns to the site to create the scene on paper.

"At other times," she says, "the need to paint takes precedence, and I set out to find a compelling subject. I have to be really excited about the subject. That's a prerequisite for beginning."

She explains the importance of light in her work. She says light is always a factor in what it is about the landscape that attracts her.

"I love to paint when the light is dazzling, making everything sparkle, even if it's under a noontime sun on a hot summer day. Sometimes water, rain or wind alter the nature of the light and almost become the subject of the painting."

The current method Belson uses to create her paintings evolved over time. At one time, she spent a lot of her time underdrawing. But after participating in a week long workshop in which the use of the pencil was forbidden in the first three days, she liked the results so much that she is no longer inclined to pick up a pencil to begin her work.

Belson earned a Bachelor of Arts and Bachelor of Fine Arts from Emmanuel College, and a Master of Education from Boston State College. She has done graduate studies at Boston University School for the Arts and Massachusetts College of Art. She has privately studied both watercolor and portraiture.

"I love the properties of watercolor, especially the way it slides over the surface of smooth paper and the way it leaves a record of the path the brush takes," concludes Belson. "It seems to have the right vocabulary for what I want my work to say."

Belson's paintings have earned accolades in a number of juried shows around New England, most recently in South Shore Art Center's Blue Ribbon Exhibition and New England Watercolor Society's juried art exhibition at the Concord Art Association.

The Staircase Gallery is free and open to the public. Gallery hours are Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Saturdays, 9 a.m. to 12 p.m. South Shore Conservatory is located at One Conservatory Drive in Hingham. For more information, call 781-749-7565, ext. 16.

Harold noted that the city's zoning board of appeals requires anyone testifying before that board be sworn in, and he would like a modified approach taken when the council is deliberating serious matters as the council or as the city's special permit granting authority.

"This would not require everybody to be sworn in," said Harold, "only those who are paid to make a presentation to the city council. It would not be limited to lawyers or engineers; it would be required of anyone who is paid [on behalf of a client or proponent] to influence the council," he said.

The individual would be required to file an appearance form which would include the individual's name, the name and address of the company or person he represents, his own business address and telephone number and his signature, below the following statement:

"I promise and affirm that the statements I make shall be the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth. This is signed under pains of perjury."

Harold suggested that appearance forms be signed and dates for each appearance unless the meeting or hearing is recessed and is a continuation of the previous meeting or hearing.

The city clerk would be responsible to have these appearance forms printed and to have the individuals execute the document, which would be kept on file as part of the public record for at least two years.

Harold said he initially thought the council could mete out sanctions against an individual who deliberately made false representations but subsequently decided that to refer the matter to the district attorney of the Board of Bar Overseers would be more appropriate.

"Hopefully, it won't be taken that far, but these people are not selling used cars. We don't want puffery," said Harold.

He said the appearance form is not meant to apply to the average citizen who wants to comment on an issue, even if he is grossly inaccurate. Those individuals who are paid or otherwise compensated to appear before the city council must be truthful and straightforward, he said.

"The zoning board of appeals has much more formality," said Harold.

"This puts people on notice," added Councilor-at-large Francis X. McCauley. "They've got to be on target and not embellish [in an effort] to gain council support."

"This has a lot of merit," added Ward 4 Councilor Michael D'Amico, chairman of the rules committee. "We are concerned about truthfulness."

The proposed rule change will be referred to the full council and the city solicitor for comments before the committee discusses it further.

Salvation Army Taking Applications For Utilities Help

The Salvation Army is taking applications from Quincy residents for the Good Neighbor Energy Fund.

The state-wide fund, which is administered by the Salvation Army and supported by many utility companies, aims to assist low-income working households who are above the federal guidelines for fuel assistance.

The fund pays up to a maximum of $200 for electricity, gas, and oil bills. Customers can contribute to the fund by making extra payments on their utility bills. Last year, the fund helped over 2,700 families in Massachusetts.

THE EYES HAVE IT

When the "it" is conjunctivitis (the inflammation of the conjunctiva, the delicate membrane lining the eyelids and covering the eye's surface), you may suffer any of the most common symptoms: redness in the whites of the eye and/or the lids, swelling, itching, discharge that forms a crust on the lashes, the feeling of having sand in the eye, and light sensitivity. Allergy, pollution, and other external irritants may cause conjunctivitis; however, it is most often caused by a viral or bacterial infection. Also called "pink eye," infectious conjunctivitis is easily spread through careless eye-hand contact and/or contact with towels and washcloths used by someone with an infection. Bacterial conjunctivitis usually responds well to prescription drops or ointment. Taking care of this inflammation quickly is a good idea - before anyone else in your household inadvertently catches it. At AFFILIATED MEDICAL GROUPS, located at 700 Congress St., Quincy, we listen to your concerns. We are affiliated with Quincy and South Shore Hospitals. Please call at 617-472-2550; office hours by appointment.

P.S. Never attempt to use general antibiotic ointments in the eye; your doctor will prescribe a medication made specifically for ophthalmic use.

Sheltering Coalition Elects Officers, Presents Awards

NEW OFFICERS of the QISC Board of Directors include, from left, Quincy Police Det. Donald Murray, vice president; Rev. Adolph Wismar, pastor of Wollaston Lutheran Church, president; and former Boston Bruin Nevin Markwart, investment counsel with Standish, Ayer and Wood in Boston, treasurer. Missing is Nan O'Neil, an attorney with Murphy, Hesse, Toomey and Lebane, the new board clerk.

BOARD MEMBERS who were elected at the QISC's Annual Meeting and Recognition Dinner include, from left, Robert Chaput, former guest of Father Bill's Place, the city's homeless shelter, which is operated by the QISC; Nevin Markwart, former Boston Bruin and investment counsel with Standish, Ayer and Wood in Boston, board treasurer; James Wells, owner of Abbadesse's in Hingham; Alfred Saluti, Quincy carpenter; and Arthur Connolly, president of South Shore Savings Bank.

HIGHPOINT

Over the last year, we at Congress Group Ventures, the developer of the Highpoint residential community, feel we have prepared a sound, viable plan for the development of our site on Quarry Street. We firmly believe that the Highpoint development will not only be instrumental in the continued economic growth of the City of Quincy, but, more importantly, will be beneficial to the neighborhood, and the City's residents and businesses.

Positive Economic Advantages:

- 1,400 union construction jobs will be created over the next five to seven years.
- 30 to 40 full-time jobs will be generated upon successful completion of the project.
- Approximately $1 million per year to be spent in Quincy and its surrounding communities by project workforce on every day essentials such as food and transportation.
- Privately financed development, without any public funding, subsidies or reimbursement.
- Real estate tax revenue for the City of Quincy, expected to be over $1,400,000 per year, and excise taxes of more than $500,000 per year.

Additional Highpoint Highlights:

- Congress Group Ventures has reduced the number of units in the development from 1,391 luxury apartments and 250 senior residences to 1,116 luxury apartments and 125 senior residences.
- Traffic enhancement measures to Quarry Street along the property and the renovation of 9 intersections will be undertaken.
- A final and complete environmental clean up of the Quarry Street site as required by the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection will be conducted.

You may review the Highpoint plan in greater detail at the Thomas Crane Library. Please visit our Website, currently under construction, at www.highpointquincy.com.

"I believe this project is a blessing for both labor unions and the City of Quincy. Dean Stratouly and his company, Congress Group Ventures, have an excellent reputation among the building trade community throughout the area, developing high quality projects and having demonstrated a long-term commitment to the neighborhoods in which they build."

Tom MacKay
President
Quincy and South Shore Building Trade Council Business Manager
Pipefitters, Local 537, Boston, Mass.

"Congress Group's Highpoint development represents the continued positive progress underway in Quincy. The new development will attract quality residents who are committed to reinvesting in the City, its businesses and its citizens. Highpoint will provide an economic boost and a quality of life that will be felt throughout the community. Everyone stands to benefit for many years to come."

Junior Prosecutors To Attend Training Council Program

Norfolk County District Atty. William Keating and the Massachusetts Criminal Justice Training Council have entered an agreement providing a targeted training program for junior prosecutors.

About two dozen junior prosecutors from at least three counties are expected to attend the Jan. 20 seminar at the Canton campus of the Massachusetts Criminal Justice Training Council.

The first session will focus on the constitutional issues of motor vehicles and residence searches and other topics prosecutors can expect to face in their first trials.

"We are instituting the managerial changes we said we would during the campaign," Keating said. "With a formal training program, we can shorten the learning curve for our district court prosecutors and make ongoing professional development available."

It's an easy load to carry.

Quincy College is very affordable. You can take classes day or night. Full- or part-time. It's a one minute walk from the Quincy Center T. And your quality education will get you a better job or into a four-year school. Register now for Spring classes. Call 1-800-698-1700.

HE WHO HESITATES . . .
When a vehicle hesitates upon acceleration, the problem can escalate from annoying to dangerous if it leads to stalling. In some cases, the problem can be traced to a malfunctioning exhaust-gas-recirculation (EGR) system. The EGR system keeps oxides of nitrogen (air pollutants that form when nitrogen and oxygen combine under high temperature) emissions at an acceptable level by recirculating exhaust gas through the intake manifold and into the combustion chambers. The exhaust gas curtails the formation of oxides of nitrogen by lowering the temperature inside the engine. The EGR should only introduce exhaust gas into the manifold after the engine is hot. If it does so while the engine is cold, it will hesitate and probably stall.
HINT: A malfunctioning EGR can also cause rough idling, hard starting, lack of power, and engine surge at steady driving speed.

QUINCY'S NEWEST BANK, the South Shore Savings Bank, is now open at Quincy Ave. and Southern Artery. Here, Mayor James Sheets officially cuts the ribbon with the help of Frank Lagrotteria, chairman of the bank's Board of Trustees; Ward 2 Councillor Dan Raymond, Arthur R. Connelly, president and chief executive officer; Cong. William Delahunt, State Rep. Ron Mariano and Arthur Sharp, chairman of the bank's Board of Investment.

South Shore Savings Bank Opens Quincy Branch

A traditional ribbon-cutting ceremony signaled the completion of South Shore Savings Bank's new full-service Quincy office at Granite Crossing, Quincy Ave. and Southern Artery.

The branch is now open for business.

Among those sharing ribbon-cutting honors with Arthur R. Connelly, president and chief executive officer were Congressman William Delahunt, State Senator Michael Morrissey; State Rep. Ronald Mariano, Mayor James Sheets, and City Councillor Daniel G. Raymond.

Frank S. Lagrotteria, chairman of the Board of Trustees, and Arthur H. Sharp, chairman of the Board of Investment, represented the Trustees of the Bank.

The two-story, 10,000 square-foot brick building at 370 Quincy Ave. was designed by architect Scott Towne of DRL Associates of Weymouth. MacLeod Brothers of Rockland was the general contractor. A portion of the bank is leased as professional offices.

The new Quincy location replaces the bank's nearby East Braintree office at 372 Quincy Ave., which permanently closed at the end of the business day Jan. 8. Branch manager Peter Collins and the former East Braintree staff relocated to the Granite Crossing office. The two locations are less than a mile apart.

South Shore Savings Bank, which operates under a state charter granted in 1833, has 10 offices in East Bridgewater, Hanover, Weymouth, and Quincy, including an Educational and Training Facility at Weymouth High School.

Two mutual savings banks, South Weymouth Savings Bank and Weymouth Savings Bank combined to create the new South Shore Savings Bank. The occasion marked the end of a friendly rivalry between South Weymouth Savings Bank and Weymouth Savings Bank that had spanned a period of 133 years. It was an event that signaled the brand new beginning of a very old tradition.

SOUTH SHORE SAVINGS Bank's new Quincy branch at Quincy Ave. and Southern Artery. (Quincy Sun Photos/Robert Noble)

An intense transition period successfully blended the unique styles, cultures, and histories of the two individual institutions into a distinct new entity in less than six months. Together, South Weymouth Savings Bank and Weymouth Savings Bank became a force large enough to compete with the big banks on a regional level, yet still small enough to maintain self-direction and a powerful "community bank" identity.

The bank is a member of the FDIC/DIF.

Welch Healthcare Nursing Assistant Program

Welch Healthcare and Retirement Group will sponsor its monthly approved Nursing Assistant Training program from Jan. 18-21 at John Scott House Rehabilitation and Nursing Center, 233 Middle St., Braintree.

Individuals interested in becoming a CNA are encouraged to attend this training free of charge.

CNA's are eligible for employment at all Welch facilities: Bay Path Rehabilitation and Nursing Center in Duxbury, Colonial Rehabilitation and Nursing Center in Weymouth, Hancock Park Rehabilitation and Nursing Center in Quincy, Harbor House Rehabilitation and Nursing Center in Hingham and John Scott House Rehabilitation and Nursing Center in Braintree.

Training programs will continue throughout the remainder of 1999 at other Welch Healthcare locations. For more information, call Dan Cosgrove at (781)843-1860.

mates. Within the next few weeks, Bellotti said he hopes to meet with the Quincy school committee and school superintendent to help implement a "zero tolerance policy" in the schools.

He said the sheriff's department has four canines and two K-9 officers who handle the drug-certified dogs that can ferret out illegal substances. He said the dogs also are used to locate missing persons.

One of the last things Bellotti did as a legislator was to refile a bill, with Rep. John Rogers, chairman of the Judiciary Committee, which would mandate sheriffs to report suspected child abuse that they may observe during a family visit at the jail or at a home visit. Teachers, social workers and health professionals are required to file a verbal report within 24 hours and a written report within 48 hours.

Bellotti said a previously filed bill died in the committee during the last legislative session.

In addition, Bellotti would like to revamp the civil process office and turn it into "a moneymaker for the county."

"We think we can recoup more money for the taxpayers, run the office more efficiently and expand the customer base," said Bellotti.

"We need to market [the services] better. Lawyers haven't looked to this office as a real resource. We want to make sure our office is competitive and useful to them every day," he said.

Bellotti acknowledged that constables in the private sector often are used by lawyers to serve papers on respondents. "We want to professionalize the whole office and more aggressively pursue business in that area. This is a service-oriented business, and we would emphasize that instead of waiting for business to come to us."

Money raised from those fees would help finance the operation of the office in addition to providing funds for DARE and other sheriff's programs.

The City Council is expected to decide at its next meeting Jan. 19 whether to require city residency of future city clerks and the city council clerk of committees.

City Clerk Joseph Shea and Jeanne Reardon, the council's clerk of committees, are both longtime Quincy residents.

The measure was proposed Dec. 7 by Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi.

At a meeting of the rules committee Dec. 21, Councillor-at-large Francis X. McCauley and Ward 4 Councillor Michael D'Amico opposed the measure, but the other committee members, Councillors Paul Herold, Stephen Durkin and Patrick McDermott favored the proposal.

The rules committee Monday night agreed to forward the matter to the full council. McCauley reiterated his opposition to the idea and recommended that a minority report be filed regarding the issue.

Although the residency matter was placed on Monday's committee agenda, there was little discussion about the proposed required residency.

John O'Connor Named President, COO At Rockland Savings Bank

John J. O'Connor III, prominent in Quincy and South Shore banking circles, has been named President and Chief Operating Officer at the Rockland Savings Bank.

Announcement was made by Kenneth R. Pike, chairman of the 130-year-old mutual savings bank.

O'Connor had been Regional President of Citizens Bank since 1995, based in Quincy, where he was active in the community.

A Weymouth resident, O'Connor began his banking career 20 years ago at the Rockland Trust Company, where he became Executive Vice President for commercial lending. He then moved to the South Shore division of Bank of Boston where he was an executive in commercial lending.

"There is no one on the South Shore in any business capacity that knows more or cares more about the South Shore than John O'Connor," said Pike, who had been serving as president and chief executive officer until he assumed the chairmanship of the bank.

"Our customers and our future customers are very fortunate to have someone of John's proven talent and success take us into our next century of service to the South Shore community."

Rockland Savings Bank, now in its 130th year, has branches in Rockland, Scituate and Carver. A chartered mutual savings bank, Rockland Savings has $92 million in assets and has a growing commercial lending base which O'Connor plans to strategically expand.

In the four years that O'Connor spearheaded Citizens Bank's South Shore Division, his group wrote more than $350 million in commercial loans on the South Shore and in South-eastern Massachusetts. O'Connor shepherded the integration of the former Quincy Savings Bank into Citizens Bank after it was acquired in 1995 by Citizens.

"This is the opportunity for which I have built my career," said O'Connor. "This is a true community bank that understands its roots and its importance in the community," he said. "When you have the opportunity to lead an institution that has been in continuous existence for 130 years, you understand that your role is not to reconstruct the future but to build upon the very solid foundation that already exists."

O'Connor, 52, is a graduate of the Stonier Graduate School of Banking at the University of Delaware and the National Commercial Lending Graduate School at the University of Oklahoma. He lives in Weymouth and has three children.

O'Connor serves on the board of directors of the South Shore YMCA, is vice chairman and a director of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce and is a member of the Board of Trustees at the New England College of Finance in Boston. Most recently he served as vice chairman of the Quincy 2000 Corporation and is a past president of the South Shore Economic Development Council.

Richard Lannon New South Shore Realtor President

Richard J. Lannon, a broker in the firm of Success Real Estate in Braintree was installed as president of the South Shore Association of Realtors at recent ceremonies held at Lantana in Randolph.

Lannon was joined by friends and family who were given recognition before the 200 members and guests.

James C. Dougherty, 1999 President of the Massachusetts Association of Realtors was the installing officer. Serving with Lannon are Joyce I. Baker, first vice president; Richard Murray, second vice president; Joanne Condon Walsh, secretary treasurer; and directors Robert W. Bell, Diane V. Brueggeman, Joseph P. Clancy, Richard Coughlin, Mary E. Dawson, Richard Hemmingway, Lorraine Ignatito, Toni C. Manning, J. Phillip Murphy, David O'Connell, Elizabeth Rowe, and Patricia Sullivan.

Lannon, in his own remarks, stated the need for education, community involvement, and Realtor networking. He applauded the board for what it is doing in providing continuing education, now a state requirement for relicensing, to Realtors and non-members licensees and how this will be a focal point of service the association provides.

There were more than 925 Realtors in continuing education programs throughout the year representing over 1,500 hours of education. The board will be sponsoring its first 12-hour course for 1999 Jan. 20 - 21.

Community service projects will continue to be another focus. Lannon pointed out efforts undertaken by Realtors that include donating decorated birdhouses to the annual birdshow show and auction and participation in "The House that Jill Built" the proceeds of which help to build affordable housing for low income families through Habitat For Humanity. Other projects discussed were the "Making Strides Against Breast Cancer Walk" and the annual Adopt-a-Family and Friends of the Homeless holiday programs which benefit dozens of families and hundreds of children.

Lannon announced plans to implement a new program, "Realtor After Hours", a monthly networking program to be held at various establishments in the area giving Realtors and affiliates an opportunity to combine both the professional and personal aspects of the business.

Lannon will succeed Joanne Condon Walsh of Quincy as president. Walsh received a plaque in recognition of her term in office and thanked the officers, directors and members who had worked with worked with her.

The South Shore Association of Realtors is one of more than 1,800 boards of Realtors nationwide that comprise the National Association of Realtors, the nation's largest trade association. The South Shore Association of Realtors is the "Voice for Real Estate" throughout the South Shore.

North Ties Falmouth, Downs Nemesis B-R

Carthas Answers Goaltending Question

By CHARLES ROSS

At the beginning of the season, some people wondered about the North Quincy High Hockey team's goaltending situation for the coming year.

After 7 games, Chris Carthas has answered those questions with a 1.74 goals against average and 2 shutouts so far this season.

Coach Bob Doyle's Red Raiders almost pulled off a big win last Wednesday night at the Quincy youth hockey Arena, but had to settle for a 3-3 tie with league powerhouse Falmouth. Paul Makarian, Ross O'Driscoll and John Bertucci each had goals and Carthas made 26 saves in the game.

Last Saturday night, North defeated a team that has been a nemesis to them over the past few years, Bridgewater-Raynham, by a 4-1 score. North took the lead to stay at the 9-minute mark of the first period as Paul Makarian scored with Mike Sullivan and Chad Fitzpatrick assisting. The lead went to 2-0 at the 6-minute mark of the second period as freshman Scott MacDonald lit the scoring lamp with Joe Cronin and Graham McShane providing assists.

The Trojans cut the lead to 2-1 in the 3rd period, but just 12 seconds after their goal, the Red Raiders regained its 2-goal cushion as Mike Sullivan scored assisted by Makarian and Fitzpatrick. North Quincy's final goal came with 3 minutes to go as Chad Fitzpatrick scored assisted by Makarian.

Red Raider Coach Bob Doyle was pleased with the week. "We played a tough Falmouth team to the point of almost knocking them off and then taking care of a pesky B-R team."

Coach Doyle had special praise for his goaltender Chris Carthas for his excellent play so far this season. "I think the question about our goaltending situation has been answered", Doyle said.

North Quincy will be home this Saturday night as they play host to Plymouth South. Game time is at 7:45PM.

QUINCY-BASED Warren Industries recently celebrated a profitable year in a unique and charitable way: it filled a rowboat with camp items, floated it in the company pool, and then gave the boat and items to Crossroads for Kids. Crossroads is a Boston-based organization that provides children from some of the area's neediest neighborhoods with the opportunity to experience summer camp, through camp, many of these children discover self-esteem and the confidence to face every day life. Brad Warren, president of Warren Industries, displays some of the items along with his children, Melissa, 9, and Mitch, 5. Guests at a recent company open house were asked to bring something to help fill the boat. Eastpak donated 25 backpacks and a number of businesses brought life preservers and baseball gloves.

Raiders Crumble At Crunch Time

Stevenson: Offense Needs To Step Up

The North Quincy boys basketball team saw both their games last week go down to crunch time with them tied with their opponents only to see them come up on the losing end of both games.

Last Tuesday, the Red Raiders were tied with Falmouth at 39 with 3:40 to go when the Clippers put the game away at the end winning 47-41. Senior Frank McNamara led the way with 12 points and 8 rebounds for North and Matt McCann added 8.

Last Friday night, North had Bridgewater-Raynham all even at 48 with four and a half minutes to go when the Trojans exploded on a 12-2 run and North came up short 72-56. Once again McNamara led the way with 15 points, Phil McGillicuddy had 12 and Matt McCann 8 in the losing cause. Justin Drysdale was strong off the glass for North with 9 rebounds in the game.

Coach Ted Stevenson said he sees a lot of improvement in this team each game and the effort has been there from every player. "We have four games coming up that I expect us to step up and start to put some wins on the board," he said.

Stevenson noted the team is holding their opponents to around 50 points a game and now it's the offense that needs to step up and get more scoring to help turn the tide around in order to win some games.

The Red Raiders play host to Plymouth South Friday night and have a non-league home game on Saturday against South Boston high School. Both games start at 7 p.m.

Presidents Tie S-L, Bow To Falmouth

Wrap Up 5-Game Road Trip Saturday

Coach Bob Sylvia pointed to this past week as a big one for his Quincy High hockey team. It marked the start of a 5 game road trip with the first 2 games against the two strongest teams in the Old Colony League.

Last Wednesday Quincy had a good effort and wound up with a 1-1 tie with Silver Lake. Brian Nolan scored in the first period to give the Presidents a 1-0 lead. The Lakers tied the game in the second period and the rest of the game was up and down with neither team able to put a goal in the net. Senior goalie Jeff Langill played a strong game for Quincy holding the Lakers off the scoreboard after scoring in the second period.

Last Saturday night Quincy faced their strongest challenge of the year down in Falmouth against the highly rated Clippers. The Presidents came away with a 5-0 loss, their first setback of the year (3-1-2).

"We came in with what I thought was a good game plan, but Falmouth was ready to play and just took the game away from us," Coach Sylvia said. "As I've said, we have to be ready to play every night in this league and I hope we learned a lesson from our mistakes."

Sylvia pointed out that he has some freshmen and sophomores skating varsity for the first year and that while Quincy was in the

Shedevils Bow To Renaissance School

St. Joseph School Shedevils started out on fire but let the basketball game slip away, bowing to the Renaissance School, a charter school in Boston.

Jaclyn Brogna led the Shedevils with 16 points.

She ran the court well, dominating both defensive and offensive board. Nikki Groleau and Nicole Glasheen added to the effort with great hustle on defense.

The Shedevils led 17-11 at half-time.

The Renaissance School made adjustments in the second half while the St. Joseph's got into foul trouble and let the lead slip away.

Final score was Renaissance 33, St. Joseph's 26.

Quincy Hits Road Bumps Presidents Bow To Silver Lake, Falmouth

By CHARLES ROSS
Quincy High boys' basketball team took to the road last week and the road was not kind as they lost to Silver Lake 65-54 last Tuesday and 62-47 to Falmouth last Friday.

Coach John Francheschini is not pleased with the shooting of the Presidents. Quincy is under 30% shooting from the floor and under 60% from the foul line so far in this 2-5 season.

"Since we do not have a lot of height, it's very important to be able to hit shots from the floor and we're simply not doing that well at the moment," said Coach Francheschini.

Quincy went through a six-minute dry spell in the Silver Lake game and a 4:30 non-scoring stretch in the Falmouth game which helped to put both games out of reach for the Presidents.

Junior guard Dan Kelley continues to lead the Quincy scoring with a 15.1 points per game average. Jim Munchbach is next with a 13.1 average and junior forward Sean Fitzpatrick has been strong on the boards for Quincy with an average of 9.9 rebounds per game.

Francheschini is looking for improved effort in the next three games, which will mark the end of the first half of the season.

This Friday night, the Presidents travel to Bridgewater-Raynham for a 7 p.m. game and host North Quincy in the first meeting of the year next Tuesday at 7:30 p.m.

40 Teams Participate In K Of C Hockey Tourney

Quincy recently held the annual Knights of Columbus Hockey Tournament which featured more than 40 teams, mites through bantams, from Massachusetts and Rhode Island.

Winners were:
Mite Division: Weymouth Youth Hockey, Mite B team.
Squirt Division: Milton Youth Hockey, Squirt B team.

Pee-Wee Division: Quincy Youth Hockey, Pee Wee B team.

Bantam Division: Quincy Youth Hockey, Bantam B team.

North Quincy Girls Drop Two Tough Games

The North Quincy girls' basketball team dropped two tough games in recent action.

At Falmouth, the team lost a heart-breaker, 52-50 on a last second shot by Colleen McRae. North's offense was led by junior Jill Nicholson with 22 points. She tied the school record for three pointers in a game with four.

Also playing well were junior Caitlin Powers (8 points, 8 rebounds) and senior co-captain Kristen Bowes (6 points, 7 rebounds).

"It was a shame to lose this game this way, as we worked extremely hard against the ninth ranked team in the state. I'm very proud of my kids and the way they played," said Coach Doug MacFarlane.

The girls then visited Bridgewater-Raynham, the 12th-ranked team in the state. "I expected a let down after the Falmouth loss, and got it, when we went down 19-3 to start the game," said MacFarlane.

Two timeouts later, North Quincy picked up the intensity and flow of the game turned their way. Led by freshman Lauren Sleeth with 10 points and Jill Nicholson's 19 points, North trailed by only one at half-time, 31-30.

In the second half, Bridgewater-Raynham again opened a 15-point lead. North Quincy got it down to 7 minutes with two minutes to go but couldn't capitalize.

"I'm very proud of the girls," MacFarlane said. "We could have packed it in twice during this game and we didn't. We didn't quit or give up and I really like that."

Freshmen Raiders Split

North Quincy freshmen boys' basketball team split two games in recent action, bringing its season record to 2-4 (1-2 in the Old Colony League).

North opened fast against visiting Falmouth as full court defensive pressure lead to some early fast break baskets. In the first four minutes, the Raiders opened an 8-2 lead. Falmouth regained its composure and ran its half-court offense effectively, taking a 13-12 lead with 6:18 left in the first half.

With two minutes remaining in the half, the visiting Clippers built a five-point lead. Mark Maher had two steals, followed by breakaway baskets to cut the lead to the three. Dennis Thomson's lay-up with four seconds left, gave the freshmen Raiders the lead, 25-24, at the half.

Wayne Moynihan's fast break basket off of a Steve Pizzi feed pushed the North lead to nine at the 12-minute mark of the second half. Pizzi's three pointed ended a brief Falmouth second-half run which had cut the lead to four. North pulled away, as Eric Stanton's five second-half points pushed the lead to 16 with less than three minutes remaining. A late flurry let the Clippers pull to within eight at the buzzer, 51-43.

Moynihan led balanced scoring for North with 10 points. Thomson and Jon O'Connell added eight points apiece. Matt Donovan's playmaking and Dennis Mackey's rebounding were key to the Raider's second half domination, in recording their first OCL win.

The Raiders started and finished slowly against Bridgewater-Raynham. The visiting Trojans opened with a 14-0 run until Dennis Mackey's drive across the lane gave North its first basket four minutes into the game. Sean Ginty's lay-up capped a 9-0 run to pull the Raiders to within five, 14-9. Two of Jon O'Connell's 13 first-half points pulled North to within 3 with six minutes to go in the half. B-R put its starters back in the game and the Trojans ran off 17 unanswered points to close the first half, 33-17.

More of the same in the second half as North Quincy could not solve the Trojan starting five. Matt Donovan's 12-footer pulled the Raiders to within 10, 41-31 at the 11:00 mark. North would not come closer, as B-R pulled away to the 61-38 final. Jon O'Connell led NQ scorers with 24 points.

Girls Soccer Skills Program

Quincy Recreation Department will offer two soccer skills programs for girls as part of its expanded after-school and evening activities at neighborhood school gymnasiums during non-school hours.

Each program will feature activities and instructions designed to improve the fundamental soccer skills of each youngster. Participants will also take part in mini-games and contests.

The program is offered free to Quincy residents only.

The program will be held on two separate days and for two separate age groups. Both programs will take place at Broadmeadows Middle School gym.

The first program, held Mondays for girls in grades 5-7, starts Jan. 25. The session runs from 5:45 to 7 p.m. and 7 to 8:30 p.m. Both sessions offer the same instructional material. Participants may register for only one session.

The second program, held Thursdays for girls in grades 8-11, starts Jan. 28. There is one session, from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m.

Registration will be conducted at the program on the opening night of each program. Participants are requested to wear sneakers and appropriate gym attire.

SCOTT DEWARE

*A Thought
For The Week*

One of the things that makes life interesting and at the same time turbulent is the prevalence of different viewpoints.

Someone once said that there is a good chance that if you believe what everybody else appears to believe, you are probably wrong. As times change and the world changes, opinions strongly held at a certain point in time might now be invalid. A lot depends on where one is standing when he makes his observation.

If one looks at the palm of his hand, he could describe a hand as being smooth-skinned and without hair, pores or nails. The back of the hand presents a different picture, as do the two sides of a coin.

Next time you get to thinking that your idea is the only one that possibly be correct, take another look. There just might be something in the way the other fellow sees it.

Incidentally, your views on this or any other thought you read here are always welcomed and appreciated.

Your Horoscope

by Natasha

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Travel is in the stars, both short trips and those of a longer nature. Good news comes your way regarding a situation at a distance. A moody co-worker gets on your nerves toward week's end.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You shine as your work is recognized and your accomplishments are rewarded this week. However, a jealous co-worker is just waiting for an opportunity to steal your thunder. Stay out of harm's way.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Your business acumen is at a peak this week and you can accomplish much. Feel free to broach a delicate subject with a big-wig during a social event. This week, it pays to mix business with pleasure.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Privacy is best when considering how to woo that certain reluctant party. Creativity is accentuated at work and success follows as a result. Discourses this weekend revolve around money and joint finances.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) In some ways, you're very much in the spotlight, which suits your leonine nature just fine. It seems you can do no wrong in anyone's eyes. Later in the week, exercise caution with a co-worker who's touchy.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) You're not thrilled, but you need to face some important financial matters. Be on the lookout for new opportunities to make more money. Your income is increasingly important.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Travel and communications are highlighted. Added to that is your personal charm, which is in high gear. As a result, you get much done that requires far-reaching decisions this week.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) You can accomplish much at home, provided you avoid being overly pushy. A co-worker seeks you out to tell you something astonishing. Don't buy it.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Something you've been waiting to receive for a while is delayed yet again. Keep your temper. Ultimately, the accent is on leisure and romance, particularly over the weekend.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A co-worker wants to introduce you to a new love interest. Avoid this match-making scheme. You can pick and choose a partner on your own much more successfully.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You're upset with what's going on at work, but try not to bring this home with you. Put the situation into its proper perspective. This weekend, you feel good about getting out and about.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Finances are the issue for the major part of the week. Agreements ultimately reached, though, are satisfying to you and your mate. This weekend, leisure interests are highlighted.

Quincy Man Charged In Nationwide Scheme

A 51-year-old Quincy man has been charged with conspiracy to commit mail and wire fraud, wire fraud and money laundering following a lengthy investigation, U.S. Attorney Donald K. Stern announced last week.

In a 43-count information, Arthur F. Good, 51, of 79 Mount Ararat Road, Quincy, who headed the Boston Investment Group with offices at 32 Chestnut St., is accused of bilking more than 100 victims nationwide of sums ranging from $10,000 to nearly $1 million, according to the U.S. attorney's office.

To date, Good is alleged to have bilked investors out of at least $7 million by telling them he would invest their money in safe investments with very high rates of return.

But, according to the U.S. attorney's office, Good allegedly used much of the money to pay off previous investors and divided up most of the remainder between his partners and himself.

Some of the money was invested in extremely speculative offshore investments, contrary to the representations Good made to his clients, said Stern. All told,

Good took in more than $20 million in the scheme from victims all over the country, Stern charged.

"Ponzi schemes such as this one prey upon trusting investors and steal from them their hard-earned money," Sterns stated in announcing the information. "Arthur Good gained the confidence of individual investors, in part by falsely claiming he was backed by Fidelity and the Marriott Foundation."

"In fact, Good's story was invented out of whole cloth, and neither the Marriott Foundation nor Fidelity Investments had any working arrangement with Good, and neither committed any wrongdoing in this case," said Stern.

As part of his efforts to recruit new investors and convince existing investors that their money was safe, Good took care to establish an outwardly affluent lifestyle in which both he and his wife drove expensive cars, wore fine jewelry and otherwise attempted to show that he managed a successful business. He also used investors' money to fund scholarships at local private high schools.

Sterns praised the work of the Securities Division of the Office of the Secretary of State which initially identified the scam and noted that the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the Internal Revenue Service are continuing their investigation. In addition, the information includes forfeiture allegations designed to seize the majority of Good's known assets.

Over $300,000 Sought For 3 Historic Sites

By MARILYN JACKSON

Quincy leaders are keeping their fingers crossed that the Massachusetts Historical Commission will fund three separate proposals to help preserve the Souther Tide Mill, the United First Parish Church and the Forbes Hill water tower, near the Furnace Brook Golf Course clubhouse.

The commission was scheduled to meet yesterday (Wednesday) afternoon to decide how to distribute the next round of funding in the state's Massachusetts Preservation Projects Funds program, said Jack McCarthy, a spokesman in Secretary of State William Galvin's office which oversees the commission.

These grants require matching funds, he noted.

Mayor James Sheets said each project was worthy of consideration. "I don't think they are in competition with each other," he said.

The city has requested $100,000 for engineering and architectural designs for the restoration of the Souther Tide Mill as an initial step to create a waterfront park and historical museum.

The mayor said a request for proposals would have to be issued because this type of work is so specialized.

Formidable preservation plans for the Souther Tide Mill property were unveiled last month when CVS announced its proposal to buy the five-acre site and donate three acres to a private, non-profit 501(c)(3) corporation that would preserve and maintain the mill and any other buildings constructed on the site.

Sheets said Tuesday he expected CVS to take the first steps within the next few weeks in securing the necessary permits to build a new CVS on the site, which lies within a planned unit development district.

In addition, the mayor will make a recommendation to the City Council which 501(c)(3) corporation would be appropriate to oversee fund-raising efforts to restore the tide mill.

Four years ago the National Park Service identified the tide mill as having high historic significance because of its links to President John Quincy Adams who was a part owner of the mill in the 1820s, to the city's shipbuilding legacy, dating back to 1641, and its Quincy granite industry which shipped its famous quarried stone throughout the world.

And, the historical commission described the mill as one of the state's 10 most endangered historic sites.

Richard Meade, planning director, said this week he anticipated the city would receive funds for this work. He added that a preservation architect, John Goff of Salem, had estimated about six years ago that the complete restoration of the Souther Tide Mill would cost between $1 million and $1.5 million.

The city also has applied for $117,000 in matching funds to repoint the granite stones in the 72-foot-high water tower on Forbes or Third Hill.

The water tower was built in 1901 of Quincy granite, next to a large reservoir, by the then-Metropolitan Water and Sewer Department. In the 1940s, the reservoir was filled, and in the mid-1950s the MDC decided to the city tower and 25,000 square feet of land on the summit for $25,000 for recreational purposes.

David Murphy, program manager of the Park Department, said the city's grant application for this project last year was designated an alternate and would have received funding had any other proposal not gone forward.

"We'd like to repoint many of the stones," said Murphy. "I don't believe any rehab work has been done to the structure since it was built."

When the water tower first opened, it had a steel spiral staircase which led to an observation deck that provided expansive views of the city, he said.

He said the restoration work probably would mean relocating the communication antennas on top of the tower which were erected more than 20 years ago. The University of Massachusetts of Boston owns some of the equipment, Murphy added.

The United First Parish Church, built by noted architect Alexander Harris in 1828, also requested $100,000 in historic preservation funds to continue the emergency repairs currently under way to shore up the trusses of the roof.

Engineers who inspected the church last year are concerned that a major snowstorm could cause the trusses to crack further, according to the church's minister, the Rev. Sheldon Bennett.

The trusses support not only the slate roof but the magnificent architectural domed ceiling.

Eight scaffolding towers, each 17 feet high, area have been erected around the interior of the sanctuary, and a deck so that specially fabricated steel trusses can be installed to shore up trusses which support the slate roof and the magnificent architectural domed ceiling.

The scaffolding will also provide for the safety of the workmen as they hoist up the pieces of steel. Bennett said he expected a contract for the fabricated steel would be awarded by the end of the month.

Bennett estimated that the cost of fabricating and erecting the new steel trusses will cost about $250,000. Replacing the roof, the copper flashing, gutters and downspouts will cost another $250,000. The church already is spending $70,000 for the temporary emergency shoring and another $20,000 for related engineering work.

To date, the Massachusetts Historical Commission has awarded two grants to the church totaling $135,000 for these repairs.

MLK Day Speaker Tells Of The Horror And Hope In Bosnia

By MARILYN JACKSON

Community unity was the message students from the Snug Harbor Community School and the Broad Meadows Middle School and the gospel choir from Eastern Nazarene College delivered Monday at Quincy's fifth annual Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. breakfast at the George F. Bryan VFW Post.

The featured speaker, assistant U.S. Attorney William Sinnott, who as a lieutenant colonel in the Marine Corps Reserves spent eight months in Bosnia last year coordinating NATO efforts to rebuild the war-torn country, talked about his observations there and how Dr. King might have viewed the horror and the hope of Bosnia.

He told of how more than 10,000 residents, including 1,600 children were killed in Sarajevo in the name of "ethnic cleansing," which pitted friends and neighbors against each other because they were a minority, whether they were a Muslim, a Croat or Serb.

Bigotry had been institutionalized, even glorified in Bosnia, and the result was "murder, torture, rape camps, mass

Hedlund Concerned Over Temporary Span

Sheets Sees New Fore River Bridge

By MARILYN JACKSON

Mayor James Sheets is optimistic that a new, higher, wider Fore River Bridge will be built which will enable the shipyard to construct modern supertankers and allow larger vessels to dock at the Citgo and Braitree Light Plant piers.

After several years of delay, construction of a temporary bridge is expected to begin soon, once engineering designs have been completed.

Sen. Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth, said he plans to bring the new state highway commissioner, Matt Amorello, a former senator from Worcester, to Quincy Point to see the Route 3A bridge at the end of the month and underscore the need for its replacement.

The bridge is 65 years old and carries more than 40,000 vehicles a day.

The project has been on the drawing board for several years, but Mass. Highway Department secured the final approval for the project from the Office of Coastal Zone Management only last month.

Sheets said this week he has "every indication" that the project will move ahead quickly.

The new bridge will swing out from the existing bridge and then run parallel to it, he explained. The center of the bridge will lift up, rather than open as it does now, to allow the passage of tankers to the Braitree Electric Company or Citgo.

The construction for the temporary bridge will take between 14 and 18 months, said Sheets, and will cost an estimated $50 million.

The engineering and construction of a new permanent bridge, in addition to rehabbing the old bridge, will cost between $120 million and $140 million, Sheets said.

"I am concerned that the temporary bridge may become permanent," said Hedlund, whose district includes North Weymouth and East Braintree.

"I haven't said this publicly before, but a temporary bridge takes the pressure off building a new bridge for Mass. Highway which is overseeing the massive Central Artery project," said Hedlund.

"This project would be the second largest state highway project, after the Big Dig," said Hedlund.

Sheets said a new, wider bridge is necessary for the shipyard, Mass. Heavy Industries Inc. (MHI), to build large supertankers. Presently MHI has contracts to build double-hull tankers which require less clearance.

When General Dynamics built the liquefied natural gas tankers (LNGs) at the shipyard during the late 1970s and early 1980s, there was only a foot clearance on either side of the vessel when it passed through the bridge.

City To Seek $2M Grant For Quincy Point Projects

The city will seek a $2 million public works economic development (PWED) grant to continue improving roads and other infrastructure in Quincy Point, Mayor James Sheets said Tuesday.

The money also would be used as part of the revitalization efforts along the Washington Street corridor from the Fore River Bridge to the Southern Artery.

The grant money would complement the $3.7 million the governor awarded last spring for infrastructure near the Fore River shipyard, he said.

That money came from a $2 million PWED grant and a $1.7 million Community Development Action Grant (CDAG).

Public works director slated for several other streets. David Colton said the new funds would be used to continue street paving and improve traffic signalization and intersections.

Sheets said the area is slated to have similar street lights that have been placed in downtown Quincy, Wollaston and North Quincy but was not sure whether PWED funds can be used for that.

Not all the money from the earlier grants has been expended, Colton said.

New water mains have been installed along East Howard Street and South Street, and roadway work has been completed on Cleverly Court, Chubbuck Street and a couple of other streets in the neighborhood.

Additional paving is slated for several other streets. The sewer lines in that area had been updated in the 1980s, he added, and did not need to be replaced.

In addition, new traffic signals are scheduled to be installed at the intersection of Quincy Avenue and Faxon Park Road and at Southern Artery and South Street within the next couple of years. Presently, those projects are under design.

"This is a terrific public works investment for Ward 2 and Quincy Point," said Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymond.

He added that the redesign of the intersection of Quincy Avenue, Water, Blanchard and Scammell Streets includes new signalization which could be installed this spring.

Sheets, Quincy 2000, Laud Storefront Improvements

Mayor James Sheets and officials from Quincy 2000 recently held ribbon cutting ceremonies at three Quincy Center buildings renovated last year through Quincy 2000's Façade Improvement Program.

The first ceremony was held at The Granite Rail, 14-16 Cottage Ave. Granite Rail owner Jerry Mulvey expanded and renovated the interior and exterior of the restaurant/pub following a fire that temporarily closed the business. Exterior renovations included the removal of the entire storefront, installation of new brick storefront, new storefront glass and metal, and new signs and sign lighting.

The second ceremony was held at Napoli Cafe, 1570-1576 Hancock St. In addition to Napoli Cafe, owners Guy and Josephine Consoli renovated two adjacent storefronts they own that house the businesses Paddy's Burke's and Beau-

Community Police, Point Youngsters Team In Project

By BERT GARR
Quincy Police Department's new Community Police Division proved its effectiveness recently as officers organized fourteen neighborhood children to clean the Grafton St. neighborhood.

The division, which consists of nine officers assigned to four areas of Quincy, seeks to increase community interaction with the Police Department and solve non-traditional police issues.

Setting out to show Grafton St. youths how to take pride in the cleanliness of their neighborhood, Community Police Lt. William Stenmon and Community Police Officer Ralph Radzevich distributed flyers four days prior to the Dec. 23 cleanup inviting all youths to participate.

The following Grafton St. children chose to participate in the beautification project using shovels, broom, rakes, and trash bags donated by the Quincy Parks Department:

Blair Greene, age 10,

Glen Harvey, age 10, Kaitland Farno, age 7, Phiipos Filippines, age 11, Jason Webb, age 13, and Justin Nichol, age 8.

Also cleaning were Mike Norton, age 12, Joshua Webb, age 12, Joe Ferrara, age 12, Danny Nichols, age 13, Billy Ayer, age 9, Kevin Ferrara, age 9, and Ariel Harvey, age 7, all of Grafton St.

Steve O'Neil, age 12, of Lancaster St., participated as well.

Officers Radzevich, James Dentremon, and Christine Kraunelis supervised the project.

To show appreciation for the kid's participation in cleaning Grafton St., Major Robert Klenk, of The Salvation Army, donated 14 gifts to the children.

"We'd like to thank all those who participated," said Officer Radzevich, adding that it was impressive to see how the kids and the officers worked so well together to promote positive change in a community.

Concourse Committee

The Citizens Advisory Committee (CAC) for the Quincy Center Concourse will meet Thursday, Jan. 21 at 3:15 p.m. in the City Hall Annex, second floor conference room.

The agenda will include an open public forum and a working session to discuss the various proposals concerning phase 2 of the multi-million dollar roadway linking the east side of Hancock St. street with McGrath Highway and the Southern Artery.

The CAC consists of the following members: Chairman David Erickson, Leonie Bailey, Arline Goodman, James Hession, John Keenan, John Noonan, Bernard Riseberg, Charles Ryder, and Mary Smith.

Rosemary Nolan is Program Manager for the Quincy Department of Public Works and John Daniels of Earth Tech engineering company is facilitator for the project.

The CAC was appointed by Mayor James Sheets in December, 1993.

The purpose of the Quincy Center Concourse Project is to:

- Improve vehicular access to Quincy Center and points east and west, and enhance pedestrian access to the Hancock St. commercial area
 - Provide an important road link and complete an adequate roadway system to serve Quincy Center.
 - Relieve roadway and intersection congestion within Quincy Center
- All CAC meetings are open to the public.

45,000 Census Forms In Mail

The annual city census is underway.

Some 45,000 census questionnaires to residents are in the mail, City Clerk Joseph Shea said.

"The questionnaires are the same as last year," he said. "They should be returned within 21 days of receipt."

Shea said included with the questionnaires are self-addressed, stamped return envelopes.

The city's population in 1998, according to the census that year, was 88,750, Shea said.

That was an increase of 570 over 1997.

Shea said he thinks the population could be over the 89,000 mark when this year's census is completed.

"And we may hit 90,000," he said.

Massachusetts state law mandates an annual street listing of residents as of Jan. 1 each year.

Failure to respond to the mailing of the census questionnaire will result in removal of names from the active voting list and could also result in the removal of names from the voter registration rolls, under the law.

Anyone with questions regarding the census are asked to call the city clerk's office at 376-1141.

Sheets To Attend Mayors Conference In Washington

Mayor James Sheets will be attending the annual winter Conference of Mayors next week in Washington, D.C.

Accompanying him will be Richard Meade, director of planning and community development, and the mayor's executive secretary John Keenan.

Sheets said that during the four-day conference, which begins Jan. 26, Sen. Trent Lott and First Lady Hillary Rodham Clinton are expected to address the mayors.

On the final day of the conference, the conferees are scheduled to meet with President Bill Clinton and Vice President Al Gore at the White House.

Sheets serves on two conference committees — one on jobs, education and workforce and the other on arts, culture and recreation. He also was recently named to the mayors' campaign against breast cancer.

In early August Quincy will host a smaller group of mayors, the Southeastern Massachusetts, Atlantic and Canadian Association of Mayors. In addition to Sheets and Brockton Mayor John Yunits, the mayors of Taunton, Fall River and New Bedford and their counterparts in the Maritime Provinces are expected to attend.

Quincy 2000 Business Seminar Feb. 11

Quincy 2000 will host a "Tactical Marketing For The Small Business Owner" workshop Feb. 11, 8-9:45 a.m. at Quincy 2000, 1250 Hancock St., 8th floor.

Beth Tucker of Gamble & Associates will cover topics such as: the difference between marketing strategies and marketing tactics, the best way to use various marketing tactics, and how to apply this knowledge to your own business.

Pre-registration is required. Cost is $10 for Quincy 2000 members, $20 for non-members. The fee includes coffee and bagels.

Call Quincy 2000 at 847-1454 to pre-register. Registration will be confirmed upon receipt of payment.

Speculation Time Again

It's speculation time again around City Hall.

Mayor James Sheets will be making the annual appointments to his "official family" Feb. 1.

The main interest is in department heads.

Anyone going, anyone coming?

Speculation is that Dana Childs will be departing as treasurer and tax collector. He has held the dual posts since 1987, appointed by then Mayor Frank McCauley.

Childs, according to the speculation, will be replaced by James Chicino, who has been city personnel director since 1995. Prior to that he was a long-time Quincy Savings Bank executive, appropriate experience for treasurer-tax collector.

But if Childs is going and Chicino is moving from one post to another, the big question is: who would come in as the new personnel director?

A good bet, according to the speculation buzz: Michael McFarland, no stranger to City Hall.

But, McFarland spikes that one.

"Absolutely not," he says. "It's not true. I'm very happy being a school committeeman and staying busy at my business (Barry's Deli)."

McFarland, a popular figure around City Hall, was Sheets's executive secretary, leaving in 1997 to devote more time to his business. He was then elected to the school committee. Prior to serving as executive secretary he was the city purchasing agent.

There was speculation a few years ago that Childs would be replaced by McFarland.

But, when Robert Denvir decided to retire as purchasing agent, McFarland succeeded him instead and later moved up to executive secretary.

Meanwhile, the speculation will continue to Feb. 1.

IN CASE YOU might be wondering, Tim Cahill will run for re-election to his City Council at-large seat this year.

"I am definitely going to see re-election," he says. "You can tell everyone that."

Cahill says he has had no problem serving in the dual role of city councillor and Norfolk County treasurer.

And, is he still interested in a bid someday for the Red Cross Baby-Sitter's Training Course Feb. 16-19

The American Red Cross Quincy Chapter, 1495 Hancock St., Quincy, will conduct a baby-sitter's training course during school vacation week, Tuesday, Feb. 16 - Friday, Feb. 19 from 9 to 11:30 a.m.

The course for youngsters age 11-14 teaches the responsibilities and qualities of being a good baby-sitter and what to expect from the person who hires you. Topics include caregiving skills (diapering, feeding, dressing), safety skills to prevent emergencies, and how baby-sitters can market themselves safely.

Fee is $37 for the four-day course and includes a heavy duty nylon tote bag and baby-sitter's handbook.

To register, call the American Red Cross at 617-770-2600. Class size is limited.

mayor's office?

"Yes," he says. "But not this year."

MEANWHILE, Dave McGillicuddy who made an impressive political debut as runner-up in the council at-large race two years ago, is considering a possible second run

"I am thinking of it," says McGillicuddy, a retired telephone company executive. "But right now I am not sure. It really is a little too early to decide."

THAT DONALD DUCK gold medallion School Committeewoman Linda Stice has been sporting is a symbol of achievement.

She was awarded it for finishing a recent half-marathon in New York sponsored by DisneyWorld.

She and her sister-in-law, Candy Stice, came across the finish line together in "about three hours."

Linda's brother, Larry Stice, completed the full marathon in five hours, handicapped by a knee problem. It was his 18th marathon in 10 states, including Alaska where he and Candy formerly lived. His goal is to run and finish a marathon in all 50 states, including Boston.

Linda has run three full marathons and is hoping to qualify for the biggie in Boston.

Meanwhile, she is waiting for the weather to improve to begin her flying lessons at Norwood Airport.

Her husband, Kenneth Tarabelli gave her a gift certificate for the first lesson as a gift for her birthday. And she doesn't mind telling you it was her 50th.

SOMETIMES WORDS CAN come back to haunt you department:

School Committeewoman Christine Cedrone, who is attending New England School of Law, was doing some research the other day and came across these remarks by President Bill Clinton, June 30, 1994:

"I am pleased to sign into law ... the reauthorization of the Independent Counsel Act. This law, originally passed in 1978, is a foundation stone for the trust between the Government and our citizens."

"It ensures that no matter what party controls the Congress or the executive branch, an independent non-partisan process will be in place to guarantee the integrity of public officials and ensure that no one is above the law."

"Regrettably, this statute was permitted to lapse when its reauthorization became mired in a partisan dispute in the Congress."

"Opponents called it a tool of partisan attack against Republican Presidents and a waste of taxpayer funds. It was neither."

"In fact, the independent counsel statute has been in the past and is today a force for government integrity and public confidence."

Special Education Subcommittee Meeting Feb. 2 At Broad Meadows

The Special Education Subcommittee of the Quincy School Committee will meet Tuesday, Feb. 2 at 7:30 p.m. at Broad Meadows Middle School, 50 Calvin Rd. Transportation Co. representatives will be present to answer any parent concerns. Meetings are open to the public.

Scenes From Yesterday

Washington Street from Washington Court, Quincy Point, Mass.
Published by George W. Gragg

THIS IS A 1911 POSTCARD view of Washington Street in Quincy Point looking south from Washington Court. The old fire station can be seen behind the elm trees on the right. Notice the bands around the tree trunks. This was an early attempt to stop the Dutch Elm disease which subsequently destroyed all the great Elm trees in the Point area. Here the street was still unpaved. The trolley tracks from Quincy Square carried workers to the shipyard and went over the bridge to North Weymouth. Today this is an important commuter route to Boston from the South Shore.

Clinton Sunbeams Column A 'Breath Of Fresh Air'

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

I feel compelled to let you and all your readers know that your Jan. 7, 1999 Sunbeams article entitled, "Clinton And The Opinion Polls", was a breath of fresh air for those of us who recognize and respect truth in government and truth in journalism.

I salute your non-partisan courage for expressing opinions, which may not be popular in a Democratic stronghold like Quincy and (by extension) the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

It is impossible to believe that Clinton is more admired than Pope John Paul II and Rev. Billy Graham. As you clearly stated, of the 264.6 million Americans, only 18% (or 190) of the 1,055 people polled are Clinton admirers. Stated differently, if that poll truly represents the opinion of Americans, we have a sick society.

The reference to "so-called leaders in Washington who are afraid to do any leading without first checking the latest poll" is absolutely true. Unfortunately, it is embarrassing to have to admit that these "so-called leaders" are anchored by the Massachusetts Congressional Delegation. They apparently feel obligated to March in lockstep with the Clinton White House defense.

I agree with you. Try Clinton in the Senate. Call witnesses. Then vote to acquit or convict. Why? Because we can all see that censure didn't cause Barney Frank or Gerry Studds any problems in their political careers.

Discipline Topic At Quincy Hospital

As part of its Families First series, Quincy Hospital invites parents to "Things Kids Do To Drive Us Nuts: Positive Approaches to Discipline," a two part series on Thursdays, Feb. 4 and 11.

The program will be held from 7:30 to 9 p.m. at Quincy Hospital, 114 Whitwell St., Conference Room A. Cost is $35 per person for the entire series.

The series, created by child development specialists at Wheelock College, will explore why children misbehave and what parents can do about their children's hitting, whining, temper tantrums, and other troublesome behavior.

Advance registration is required. To register, or for more information, call (617) 868-7687.

Squantum Seen For Nuclear Plant

By PAUL HAROLD

Quincy Atty. George Flavin, who was an associate member of the state's Department of Public Utilities, predicted that Boston Edison would build a nuclear power plant on its land in Squantum.

Boston Edison bought the old Victory plant for the express purpose of building a multi-million dollar generating plant. Flavin said he expected that Edison would generate with nuclear fuel, "once that source of power was perfected."

To date Edison had done nothing with the large tract of land it owned, except allowing a small portion to be used by Boston Harbor Marina.

GRANITE RAILWAY SHRINE PROPOSED

Rep. Joseph Brett filed legislation to establish an historic shrine in West Quincy, at the site of the nation's first commercial railway.

The Granite Rail incline would be annexed to the MDC's Blue Hills Reservation for the purpose of maintaining it as an historic site.

The leader of the filing of the legislation was Charles Eliot, II, grandson of the president of Harvard. Eliot was active in the Bunker Hill Monument Association that in 1825 raised the funds to build the monument out of Quincy granite.

BELLOTTI ANNOUNCES KARATE LESSONS

Lt. Governor Francis Bellotti announced that he arranged for Karate courses for women who were afraid of the Boston Strangler.

Bellotti, who was a Karate enthusiast, urged all those women who could to take the free lessons in self-defense. The lessons, offered by the Mattson Academy, were scheduled for the Victory Rd. Armory in Dorchester.

Two Honored At '99 In '99' Party At River Bay Club

Two residents at the River Bay Club on Brackett St. were honored recently at a "99 in '99" birthday celebration.

Mrs. Bessie Jackson turned 99 Jan. 18 and Mrs. Marion Bishop will reach that milestone Sept. 4.

Mayor James Sheets presented each with a paperweight bearing the city seal and read aloud their birthday cards received from President William Jefferson Clinton to those attending the party.

In keeping with the "99 in '99" theme, Thomas Cattaneo of the 99 Restaurant in Quincy presented each with a gift certificate to that restaurant. Mrs. Bishop has lived at River Bay Club since September, 1992 and Mrs. Jackson since August, 1996.

And the two discovered it really is a small world.

Both came from New York City to be near their families in this area and found that they had lived within 10 blocks from one another in New York.

Both share a love for art. Mrs. Bishop was an artist and teacher who enjoyed restoring aged or damaged art work. Mrs. Jackson painted for her own enjoyment and brought pieces of her work to hang in her apartment at River Bay Club.

Mrs. Bishop was also an elementary school teacher, liked to travel, and was a champion contract bridge player.

Mrs. Bishop worked at the New York City YMCA as assistant Director of Housing for 40 years. She took particular pride in the girl's dormitory called Studio Club where women who excelled in art were housed.

And, she accompanied them to their tryouts from ballet to the opera and from the symphony to the theater.

Crispy Sliced Spuds

Tired of French fries, mashed or baked potatoes? That's what I was thinking the night I switched to the crusty sliced potatoes, one of my mother's favorites

In addition to being fat free, they are the simplest kind to make.

Crispy Sliced Potatoes

3 large potatoes

1 large cookie sheet vegetable oil spray or equivalent salt and pepper

Preheat oven to 375. Wash potatoes. Leave the skin on and slice lengthwise not quite a half inch thick. Salt and pepper each one. Grease a cookie sheet and bake for about 30 minutes, turning each slice once. Make them as crispy as you like. I served them with roasted stuffed chicken for a nice change.

Sweet potatoes may also be used.

(Marie D'Olimpio has written a cookbook containing recipes printed in The Quinoy Sun.)

They can be purchased at the Fruit Basket (near Star Market), Previte's Market on Summer Street, Quincy, Nanci's Barbershop, Elm Street, Braintree, the Cherry Gift Shop at Quincy Hospital, and Curry's Hardware on Copeland Street.)

BankAmerica Donates $5,000 To Quincy Community Action

Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc. recently received a $5,000 donation from BankAmerica.

The money will benefit QCAP's First Time Homebuyer Program, which offers workshops and individual counseling designed to educate families of all income levels on every aspect of the homebuying process. Workshop participants become eligible for many different mortgage options offered through Mass. Housing Finance Agency (MHFA) and other financial institutions.

Since the program began in 1990, QCAP has graduated more than 1500 participants. Ten workshop series are offered annually, along with special bilingual workshops and informational sessions for residents of local public housing complexes. An estimated 70 percent of QCAP's graduate purchase their first home through the program, which to date, has included 25 families for public housing. QCAP is the only certified homebuying counseling agency in the immediate area approved by MHFA to conduct First Time Homebuying workshops and administer the MHFA certificate needed to participate in their special mortgage programs.

In addition to their generous donation, BankAmerica also provides speakers for the homebuying workshops.

For more information or to contribute to the program, call Alisa Gardner at 617-479-8181 ext. 121.

HEPATITIS A VACCINE

A recently approved vaccine offering between 80 and 98 percent effectiveness against hepatitis A is now available. Two injections, given one year apart, provide a minimum of four years of protection, possibly as many as 25. Further study will establish the vaccine's long-term protection. Since this is a live inactive vaccine, its effectiveness has not been determined in the HIV-positive population, though in one small study, doctors did find lower antibody production. It may be that additional booster shots will increase this vaccine's usefulness for this group. Populations at highest risk for hepatitis A include travelers to countries where this virus is endemic, injection drug users, day care workers, gay men, American Indians, and Eskimos.

The improved effectiveness and safety of vaccinations makes them a sure protection for many. At AFFILIATED MEDICAL GROUPS, located at 700 Congress St., Quincy, we listen to your concerns. We are affiliated with Quincy and South Shore Hospitals. Please call us at 617-472-2550; office hours by appointment.

P.S. Hepatitis A affects an estimated 125,000 - 200,000 people each year in the United States.

Bellotti Names Rich Power New Community Corrections Director

Norfolk County Sheriff Michael G. Bellotti has named Rich Power of Norwood the new Director of Community Corrections for the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office.

As director of Community Corrections, Power will manage the department's Alternative Centers in Dedham and Braintree as well as the new Community Corrections Center in Quincy, which will open later this year. Those center house inmates who have been classified to be non-violent offenders and, in many cases, are approaching the end of their sentences.

RICH POWER

Power will also manage the community service and work release programs, which operate from those centers and seek to prepare inmates for a safe reintegration into society. The community service program provides valuable service to non-profit organizations, such as churches and schools.

In addition, Power will manage the Electronic Incarceration Program. The program provides intense supervision and electronic monitoring for sentenced offenders and probationers who have been classified to pose little risk to public safety when supervised in the community.

"Rich Power's experience on public safety issues qualifies him to make those important community corrections decisions necessary to ensure public safety," Bellotti said. "I'm confident that he will be a key player in the safe expansion of community corrections in Norfolk County."

Power, 29, a Norwood native, worked as the Chief Legal Counsel for the House Judiciary Committee under State Representative John H. Rogers (D-Norwood) for the last two years. He was responsible for viewing and drafting all legislation referred to the House Judiciary Committee.

Power acted as a legislative liaison from the House Judiciary Committee to all divisions of the Trial Court, including the District Courts, the Juvenile Courts, and the Probate and Family Courts. He also served as a liaison to the Supreme Judicial Court and the Administrative Office of the Trial Court, including the state office of Community Corrections, with whom Power will work to establish the center in Quincy.

As Chief Legal Counsel, Power has helped to write legislation pertaining to a number of key criminal justice and public safety matters.

Power entered Suffolk University Law School in 1992 and graduated cum laude in 1995. He was admitted to the Massachusetts Bar in January, 1996.

He has been a Norwood Town Meeting member and has volunteered as a Pop Warner coach.

QUINCY HOSPITAL Asian Services Director Amanda Le (second from left), recently attended the second annual Conference on Women and Cancer held in Lowell. Co-sponsored by the Dana-Farber/Partners CancerCare, the Massachusetts Department of Public Health and the New England American Cancer Society, the conference "An East-West Dialogue: Sharing the Power of Prevention," examined how to communicate effectively with women of different cultures and make cancer prevention part of their daily lives. Also attending were Mary Chung (second from right), president of the National Asian Women's Health Organization; Vanna Lee, director of Massachusetts Prevention Center, Worcester (far left) and Somnasee Bounphasyvan, social worker at the Department of Social Services Location Program. Chung noted Vietnamese-American women have the nation's highest cervical cancer rates primarily because they do not get regular Pap smears.

Quincy College Partnership To Help Students' Job Search

Quincy College announces its partnership with jobfind.com to assist its students in their job search.

The partnership makes it easier for students, alumni and job seekers to search for a job, post a resume online, research potential employers, or find out about current employment trends. All for free.

With over 16,000 job listings, jobfind.com is the online resource for finding a career in the Northeast (New York to Maine) with companies such as Lotus Development, Ocean Spray, John Hancock, and TJX. A new feature of jobfind.com is the "saved search", allowing job seekers to view the most current listings available.

Both jobfind.com and resume port, jobfind's resume database, are free for the jobseeker. Resume port gives the job seeker the option of creating a searchable resume, allowing companies to search for candidates based on predetermined skills and background. Job seekers may choose to develop a private resume, to be e-mailed to potential employers at the request of the individual.

Jobfind Today, through on-line chats and e-mail alerts, provide job seekers with up-to-the minute employment information, hiring trends and answers to the most often asked career questions.

Quincy College has placed a direct link to jobfind.com on their web page at www.quincycollege.com. In the upcoming months, the College plans to hold introductory workshops to introduce students to jobfind and show them how to take advantage of the Internet as a career resource.

BE PREPARED...

Prepare now for the possibility of a flat tire by checking the tools and parts needed to change it. To begin with, make sure your spare tire is fully inflated. After that, check your jack. If you do not know how to use it, familiarize yourself with its use by reading the owner's manual. Learn where the recommended jacking points are on your vehicle. Then, try to loosen one or two of the lug nuts with the lug wrench provided with your car. If it does not afford sufficient leverage to loosen tight lug nuts, invest in a high-quality, 3/4 inch drive, six-point socket of the correct size. There is no substitute for getting the right tool to do the job.

Our ASE Certified service technicians at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO will do their part in making sure your car is properly maintained for maximum performance and efficiency, whether it's something as simple as an oil change, to more complex engine work. Here at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (781-843-1550), we look forward to meeting you and to giving your car the same level of personal attention we give our own. Sunoco and most major credit cards honored. We are "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer." We are your local source for propane for grills, motor homes, and converted vehicles.

HINT: Be sure to carry a charged flashlight in your vehicle so that you can see what you are doing when changing a flat on a darkened road.

Jeff Baldock On Franklin Institute Dean's List

Jeff Baldock, 79 Brooks Ave., has been named to the Dean's List for the fall semester at Franklin Institute. He received a 4.0 grade point average and is majoring in automotive technology.

He is a graduate of North Quincy High School.

NORTH QUINCY HIGH School recently celebrated the 10th year of its school business partnership with State Street and Boston Financial. Among those taking part in a recent partnership signing ceremony were, from left, Mayor James Sheet; Christine Schultz, human resources generalist, Boston Financial; George Bowman, vice president of Community Affairs, State Street; Alison Quirk, senior vice president of Human Resources Division, Boston Financial; North Quincy High School Principal Eileen Feeney; Barbara Clark, assistant vice president, State Street; Marybeth Curran, department head of Pupil Personnel Services North Quincy High School; and School Supt. Eugene Creedon.

NQHS Celebrates 10th Year Of School Business Partnership

North Quincy High School recently marked its 10th year of its school business partnership with State Street and Boston Financial with a partnership signing ceremony.

The partners called Quincy's flagship partnership a prototype for national and international school business partnerships.

"Good Ideas" and Mentoring took center stage as practices that help establish a positive school climate and encourage resiliency to students. North's teachers submitted a record 51 great ideas for projects and/or resources to enhance student learning.

In addition, this year a pilot mentoring program was initiated by Alison Quirk, senior vice president of Human Resources Division, Boston Financial. Including students from the audience, she discussed the initiative which provides juniors with career information, resources and mentoring to help with their transition year to senior year and ultimately with post secondary plans.

Speakers at the signing included Mayor James Sheets and School Supt. Eugene Creedon.

George Bowman, vice president of Community Affairs from State Street, praised the partnership and said it was worthy of being cloned. He cited the hard work of excellent teachers which insures that "a fine education is going to be delivered here."

North Quincy High School Principal Eileen Feeney, expressed her gratitude for the presence of the partnership in the high school. She spoke of the partners dedicated interest in North's students and she viewed the members of the partnership as colleagues and friends.

Donald Olson Appointed To Chamber Board Of Directors

Donald Olson, chairman and CEO of Horizon Bank & Trust Company, has been appointed to the Board of Directors of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce.

Olson is one of 40 directors who oversee the Chamber's local pro-business efforts.

"This is a true honor for several reasons," Olson said. "Recognition from your peers is always rewarding. Even though I have been an active part of the local business community for years, my appointment to the Board of Directors is also a vote of confidence in the young Horizon Bank & Trust Company.

DONALD OLSON

"Our mission, when we started the bank, was to be an institution that would support and foster the growth of the local business community -- a goal that the Chamber has also worked for these many years," Olson said.

Lions Club Offering $3,000 In Scholarships

The Quincy Lion's Club is offering $3,000 in scholarships this year to Quincy Public School Students.

The awards range from $100 to $500 each.

The Lions Club established a scholarship fund in memory of Wilfred A. Nolan, a school administrator and active member of the Lions Club.

The primary objective of the scholarship is to assist students who have demonstrated a strong commitment to community service.

Scholarship applications are now available in the Counseling Departments of Quincy and North Quincy High School.

Students should be in good academic standing to apply.

Because the Lions Club focuses on improving the lives of those who are visually challenged, special consideration will be given to students with eyesight problems.

Application deadline is March 1.

Adoption Information Meeting At Adams Inn

Interfaith Social Services will offer an adoption information meeting, free of charge, on Wednesday, Feb. 3 at 7 p.m. at the Adams Inn, 29 Hancock St., North Quincy.

Snow date is Feb. 10.

Adoption social workers from Interfaith Social Services (ISS) will present information on adopting children born in the U.S. and internationally. A local family, who has adopted through ISS, as well as an adoptee, will share their personal experiences and answer questions.

Adoption offers children a chance to live in loving, nurturing homes. Massachusetts has thousands of children waiting for families; while thousands of children around the U.S. and throughout the world also wait. At the information meeting, one can learn more about becoming adoptive parents and how one can help these children become part of their caring home.

Interfaith Social Services (formerly Protestant Social Service Bureau) is a private, non-profit, non-sectarian agency, which has been providing adoptive services since 1974. ISS places children of all religions and races.

For more information or to register, call Interfaith Social Services in Quincy at 617-773-6203.

First Time Homebuyer's Workshop Feb. 26 - 27

The Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc., a MHF and HUD approved First Time Homebuyer Counseling Agency, will hold another First Time Homebuyer's Workshop Saturday, Feb. 20 and 27.

The workshop will be at the South Shore Savings Bank, 1530 Main St., Rt. 18, Weymouth, from 9 a.m. until 1 p.m. Attendance at both workshops is mandatory to qualify for the many different mortgage options available through the Mass Housing Finance Agency, Soft Second Programs and other financing options.

The agenda will be comprehensive and individualized. Focus will be on different aspects of the home buying process, including how to locate a property within your budget, how to make an offer, and determining the best mortgage program for your needs. Advanced registration is required and space is limited. The fee for this workshop is $36.

For more information and registration forms, call Deborah Mullaney at (617) 479-8181 x172.

This workshop is sponsored by the town of Weymouth and the Department of Housing and Community Development.

Jason Bouffard Joins Flynn And Co. As Marketing Coordinator

Daniel J. Flynn and Company announces the addition of marketing professional Jason Bouffard to its staff.

Bouffard, a Quincy native, will contribute to the firm's efforts to increase awareness of its commercial and residential properties.

Bouffard has a strong background in marketing communications. He has contributed to marketing efforts for a local flooring manufacturer and has also served as a freelance writer for several area newspapers. He received a Bachelor of

Application Deadline Jan. 27 For Custodians' Civil Service Exam

The next civil service examination for building custodians on the municipal level will take place Saturday, March 27, announces State Rep. Steve Tobin.

Individuals interested in taking the test must submit an application to the Massachusetts Human Resources Division by Friday, Jan. 27.

The written examination will be designed to test, where practicable, the knowledge, skills and abilities which have been established as qualifications for the position. Applicants who pass the written examination will be ranked on the eligible list according to their relative scores and applicable statutory preferences (residency, veterans).

To obtain an application, interested parties can either visit the Personnel Department at Quincy City Hall, or the Human Resource Division at One Ashburton Place in Boston, Monday through Friday, between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m.

For more information or questions call the Massachusetts Human Resources Division's 24-Hour Examination Information Hotline at 727-3777 ext. 246.

Ward 5 Association Honors Edward Keohane, Jane Sullivan

The Ward 5 Community Association presented awards and elected officers at its recent annual meeting.

Edward Keohane of the Keohane Funeral Homes was honored as "Ward 5 Citizen of the Year" award for his service to the area and its residents.

Cited among his activities and accomplishments were: chairmanship of the Quincy Partnership which is raising $100,000 for a decorative fountain in Merrymount Park; his chairmanship of Quincy's Flag Day Parade Committee and recognition by the Department of Environmental Management as the first funeral home in Massachusetts to reach the $10,000 in donations to the Mass Re-Leaf tree planting program.

Jane Sullivan of Sullivan's Corner Antiques was recognized as the "Volunteer of the Year", for her dedication to the association in fund-raising and other activities.

"We would like to thank all who have tried to make our association stronger and our community more viable during 1998", Association President Doug Gutro said.

Ward 4 Councillor Steve Durkin presented his

"Councillor's Award" to Gutro for his commitment to the association and leadership in the formation and development of the Wollaston Beach Task Force.

Students of Margo Stockmeyer's 10th grade biology class at North Quincy High School gave a presentation detailing the many environmental clean-up projects they were involved in during 1998.

Doug Gutro of Weston Ave. was elected president.

Tim McAloon of Randlett St. was elected treasurer and Steve Golden of Ridgeway St. secretary.

Joseph Mulvey, a co-founder of the association stepped down after two years as vice president as did Cathleen Kyle after serving two years as treasurer.

David Murphy of Marlboro St., moved up from secretary to vice president.

Gutro commended Mulvey and Kyle for their service.

"Our 1999 agenda, among other things, will take us from advocacy to action when it comes to a cleaner Wollaston Beach," Gutro said. "Everyone who lives in the ward deserves

HIGHPOINT

Over the last year, we at Congress Group Ventures, the developer of the Highpoint residential community, feel we have prepared a sound, viable plan for the development of our site on Quarry Street. We firmly believe that the Highpoint development will not only be instrumental in the continued economic growth of the City of Quincy, but, more importantly, will be beneficial to the neighborhood, and the City's residents and businesses.

Positive Community Advantages:

- The creation of over 50 acres of safe open space.
- The donation of a 3-acre site at the southeast corner of the development for the proposed headquarters for the Quincy Community Action Program (QCAP). The donation of this parcel is made in recognition of the importance of QCAP in its service to the people of Quincy and its need for a new headquarters.
- Improvement of water distribution lines and pressure to the Hospital Hill area of Quincy through the installation of a cross connection to the main on Quarry Street and the high service water tower.
- Improvement of storm water drainage and reduction of storm water flow from the site.

Additional Highpoint Highlights:

- Congress Group Ventures has reduced the number of units in the development from 1,391 luxury apartments to 1,116 luxury apartments and 125 senior residences.
- Traffic enhancement along Quarry Street and the renovation of 9 intersections will be part of the development project.
- A final and complete environmental clean up of the Quarry Street site as required by the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection will be conducted.

You may review the Highpoint plan in greater detail at the Thomas Crane Library.
Please visit our Website, currently under construction, at www.highpointquincy.com.

"Congress Group's generous donation of the 3-acre site for our long-awaited, new headquarters is a welcomed gift. Through Congress Group's recognition of the importance of our work, we will now be able to build a new facility that will enable us to continue to provide our valuable services to the people of Quincy."

Rosemary Wahlberg
Executive Director
Quincy Community Action Program, Inc.

"I am impressed with Congress Group's ability to listen to the concerns voiced by the community and its citizens and their continuing efforts to alleviate these issues. Due to the quality of the Highpoint development and the outstanding reputation of Congress Group, Quincy Business Council has voted to overwhelmingly support this project."

graves, refugees and destruction on a colossal scale."

The Bosnians were dehumanized as a tool of hatred, and Sarajevo, once the showpiece of ethnic harmony in 1984 during the Olympic Games, became an impact area for ethnic hatred, he said.

"Martin Luther King was the object of much hatred and suffered greatly as a result," Sinnott continued. "Through it all, he refused to hate his enemies. He knew that hatred caused men to regard others as less than human and this dehumanization allowed men to commit evil acts..."

"Yet, he rejected such blind hatred, not only in his enemies but in his friends and warned against the dangers of stereotyping and labeling.

Even though Dr. King knew "the forces of bigotry" could cut him down at any time, he chose to carry on the struggle for dignity and equality, Sinnott said.

King demonstrated moral courage, said Sinnott, just as the Sarajevo surgeon and his two daughters did, remaining in Bosnia to serve the wounded.

Moral courage also was exemplified by the reporters who toiled in the basement of a shelled building to publish daily the Oslobođenje Newspaper, the only source of credible information, then distribute it throughout the city.

"Dr. King was aware of the great danger of advocating what was an unpopular and revolutionary cause," Sinnott stated. "And yet, he persevered, ultimately sacrificing his own life for that cause... That was moral courage."

In closing, Sinnott he read a letter he had sent from Sarajevo to his oldest daughter, about how the citizens had painted brushstrokes of red at every site where someone had been killed.

These splashes of paint were called "the red roses of Sarajevo." Initially, Sinnott said he thought it "was strange and a bit mean that the name of something so beautiful should be used to remember such a horrible event. But he quickly realized the residents "were trying to give something lasting and beautiful to a moment of horror, to find some good in a terrible event by reminding each of us...that life, every life, is precious and beautiful and worth remembering."

He concluded his letter asking his daughter to remember that "every person deserves the chance to enjoy life in the same way that you want to enjoy life...Look for the good and you'll usually find it," he said.

Barbara Fenby, last year's award recipient, presented two students with youth awards on behalf of the Human Rights Commission.

Both were singled out as ideal role models.

Sally Ramos, a sophomore, has been a volunteer at the Germantown Neighborhood Center for the past two years and has worked on many projects, including a two-week summer program. She also plays tennis and belongs to chorus at school.

The other student recognized was Christine Diep, a high honor roll student who belongs to chorus and the drama club and is an assistant coach for the track team. She also volunteers serving meals at Fr. Bill's Place and "demonstrates a commitment to positive change."

The morning program included two Snug Harbor Community School students, Olivia Lynn and Brian Wong, reading excerpts from Dr. King's "I Have A Dream" speech, and concluded with students from the Broad Meadow Middle School singing Dion's "Abraham, Martin and John," a song from the 1960s.

There also was an original song, "I Have A Dream," the students sang to the tune of "Twinkle, Twinkle, Little Star":

"Doctor Martin Luther King/Was a man who had a dream/Dreamed of love and brotherhood/Dreamed of people doing good/Now in everything we do/We shall make his dream come true."

Mayor James Sheets also spoke. He said he remembers the words of Dr. King spoken more than 30 years ago, now spoken by his son, Martin Luther King III.

"To sum it up, the life and words of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. And his son are simple, profound, eternal.

"They emphasize love, not hate; mercy, not revenge; hope, not hopelessness; goodness, not evil; brotherhood and sisterhood, not division; peace, not violence.

"If we practiced these things, then there would be peace in the world," Sheets concluded.

The human rights squad of the Broad Meadows Middle School recited a violence-free pledge:

"I will treat others with respect regardless of race, color, religion, national origin, physical or mental challenges, sexual orientation or gender; I pledge not to abuse others in any way.

"I will not spread or listen to rumors.

SNUG HARBOR STUDENTS Martisha Johnson, Shantelle Johnson, Daniela Hyacinthe-David, Olivia Lynn, Brian Wong, Keenan Pinckney, Terrell Johnson and Marty Wong, with their teacher, Deanne White-Hebert, prepare to sing a song about Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Olivia Lynn and Brian Wong, fourth graders, also read excerpts from King's "I Have A Dream" speech.

"I will not bully anyone or give 'the silent treatment.'"

"I will stick up for people who are being mistreated.

"I pledge to share my feelings with friends.

"I will talk to people who can and will help me.

"I will listen to others.

"I will remember it's

O.K. to be angry, but I will not hurt myself or anyone else because of anger I have.

"I pledge to be responsible for my actions.

"I will not step on the conflict escalator.

"Instead I will create healthy alternatives to violence.

"I will remember Broad Meadows Middle School's Violence Prevention slogan here and out in my community. 'Don't escalate, retaliate!'"

The program concluded with everyone joining hands and singing "We Shall Overcome," another song from the King era, led by City Council President Peter Kolson.

Quincy Holds On To Down Plymouth South

By CHARLES ROSS

Quincy High School boys' basketball took an early lead and held on for a 60-57 win over Plymouth South in recent action.

Dan Kelley had 20 points for the Presidents and Jim Munchbach added 18. Coach John Franceschini had praise as well for senior guard Jeremy Theberge who scored 7 points and played good defense in the win. Junior guard Chase Clark also played well for Quincy.

"It was a great win for

BOYS' BASKETBALL

Quincy as we had a good team effort that gave us the win," Coach Franceschini said.

Last Friday night, Quincy traveled to Bridgewater-Raynham and the drive down Route 24 was not a positive one as the Presidents were handled 76-35 by the Trojans, who sport the best record in the Old Colony League. Quincy got down by 16 points early due to poor shooting, cut it to 11, but never could get back in the game.

Junior Dan Kelley popped in 15; sophomore guard Mark Robinson had 10 in the losing cause. Franceschini tipped his hat to junior forward Sean Fitzpatrick who had 6 points, but pulled down 13 rebounds in the game. The loss puts Quincy at 3-6 on the season.

Red Raiders Bow, Rebound, Fall Again

When North Quincy plays Barnstable High School in any sport, they start off with a 2 to 1 disadvantage. Barnstable is the largest school in the Old Colony League with about 2,200 students while North Quincy (and Quincy too) only has about 1,100 students.

Last Tuesday the Cape Cod Red Raiders handed North Quincy a 68-54 defeat. Last Friday, North rebounded from the Barnstable loss and came away with a 57-54 victory over Plymouth South. Matt McCann had 16 points in the game which all came in the first half. Frank McNamara was Mr.

Second half for North in the game as he put in all of his 17 in the second half. Adam Woo had 7 points and in crunch time McCann hit 2 key foul shots to preserve the win for the Red Raiders.

Last Saturday, North played a non-league game against South Boston, which is rated as the sixth best team in the state and came out on the short end of a 70-58 score. North trailed by only 8 with a minute to go, but South Boston with some great outside shooting put the game away. Frank McNamara had 10; Matt McCann, Adam Woo and Phil McGillicuddy each had 9 points in the game.

Coach Ted Stevenson, while not pleased at the Red Raiders 1-10 start, hopes that his young team will turn things around in the second half of the season. "I expect that as we play teams a second time, we will be much more competitive and pull out some games" Stevenson said. "With a young team you have to be patient to let things come together and I feel that we will do that from now on as the first half has been a learning experience, now we can put that experience to better use."

Freshmen Raiders Win One, Lose Two

Two Old Colony League losses bracketed a convincing league win for the North Quincy High School freshmen boys' basketball team. The team's season record now stands at 3-6, 2-5 in the OCL.

The Raiders suffered a tough loss at Barnstable. After trailing by 12 at half-time, 29-17, North found its offense in the second half before falling, 61-58. John O'Connell led North with 18 points. The Raiders got offensive contributions from Dave Rochon, Wayne Moynihan and Dennis Thomson, with 14, 11, and 6 points respectively. Jackie Liuzzo's 4-for-4 from the free throw line wasn't matched by the rest of his teammates as North shot a combined 12 for 21 from the charity stripe in the three-point loss.

Back at home against Plymouth South, Dennis Thomson's 3-point play gave North a 10-lead early in the first half. Seven North turnovers in the next four minutes let the visiting Panthers pull ahead 17-16 until John O'Connell's two free throws gave the Raiders the lead for good with six minutes to go in the first half.

Bert Vivatykan's steal and layup ignited a closing flurry as North finished the half with a 20-0 run to lead by 19 at the half. North Quincy cruised in the second half, until a Panthers' run cut the lead to six, 42-36 with 3:49 remaining. Eric Stanton's 10 second-half points kept Plymouth South at bay as North finished strong to win 56-39. Fourteen players scored for North Quincy, led by Stanton's 12 and John O'Connell's 11. Dan Dugan led a Raider resurgence (17-20) at the free throw line going 4/4 to go with his 3 assists. Center Phong Quach had 3 rebounds to go with his 3 steals.

North Quincy then played cross-city rival Quincy in the first of its two matchups this season. The Presidents took the first game with a 57-41 win.

Quincy's full court pressure harassed North into numerous turnovers as the Presidents took an early 8-0 lead. John O'Connell and Adam O'Hara finally broke the scoring ice for the Raiders in the seventh minute and North kept pace with the Presidents for the next several minutes. Troy Coleman's 3-pointer at 4:30 ignited an 11-0 closing run for Quincy as the Presidents pulled away to a 32-12 half-time lead.

Quincy maintained the big lead for much of the second half. Back-to-back 3-point shots by Mike Haines and Matt Donovan cut the Presidents' lead to 10, 45-35 with 4:07 remaining. North would get no closer, however, as Quincy finished strong.

Troy Coleman led all scorers with 19 points. Mike Lorenzano and Brian Sorenson contributed 13 and 7 points for Quincy.

For North Quincy, Wayne Moynihan and John O'Connell had 14 each. Mike Haines added 6. Sean Ginty and Mark Maher did a good second-half defensive job on Coleman who had only four points in the second half after outscoring North by himself in the first Presidents Eye Second Half Improvement

By CHARLES ROSS

Quincy High School girls' basketball Coach Bob Noble is looking for an improved second part of the season, after the First Ladies have gone 0-8 so far this season.

Quincy was a victim of too many turnovers last Tuesday losing to Plymouth South, 54-39. Kelley Raymer led Quincy with 13 points and Kaitlyn McLaughlin added 12 points, 6 rebounds and 3 blocked shots.

Last Friday at home,

GIRLS' BASKETBALL

Quincy bowed to Bridgewater-Raynham, 76-35. Quincy got into early foul trouble after playing even with the Trojans for the first 6 minutes of the game. B-R took charge from there and ran away with the win. Kaitlyn McLaughlin had 15 points for Quincy and Caitlin Nichol played an outstanding game for the First ladies. Quincy will soon get the services back of Colleen Nichol, who has been out several weeks with a broken hand. "It's hard to lose your best player to injury, but a lot of the girls have stepped up and given us good effort," Coach Noble said. "I expect that our play will improve in the second half with the addition of Colleen back into our lineup."

Satkevich Backbones Fontbonne To North Quincy Tourney Crown

Fontbonne Academy varsity basketball team captured the North Quincy Christmas Tournament championship recently by defeating Weymouth 55-26, and tournament host North Quincy, 54-36.

Fontbonne junior Amy Satkevich of Quincy had an outstanding tournament, scoring 16 points in the first round and 16 points and 12 rebounds against an aggressive North Quincy team in the championship game. For her efforts, Satkevich was named tournament MVP.

Sophomore point guard Casey Ridge and junior Julie Keane, also of Quincy, played important roles in Fontbonne's success. In the two wins they combined for 10 steals, 10 assists and 14 points while effectively running Fontbonne's offensive attack.

The Duck's sweep in the tournament ran their season record to a perfect 5-0. Fontbonne is coached by Quincy resident Clare Murphy.

Shedevils Win Big

The St. Joseph Shedevils started out in a full-court press, jumped out to a quick lead, and never looked back enroute to a 42-12 win over Holy Name of West Roxbury.

The win snapped a two-game losing streak for the Shedevils.

More balanced scoring was the key to a strong showing. Jaclyn Brogna was high scorer with 18 points. Colleen Young came alive on offense with 10 points, and Meghan Chagnon added six. Jania Mungalsingh, Allison Horrigan and Nicole Glasheen all got their first baskets of the season.

The Shedevils continue their South Shore Parochial League competition next Tuesday visiting St. Columbkilles, then Blessed Sacrament Friday.

ATTENTION QUINCY RESIDENTS

Due to Martin Luther King Day, Monday, January 18, 1999, rubbish collection will be a day late. Monday's rubbish will be collected on Tuesday. Tuesdays will be collected on Wednesday, etc. There will be a Saturday collection for rubbish usually collected on Friday. This applies to all routes.

City Champs Crowned In Elks Free Throw Contest

Six Quincy boys and girls have been crowned city champions and have taken the first step in the Elks National "Hoop Shoot" free throw contest.

Winners are champions in three age categories in the local competition sponsored by the Quincy Lodge of Elks 943 and supervised by Quincy Recreation Department.

Champions are Aileen Croke and Christopher Boyd in the 8-9 age group; Jessie Buckley and Julianna Eagles in the 10-11 age group; and Kyle Costa and Julia McGunigle in the 12-13 age group.

Each participant had the opportunity to shoot 25 free throws for score. Champions advance to the Circle District Tournament. District winners continue to advance toward the national championship.

There are more than three millions boys and girls involved in the first level of shoot offs.

The Quincy Recreation Department has been conducting the event for the Quincy Lodge for more than 20 years. Recreation Director Barry Welch said he was "extremely grateful for the continued support of the Quincy Lodge of Elks. This program is a wonderful experience for youngsters ages 8-13.

"The Elks always have the interest of our youth as a primary goal of its organization. I particularly want to thank Exalted Ruler Charlie New and Hoop Shoot Chairman Ed Miller for their work on the Hoop Shoot."

The Elks presented trophies to Quincy's first three places in each age group. More than 300 youngsters took part in the contest starting in local neighborhood gyms. Each gym winner received a certificate and was eligible for the city championship.

Runners-up were:

Jessica Powers and Steve Connolly (ages 8-9); Kelly Barden and Adam Valentino (10-11); and Kerry Rogers and Frank McKenna (12-13). Third place trophies went to Lammy Papalambros (8-9), Kristen Garber and Joe Griffin (10-11); and Erin Croke and George Lau (12-13).

Other local youngsters advancing to the championship round were:

Girls ages 8-9: Christine Caples, Hope McDonough, Ashlee Myett and Virginia Wong.

Boys ages 8-9: Bill Ayer, Martin Bowes, David Hennessey, Matt Jaehnnig, Ethan Thomas and Bobby Yovino.

Girls (10-11): Kerri Ann Keaney, Katie Kelly, Jennifer Petitti and Stephanie Tetreault.

Weed, and Steven Yovino. Girls (12-13): Deja Bergstrom and Stephanie Fiandaca.

Boys (12-13): Bryan Donelin, Josh Giordani, Kenny Johnson, Brendan Linnane, Jonathan O'Connor, David Oronte, Dean Sandonato, and Jamie Smith.

North Ties Barnstable Before Injury Bug Strikes

This is almost the kind of week that North Quincy High School hockey coach Bob Doyle would like to forget.

High point of the week was the 3-3 tie with a very tough Barnstable team. Chad Fitzpatrick, freshman Charles Sorento and junior defenseman Ross O'Driscoll scored for the NQ Red Raiders against the Barnstable Red Raiders. Chris Carthas again was strong in goal for North with 28 saves, including two on breakaways. Coach Doyle credited his team "with a real solid effort against a senior laden strong team from the Cape."

The other two games for North Quincy's icemen were not as good as they dropped a 6-2 decision to Plymouth South last Saturday. Ryan Barrett had both goals for North which was hit with the injury bug as junior center's Rob Celeta and Jay Allen both went down with shoulder injuries. Sophomore Matt Holt was also lost for the game due to a concussion.

On Monday the Red

Raiders ran into a buzzsaw as they dropped a 5-4 decision to Durfee High School in a non-league game. Mike Sullivan had a goal and an assist, Joe Fitzpatrick got his first goal of the season and Paul Markarian scored two in the losing cause. The Raiders put 52 shots on the Drupe goalie, but came away with a loss.

North stands at 5-3-2 on the season.

Grazioso Powers Car Wash

Matt Grazioso was a perfect 10 -- 10 points that is -- as Quincy Car Wash cleaned up Colonial Federal Savings Bank 9-3 in recent Pee Wee House hockey action.

Grazioso had 5 goals and 5 assists to highlight the offense for Car Wash. Other goal scorers were Bob Newcomb, Brian Sorenson, Joe Sweeney and Mike Faherty. Also assisting were Mike Bourcher, Dan Donovan, Joe Sweeney and Bob Newcomb.

For Colonial, Josh Giordani had two goals and Patrick Maxey one. Maxey, along with Dan Magaldi, Chris Tufo and Mark DeCoste added assists.

In other games, Mike Morrissey cranked it up against Coffee Break Cafe, winning 8-3 led by Tim Duggan's 5-goal barrage. Pat Casper had four points (2 goals, 2 assists) for victors. Tim Sommers had the other Morrissey score. Other playmakers were Steve Kelley (2 assists), John McClintock (2 assists), Matt MacNeil, Chris Tierney and Tim Sommers (1 assist each).

Terrence O'Connell paced Colonial with 2 goals and an assist. Kristin DiMattio had a goal and an assist. Chris Haldoupis and Kristina Manganaro had one assist apiece.

Quincy Car Wash slipped past Local #103 IBEW, 5-3, as Liam Powers notched 4 goals. Dan Donovan had the other Car Wash score. Assisting for the winners were Dan Nieznajomski and Joe Cafano (2 each), Tim Mullen and Mike Boucher.

For Local, Eddie Laura, Anthony Fernandez and Pat Malone each had two points (1 goal, 1 assist).

Tim Duggan's 4 goals sparked Mike Morrissey to a 6-2 win over Colonial Federal Savings Bank. Rich Stone and Tim Sommers also scored for Morrissey.

Matt MacNeil (3 assists), Sean O'Neill and Rich Stone (1 assist each) were key offensive players for Morrissey.

Josh Giordani and Mark DeCoste lit the lamp for Colonial. Cory Bythrow and Jake McQuinn assisted.

Balanced Westminster Wins

Westminster Dodge's balanced scoring attack keyed a 15-3 win over Pat Foley Painting in recent Squirt House hockey action.

Ten different Westminster players registered at least one point in the victory. Pacing the offense were Andrew Donovan (4 goals, 1 assist) and Evan Harrington (3 goals, 1 assist). Other multiple-point players were Dave Tapper (1 goal, 2 assists), Ray Marchand (2 goals), Brian Carney (1 goal, 1 assist), Jeff Bailey (1 goal, 1 assist), and Dan Poggi (1 goal, 1 assist).

Westminster also got goals from Greg Jenkins and Steve Graham.

For Pat Foley Painting, Steve Bythrow scored twice and Charlie McGee once. Pat Foley had an assist.

In other games, Smith & Brink, PC blasted Burgin Platner, 14-3, behind Mike McKeon's double hat trick (6 goals). Other offensive standouts for the winners included Ian McRae (2 goals, 2 assists), Cory Lumaghi (1 goal, 2 assists), Michael Glynn (1 goal, 2 assists), and Anthony Gilbody (2 goals). Tom Keefe and Joe Morris also scored while Chris Garvey added an assist.

Burgin Platner got two goals from Alex Smith and one from Glenn Gibbons. Matt Tobin and Zachary Sloane had assists.

The Quincy Sun downed Keohane's 5-2, behind two-goal efforts by Robert McCann and Andrew Gormley. Mike McPherson had the only Sun goal. Assists went to Brendan Foley (2), Frank Sorrento and Ryan O'Keefe.

Mike Giordani scored twice for Keohane's. Craig Calley had an assist.

Ayers, D & H, Metal Win

Bruce Ayers Club skated past Barry's Deli 6-4 led by Ricky Penzo's two goals in recent Mite House hockey action.

Chris Brown, Derek Murphy, John Sullivan and Brian Sullivan also lit the lamp for Ayers Club. Assists were recorded by James Corbett (2), Matt Bridgeman, Chris Brown and John Sullivan.

Goal scorers for Barry's Deli were Sean Dunn, Kevin Magoon, Brendan

MITES

Foley and Emily Rooney. Assisting were Brendan Foley, Mike Forbes and Dan Nazzaro.

In other action, Doran & Horrigan blanked Paul Harold Club, 2-0. Greg Calahan and Glenn Peterson scored and Brendan Gilmore and Mike LeBel assisted for the winners. Goalie Steven Barresi earned the shut-out.

Quincy Sheet Metal shut out Lydon Russell, 2-0, as Matt Furey and Mike Leone scored. David Bove, Jeff Giordani and Josh McKeon had assists. Andrew Burba was solid between the pipes to earn the shut-out.

Jay Cashman and Doherty & White skated to a 1-1 tie. Jeff Metcalfe scored for Cashman and Mark Gilbody countered for Doherty & White.

Research works.

Medicare Costs Increase For 1999

By LAURIE ZASTROW

The 1999 increases in the hospital costs payable by Medicare beneficiaries—the Part A hospital insurance deductible and the Part B medical insurance premium—were announced this month. The deductible and the premium are recalculated each year to reflect changes in the costs of health care or changes in Medicare law.

The Part A deductible for beneficiaries admitted to hospitals in 1999 will be $768, up from this year's $764. The monthly Part B premium will increase to $45.50 a month, up from $43.80. The small increase largely reflects savings from reductions in Medicare hospital payments and other program changes signed into law in the balanced budget agreement to help protect and preserve the Medicare hospital insurance Trust Fund. Last year the deductible also rose by only $4.

The Part A deductible is a beneficiary's only cost for up to 60 days of covered inpatient hospital services. For hospital stays longer than 60 days, a beneficiary will be responsible for $192 per day (an increase of $1) for the 61st through 90th days, and $384 per day (an increase of $2) for the 91st through 150th days. The skilled-nursing facility coinsurance, which must be paid after the first 20 days of skilled nursing care, will increase by 50 cents to $96 a day.

When a beneficiary needs therapeutic care in a skilled nursing facility after at least three consecutive days of inpatient hospital care, Medicare pays 100 percent of covered expenses for the first 20 days. The beneficiary is responsible for $96.00 per day (an increase of .50) for the 21st through the 100th day.

Low income beneficiaries may get help in paying Medicare premiums, deductibles and co-insurance through their State Medicaid programs. Contact your state Medicaid office or Public Assistance office for more information.

(Laurie Zastrow is Social Security manager in Quincy.)

Prostate Cancer Support Group At Quincy Hospital

The Prostate Cancer Support Group at Quincy Hospital meets the third Wednesday of every month, 7 to 9 p.m. in hospital conference room D, 114 Whitwell St.

The support group is for prostate cancer survivors and for those diagnosed with prostate cancer. Prostate cancer survivors formed the group to show care, concern, acceptance, and understanding of the special needs of patients with prostate cancer.

Monthly meetings provide support and information from specialists in various fields related to prostate cancer such as surgery, radiation, medicine, nutrition and psychology. Most meetings end in an informal discussion.

Membership is open and free. Spouses, family members and health care providers are also encouraged to participate.

For more information contact Tom Farmer, (617) 471-4582 or Quincy Hospital public relations, (617) 376-4016.

Etiquette For Kids' Class At Beechwood Center

A four-week etiquette class for children will begin Tuesday, Jan. 26 at the Beechwood Community Life Center, 440 East Squantum St.

Image consultant and former Paris fashion model Judi Vankevich will teach the "Manners are Fun" class Tuesday afternoons.

The second session begins Feb. 23. Cost is $65.

Pre-registration is required and there is limited enrollment.

The self-confidence-building program is designed to enable children to handle social situations with ease, said Beechwood Director Sharon Beals.

"Children will learn important social skills such as how to meet and greet people, how to address adults, give and accept compliments and telephone skills. They'll discover the ABC's of dining—the uses of silverware, glasses and napkins, which knife and fork to use, posture at the table, other dining 'how-to's' and much more," Beals said.

For more information, call 617-471-5712.

SCOTT DEWARE

*A Thought
For The Week*

It has been said that life is a mirror. If you frown at it; it frowns back. If you smile, it returns the greeting. . .

Have you ever noticed that no matter how humble the circumstances, how difficult their tasks and work, some people seem to enjoy life immensely?

Those who use happiness as a tool for living appreciate, enjoy, and find satisfaction now in everything they have and in everything they do. Their condition in life may not be ideal, and need not represent the limit of their ambitions. But being content for the present, they can play with imagination and work with enthusiasm. . . Those who make happiness a goal, push it off into the future and make it something to struggle for, rather than something to know and enjoy. To make happiness a goal is never to lose it. . . To make happiness a tool is never to lose it. . .

Your Horoscope by Natasha

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A business matter may be more complicated than you realize. You're in a reflective mood this week, but should guard against worry and too much introspection.

TAURUS (April 20 May 20) Try not to be heavy-handed with family now. In business, others are likely to play their cards close to the chest. A travel plan needs further thought.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A cash-flow problem may dampen your enthusiasm for socializing this week. It may be a game of one-upmanship with someone you recently met. Accent practicality in business.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Someone who acts in poor taste may upset your sensibilities this week. Try not to sell yourself short in your job interests. Delays experienced over the weekend are only temporary.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Don't shut yourself off from a close tie. Resolve issues between friends or family members amicably. Some face extra responsibilities in connection with the home this weekend.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Extra expenses may arise in connection with children this week. You may be at a stalemate regarding a financial issue. Socializing may be low on your priority list during the weekend.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) You may find yourself involved in a conversation with an opinionated person early in the week. Work delays may dampen your spirits somewhat, so try to remain patient and upbeat.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Try not to let career concerns become an issue between you and a loved one. Others make demands on your time, so your own priorities may be on hold for the time being.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) You may have to say no to someone's request for financial assistance. Friends seem wrapped up in their own problems and may not be good company over the weekend.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) You could overreact now to someone's criticisms, but it's not the end of the world if everyone doesn't agree with you. Try to remain positive in outlook now.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Things may not happen as fast as you'd like where business interests are concerned this week. Try not to feel unappreciated. Be cooperative with close ties for weekend socializing.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Be wary of those who would take advantage in financial matters. A friend may burden you with his or her problems. Socializing is iffy this week.

BUSINESS

3 Appointments At Eastern Bank

Eastern Bank has announced three appointments with an average of nearly 20 years of experience in commercial banking.

Paul F. Mollica, as Senior Vice President, will be responsible for the Middle Market and Asset Based Lending business. Mollica joins Eastern from Fleet Bank where he served as Senior Vice President and Senior Team Leader responsible for Fleet's South Commercial Lending Group. His primary focus will be to continue increasing Middle Market and Asset Based Lending areas while building new business throughout Greater Boston.

Deborah J. Drapella was named Vice President in Eastern's Middle Market Lending Group. For the past six years, she has served as Vice President with Fleet Bank where she actively managed the largest portfolio in their South Commercial Lending Group.

The third addition to Eastern's Middle Market Group is Thomas Brady. As Vice President, he will focus on increasing Eastern's Middle Market Portfolio. He most recently was a Vice President with Fleet Bank in their South Commercial Lending Group.

"With the addition of these three talented individuals to the Middle Market Lending Group, we have significantly enhanced our ability to build sizable commercial banking relationships in Southeastern Massachusetts," stated Robert E. Griffin, Executive Vice President.

John Farmer, Vice President, and head of the Division's Cash Management Group, will continue to focus on developing Cash Management and Treasury Services relationships with existing clients, while building new business throughout Greater Boston.

"We're very excited to have these three talented individuals join our team, and expect them to make an immediate impact on our business in Southeastern Massachusetts," said Robert Griffin, Executive Vice President.

Eastern Bank Corporation, a mutual bank holding company, and its wholly-owned subsidiaries, Eastern Bank and Eastern Bank and Trust Company, is a $2.5 billion full service company with 42 offices throughout Greater Boston. Eastern's lines of businesses include consumer banking, trust and private banking, investment management, mortgage banking, consumer finance, commercial lending, asset-based lending, and equipment leasing.

HORIZON BANK and Trust Company President James Barbieri, Chairman-CEO Donald Olson, and Executive Vice President-Chief Financial Officer John Fanciullo help hoist the sign onto the company's new offices at 501 John W. Mahar Highway, Braintree.

Local Buick Technician Finalist In National Competition

John Galbraith, a service technician with South Shore Buick in Quincy, was a finalist in Buick Motors' National Buick Expert Service Teams (BEST) Competition which recognizes Buick's most skilled technicians.

Galbraith was one of only 42 finalists out of the 1,840 technicians who signed up with the competition began in February. Although he did not win the finals in Las Vegas, Galbraith said he feels privileged to have been a part of the competition.

"I was competing against the best in the business. On top of that," he said, "I feel my skills are better than they're ever been."

The competition, held at Las Vegas' Desert Inn, consisted of three parts. First, the finalists were each assigned to a 1999 Buick Park Avenue with the goal of locating and removing 10 "bugs" planted inside them. Technicians then had to diagnose two hand-build modules that included various electrical components. The contest culminated with a 50-question "closed book" exam.

"All 42 service technicians involved in this competition are winners," said Brad Flaen, Buick's assistant general sales manager in charge of customer satisfaction. "Some scored more points . . . but if we did it again tomorrow, we would have different winners. This was a tremendous learning experience and the ultimate winner will be the Buick customer."

Hancock Park Receives Accreditation

Hancock Park Rehabilitation and Nursing Center, 164 Parkingway, Quincy, recently received accreditation from the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Healthcare Organizations (JCAHO).

"Accreditation standards exceed federal and state requirements," said Marianna Kern Grachek, executive director, Long Term Care Program of the Joint Commission. "Further, because this is a voluntary program, accreditation represents Hancock Park's decision to be recognized for its efforts to provide quality health care."

"By achieving accreditation, Hancock Park has joined a select group of Joint Commission accredited long term care organizations. Only about 2,000 long term care organizations have received accreditation nationwide," she added.

Richard Johnson, executive director of Hancock Park, praised caregivers and nonprofessional employees alike in working to meet the Joint Commission's Benchmark of quality. "When we opened our doors in October of 1996, we promised to bring quality healthcare to Quincy. Our staff worked hard to achieve this recognition, and continues to provide quality care. We view our accreditation as another step towards excellence."

Hancock Park is owned and managed by Norwell-based Welch Healthcare and Retirement, and is a 142-bed skilled rehabilitation and nursing center that also provides sub-acute care, specialized Alzheimer's programs, Adult Day Health, and Assisted Living residences.

Little Willows Preschool And Day Care Opens

The Barbette Nursery School recently reopened as Little Willows Preschool and Day Care at 50 Willow St., Wollaston, under the direction of Christine Tierney.

With an emphasis on quality educational programs for young children ages 2.9 to 5, Little Willows offers exciting, innovative programs on a full and part-time schedule to meet the needs of families, administered by certified teachers.

Little Willows has sponsored class participation to help the Muscular Dystrophy Association through a Hop-a-Thon and a Mini-March to benefit Cystic Fibrosis Foundation. Each event was supported by parents and gave them an opportunity for children to learn and become involved in helping make a difference.

Originally established in 1930, by the Pickles family, Barbette Nursery School prospered by supplying quality programs for young children with a personal flair. It carried on a tradition within the Quincy community until last June when Barbette Nursery and Kindergarten closed due to a retirement.

Tierney is educated and licensed in early childhood education and her background includes experience with infant and toddler care, preschool, special needs, summer camp, and teen counseling. She holds American Red Cross certification in lifeguard and water safety instruction, and is a certified CPR instructor for the professional rescuer (infant through to adult) and crisis prevention and intervention.

Tierney said she is pleased with the reception Little Willows has received and is currently accepting new enrollments for summer and fall sessions.

Renaissance Coffee And Tea Emporium Opens

Renaissance Coffee and Tea Emporium, offering a selection of fine coffees and teas served fresh or packaged to take home, has opened at 45 Billings Rd., North Quincy.

According to proprietor Kevin McGurl, the shop is reminiscent of an 1850's era coffee roasting house with brick walls, hard wood floors and period furnishings and features a 20-foot original mural by long-time area artist James McGurl.

Kevin McGurl, who attended the Culinary Institute of America, has 20 years of experience in restaurant operation. He provides customers with a quality product at competitive prices and can offer advice in selecting and preparing coffees and teas for home use.

The establishment also offers hot chocolates and select baked goods to complement the coffee and tea varieties.

Ample parking is available on street as well as behind the business district, accessible from Billings Rd.

For more information, contact Kevin McGurl at 617-479-1020.

Mary Snethen Vice President At East Boston Savings Bank

Mary J. Snethen of Quincy has been promoted to vice president of retail support services at East Boston Savings Bank.

In this position, Snethen will be responsible for the management of day-to-day activities of the Retail Support Services Department which includes the bank's checking, card services, special services, operations services and electronic banking units. All units support the customer service and branch personnel in all aspects of the bank's deposit related services.

Snethen has more than 20 years of banking experience having previously worked at Salem Five, the seminar entitled "What Makes Headlines."

Chazy Dowaliby, editor of the Patriot Ledger, will explain the news process and how businesses can obtain additional coverage.

Program cost is $15 for Chamber members and $20 for non-members. Light refreshments will be served and a cash bar available.

Seating is limited. For reservations, call the Chamber at 617-479-1111.

Board To Decide Jan. 26 On Diner's Extended Weekend Hours

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

The License Board will meet Jan. 26 to vote whether the Wheelhouse Diner in North Quincy should open 24 hours on weekends.

New owners Lucky Trifilos, who also owns the Union Cafe in North Quincy and Sean Toland requested the expansion of hours at the Jan. 5 meeting.

Board members cited concerns over safety issues. Police Chief Thomas Frane said in his experience over many years with Pilgrim and Eddie's Diner which were open 24 hours that even with a police detail, owners can't control who is "coming or going" to the restaurant at those hours.

Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers told the board he had met with the Atlantic Neighborhood Center and other businesses in the area and all were in support of the expansion.

Ayers said he had "confidence in the applicants" and cited that Trifilos had shown "what he could do with the Union Cafe" and did "everything he said he would do."

He said both men had the background for the business.

Chairman Joseph Shea said he wanted to hear from the former owner Neal Melanson before the next meeting. Melanson has owned the diner for more than 15 years. Before the Smith family owned it for about 30 years.

Maralin Manning, executive secretary to the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association spoke in support of the 24 hours. They said the owners of the former Pilgrim Diner were "kept alive" when they opened for 24 hours;

Manning said there is a need for such a restaurant in Quincy as there are a group of people who need to be served at that time, such as people going and coming from work.

Suggestions were made by Building Inspector Walter White to have the owners "come back in 3 to 6 months" while a 60-90 day trial by Ayers was suggested.

The hours for the 33 seat diner will be from 5 a.m. to 3 p.m. Monday through Wednesday, Thursday and Friday from 5 a.m. to 7 p.m. and from 5 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

All three businesses also recently made significant improvements to their interiors.

The final ribbon-cutting ceremony was held at Firestone, Inc., 2 School St. Prior to participating in Quincy 2000's Façade Improvement Program, the Firestone building was deteriorating. An exterior and interior renovation have dramatically improved the store that sits at a gateway to Quincy Center.

In 1998, Quincy 2000 awarded approximately $73,000 in grants through the Façade Improvement Program that leveraged approximately $400,000 in total spending by Quincy property owners. In total, the Façade Improvement Program has awarded grants of approximately $438,000 that have leveraged approximately $2 million in spending by private property owners.

Grant funding of this program comes from the City of Quincy's Department of Planning and Community Development and the federal Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Demo Delay Law Asked To Protect Tide Mill

The leaders of the Friends of Souther Tide Mill and the Fore River Watershed Association, as well as the Ward 5 Community Association, have asked the city council to adopt a demolition delay bylaw in an effort to protect the tide mill and its adjacent garage for demolition.

"A demolition delay bylaw protects historic structures from imminent demolition until a mutually agreeable approach is determined for addressing property redevelopment issues," wrote Carolyn Marks of the Friends and Katie Barrett of the watershed association.

Said Doug Gutro of the Ward 5 Community Association, who also signed the letter: "It allows time to consider preservation alternatives to proposed demolition and enables the Historical Commission to protect all buildings that are historically or architecturally significant.

About 30 communities in Massachusetts have such a bylaw, including Randolph, Hingham, Duxbury and Brookline.

"Depends on how the bylaw is worded, it could promote creating an inventory of historically and architecturally significant structures that are older than 50 or 75 years or pick a figure," said Gutro. "If an inventory doesn't exist, the Historical Commission could create one."

"The City of Presidents might want to consider [having a bylaw] to protect important historical structures," he said.

The ordinance allows people to take a breath and consider what alternatives might be there. The bylaw also would provide an opportunity to seek private money from a non-profit group and gain community support to look at alternatives to protect structures.

The ordinance would not sanction or deny demolition but it would provide alternatives, he said. The bylaw would help find a balance between preservation and redevelopment.

In the letter, they noted that the historic Winfield House gift shop on Hancock Street was bulldozed earlier with little public notice and without a public hearing. That structure may have benefited if such a bylaw were in place, they said.

"Our hope is that we don't do it after it is too late; obviously, it's too late for the Winfield House gift shop. I'm not sure about other historic landmarks," said Gutro.

Marks, Barrett and Gutro wrote they were aware of the purchase-and-sale agreement CVS has signed to acquire the property from the Cottle Estate but were unaware of any written assurances that the tide mill property and the adjacent garage, built in 1908, would be preserved.

"We remain committed to preserving and restoring the Souther Tide Mill, which has been an integral part of our city's rich history," they wrote, adding that "we also strongly support a compatible use for surrounding properties."

They also wrote they wanted to see that the adjacent parcels be developed in a manner that maximizes the potential of this historic site and creates an area that neighbors can look to with pride."

Adjacent to the Cottle property is the former Duane lumber yard, a 7.5-acre parcel owned by Twiss Realty. Avalon Bay Communities has signed a purchase-and-sale agreement to acquire the land to build between 125 and 150 low-rise apartments. However, the land's designation as a port area must be lifted by the state Department of Environmental Protection.

For Outstanding Community Service Bob Curry Sun 'Citizen Of The Year'

By HENRY BOSWORTH
Quincy businessman and civic leader Robert L. "Bob" Curry, who strongly believes in giving back to the community—and generously does without fanfare—is The Quincy Sun's Citizen of the Year for 1998.

The long-time community activist was selected for the honor by a panel of judges from among 47 nominees submitted by Quincy Sun readers.

The 14th recipient of the annual award for outstanding community service, he will be honored at a reception in March at the Quincy Sons of Italy Social Center.

When informed of his selection, Curry, who owns the Curry ACE Hardware stores, said: "I'm flabbergasted—and flattered. It is a great honor for me to be joining the past recipients. All of whom have been so outstanding. It really is a special honor."

Curry was nominated for the award by Donald Uvanitte, who is also actively involved in Quincy civic causes.

Uvanitte, in his nomination, cited Curry for "his continued efforts in assisting the most in need and his philanthropic consideration to Quincy Hospital, Work Inc., Father Bill's Place, QCAP, Cerebral Palsy of Massachusetts and others."

Curry, 54, is a life-long Quincy resident and a veteran of the Vietnam War where he served as a sergeant with the Delta Co., First Battalion, 3rd Marine Corps. and was awarded the Purple Heart and several other commendations.

Of his many charitable and civic endeavors, the one closest to his heart is the Marie A. Curry Foundation he established at Quincy Hospital in memory of his wife, Marie, who died in 1995 at age 52 from breast cancer.

Curry donated $100,000 to create the foundation shortly after Marie's death to provide mammograms especially for women who do not have health insurance.

Last September, hundreds of residents, friends and volunteers participated in the first annual five-mile Marie Curry Walk which raised $80,000 for the foundation to continue the fight against breast cancer through awareness and early detection.

Curry is now married to the former Cheryl Kain of Weymouth who participated in and helped organize last year's walk, along with his son, Sean, who is now general manager of the Curry Hardware stores making it a third generation family business and daughter, Julie, employed at the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office.

The second walk will be held this Sept. 19. The Quincy Hospital Health and Education Foundation and the Mayor's Commission on the Status of Women who spearheaded the first walk and the volunteers and sponsors who took part hope the second one will raise as much as $150,000.

Meanwhile, donations continue to come into the foundation.

Curry said he will never forget the man from Milton who came into his store one day and said: "I want to thank you. You saved my wife's life."

Thanks to the Marie A. Curry Foundation, her breast cancer was detected in time.

New Equipment, New Expertise Hospital Steps Up Fight Against Breast Cancer

By MARILYN JACKSON

Quincy Hospital has launched a major effort to provide breast care to women who live in Quincy, Braintree and Weymouth.

Last month, the hospital acquired a stereotactic equipment worth more than $135,000 to allow a breast biopsy to be done during mammography, rather than having a woman undergo a surgical procedure.

DR. DELPHINE LUI

Related Story On Page 11

"It's a real success story," said hospital chief executive officer Jeffrey Doran.

"Without a doubt, cancer, especially breast cancer, is one of most aggressive forms of cancers, and we have a high population and a lot of illnesses in these communities that need to be attended to," he said.

"After talking with some of our physicians and listening to feedback from the community, it became clear this is one of the areas that requires attention. "Going into Boston for breast imaging and diagnostic workups can be intimidating.

"With this new equipment, it is a much more humane way of diagnosing breast cancer conditions," Doran said.

"Basically, this saves an enormous amount of time, effort, energy and even money from the patient's standpoint," he said. It also minimizes the cosmetic aspects of surgery, he added.

"One out of nine women will get breast cancer," said

Renee Buisson, a hospital spokesman. "That's mind-boggling. Eight out of nine may need only a mammogram, but that one out of nine now can just go back into the mammography unit and get a biopsy," she said.

Last summer, the hospital hired Dr. Delphine Lui, a radiologist, whose expertise focused on cross-sectional imaging as well as mammogram, breast ultrasound and image guided breast biopsies.

"This was a perfect match to have physician capability supplemented with new technology," said Doran.

Sheets Sees Concourse Contract Award In Feb.

By MARILYN JACKSON

After a nearly eight-year wait, Mayor James Sheets said this week he anticipates that a contract for the first phase of the Quincy Center Concourse will be awarded by the end of February.

Six contractors submitted bids which are now being reviewed by the Mass. Highway Department.

In rounded-off numbers, the bidders were: SPS New England of southern New Hampshire, $5.373 million; McCourt Construction Company of Boston, $5.375 million; P. Gioioso and Sons Inc. of Hyde Park, $5.473 million; Middlesex Corp. of South Boston, $5.973 million; MIG Corp. of Chelmsford, $5.876 million, and B&E Construction of Stoughton, $6.224 million.

"The state is still reviewing the bids, and they haven't indicated what their schedule is for making a decision," said David Colton, public works commissioner.

"We're looking for an award by the end of February to be sure the project starts in the spring," Colton said.

The first phase of the multi-million dollar state project calls for connecting the Burgin Parkway with the Parkingway via a bridge. The work is expected to take between 12 and 15 months.

Colton acknowledged there may be some impact along Burgin Parkway, especially during the evening commuter rush hour, but the contractor will have to submit a traffic management plan that will address those issues.

The city is doing the design work for this project, and for the second phase, Colton said the designs are near the 25 percent level for review.

The concourse would continue from the Parkingway, cross Hancock Street and connect with Revere Road and McGrath Highway.

The second phase of the work calls for razing the Tanline Tan and Travel building at 148 Parkingway and another commercial

William Weed Candidate For Ward 1 Council Seat

William F. Weed of Curlew Rd., announces he will run for the Ward 1 City Council seat this year.

Weed, 47, is a court officer at Norfolk Superior Court in Dedham. He was appointed a court officer and deputy sheriff in 1975 by the late Sheriff Clifford Marshall of Quincy. He has worked in other courts also.

Weed is a member of the Ward 1 Democratic Committee and the Democratic City Committee. He is a member of the Quincy Yacht Club and the Quincy Gourmet Club.

He graduated from Quincy High School in 1969 and attended Bentley College.

Weed, who is making his

first bid for elective office, said among his chief concerns are the traffic problems on Sea St. affecting pedestrian safety and the conditions of the roadway.

"I am also concerned about the future use of Hurley's Boat House in Houghs Neck, the future of Quincy Hospital and new development that will affect the taxpayers of Ward 1," he said.

He is opposed, he said, to constructing a canal through Broad Meadows with taxpayers' money for a tourist attraction.

Better priorities, he said, would be dredging at the Quincy Yacht Club and public landing.

"I believe a city councillor should be aware of what is going on in the neighborhoods that he or she represents," he said. "I pledge, if elected, to return phone calls and attend every function in Ward 1."

He said a campaign fundraiser will be held in late March.

Tracey Wilson Will Not Seek Ward 6 City Council Seat

Tracey L. Wilson has decided not to run for the Ward 6 City Council Seat.

Wilson, 29, said the seat being vacated by Rep. Bruce Ayers was a "tempting challenge" but that right now she is focusing on her career as an attorney in Quincy.

She was a runner-up in the school committee race two years ago in her first bid for elective office and there was speculation that she would be a candidate for the Ward 6 seat.

"Over the last two years, I had significant opportunities to meet hundreds of residents throughout Ward 6 and the city of Quincy," Wilson said, commenting on her run for the School Committee in 1997 and her continuing involvement with community issues. "I learned to truly appreciate the variety of concerns of Quincy's population, and I look forward to remaining active in improving the quality in our city."

"I have thought long and hard about the Ward 6 City Council seat," she said, "however, I have just recently begun building on my professional career. It would be unfair to my clients and to the people of Quincy to begin two new careers at once. Both need assurance of a 100% commitment."

Wilson currently serves on the Council on Aging and says she enjoys working on creating greater opportunities and resources for Quincy's growing senior population. She also serves as public relations chair for the Quincy Lions Club and she participates in charitable endeavors throughout Quincy.

She said she will not rule out another run for elective office in the future.

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO
The License Board continued until Feb. 9 a hearing regarding a request from The Varsity Club, 33 Independence Ave. for a Keno License because of the absence of Fire Chief Thomas Gorman.

The Varsity Club had applied for a Keno license last August, but was denied by the board. According to Chairman Joseph Shea, the Lottery Commission and the Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission (ABCC) supported the board's decision at that time.

However, Atty. George Burke, representing the Varsity Club called the denial "a tremendous injustice done to my client."

Burke said although he had "tremendous respect" for the License Board, he reminded them that when the club first applied for a Keno license, there were no Keno licenses in the area of Independence Ave.

However, he said, since then, several Keno licenses were issued in the same area after the board's denial.

He said in his research, the license should not be denied in a liquor establishment.

Burke agreed with the continuance in the absence of Gorman, but asked Shea if he could send his partner Atty. Jeffrey LaPointe to the Feb. 9 meeting. He said LaPointe used to be a resident of the area, and knows it "pretty well."

Shea said he had received letters of opposition from Ward 4 Councillor Michael D'Amico, and Councillor-at-Large Paul Harold.

Two neighbors of the club also spoke in opposition citing noise from motorcycles, and confusion and noise when the club closes late on Saturday nights into Sunday mornings.

Shea said the board's action does not have anything to do with the present ownership, but has a "lot to do" with an increase of traffic and further "grief to the neighborhood."

Shea promised Burke that the request from the Varsity Club would be first on the agenda.

TARSAL TUNNEL SYNDROME

Carpal Tunnel Syndrome is a hot topic in the news. This is a painful condition in the hands due to compression of a nerve in the wrist. The foot can be affected similarly with a condition known as Tarsal Tunnel Syndrome. It is an entrapment of the Posterior Tibial Nerve as it crosses under the tissue at the level of the ankle. The pain can be confused with other conditions such as heel spurs.

If you have similar symptoms, consult a qualified podiatrist for evaluation to determine if it is coming from this type of entrapment or an area higher in the body (e.g. lower back) is involved.

Symptoms may include pain, tingling, numbness and even wasting of foot muscles in severe cases. The symptoms can radiate from the ankle to the toes.

This condition can be diagnosed with the combination of

Kolson Criticizes Unfunded Mandate For MCAS Exams

The legislature and governor must provide funds to cities and towns to prepare students for the MCAS (Massachusetts Comprehensive Assessment System) exams, City Council President Peter Kolson said Tuesday.

"This is another example of another unfunded state mandate," he said.

When Proposition 2 1/2 was enacted in 1980, the state agreed to fund state mandates so that municipalities could live within its tax levy limit. That has not always occurred.

"The mayor agrees with me," said Kolson. He said Mayor James Sheets has been discussing with school Superintendent Eugene Creodon on how Quincy will fulfill the mandates issued by the state Department of Education.

Last spring students in grades four, eight and 10 statewide took the exams, which were designed to measure their proficiency in math, science in English.

Quincy students did not fare well.

Under the directive from the state Department of Education, all high school sophomores in 2001 must take and pass the MCAS exam in order to graduate in 2003.

"This will require the creation of curriculum enrichment programs and developing a basis by which the new curriculum can be evaluated," Sheets wrote in a letter to Kolson.

"As a result, it will be necessary to purchase new curriculum materials which relate to the new curriculum framework and MCAS. In addition, teachers and administrators must work to develop this new curriculum," Sheets wrote, which they will not be able to do during the regular school day.

Creodon has estimated the new materials alone will cost between $75,000 and $100,000. Training

In order to properly prepare our students for these examinations, it will be necessary for the Quincy school system — and all other school systems in the state — to align their curriculum with that of the state," Sheets wrote in a letter to Kolson.

Kolson said he doesn't quarrel with changing the curriculum, buying the testing materials for the children and training teachers. "The real argument is that this is another unfunded mandate from the state," he said.

"As cities and towns struggle to keep taxes down, this doesn't fare well with me and my colleagues. We have to move forward...but if we don't draw the line [with the state], we will be paying through the nose for years to come.

"On top of that, we have mandates for special education which is in excess of $700,000," Kolson continued.

"Quincy is one of the most progressive cities in the state when it comes to education," he said. "We are committed to spending $72 million to move our education system forward with new schools and revamping the existing schools."

The new Marshall Elementary School opened in September, and a newly refurbished Point Webster Middle School is slated to open next September. In the meantime, the city is moving forward to build a new comprehensive high school off Quincy Avenue.

"These [school] mandates are burdening our limited amount of money we have to pay for police, fire, infrastructure. We have to do all that within the budget, with tax levies and fees we get from the cherry sheet and lottery receipts. That's all we can do," Kolson said.

Bone Marrow Drive For Quincy Resident Starts Today

Three bone marrow screenings will be held beginning today (Thursday) from 4-8 p.m. at Suite Four, 797 Washington St., Newton, for Quincy resident Ed Redfield, a victim of Leukemia.

Redfield, 42, husband and father of a two-year-old son is well known throughout the South Shore as a commercial driver for Associated Diver and Machine Works. He is also a member of the Quincy Underwater Recovery Group.

Additional screenings will be held Saturday at Quincy High School, 52 Coddington St. from 1-5 p.m. and Feb. 14 at the New England Medical Center Blood Bank, 70 Forbes Rd., Braintree, from 1-4 p.m.

A donation of $40 will be requested to help pay for the screenings.

Individuals wishing to help may also donate blood platelets through the New England Medical Center Blood Bank, where donors will receive a voucher for a free bone marrow screening at any of the three screening locations. Platelets can be given at New England Medical Center Blood Bank in Braintree, Middleboro, or Boston.

Call 1-888-22-DONOR, ext. 304 to schedule an appointment.

Bone marrow donors must be in good health and between the age of 18-60, be willing to give two tablespoons of blood to determine bone marrow type, and be willing to be added to the National Registry to help Ed and the other 9,000 children and young adults who are diagnosed each year with blood disease.

It Was A Fun Night

If city councillors could let their hair down like they did the other night, regular council meetings would be the best show in town.

The occasion was the second City Council reunion at the Quincy Neighborhood Club with 28 councillors on hand--the present nine and 19 former. Nine others didn't make it.

It was a fun night, renewing old acquaintances and swapping political stories with a little good natured needling tossed in.

Former Mayor Frank McCauley was the emcee, all decked out in a tuxedo, and kind of stole the show in the laugh department.

"He hogged the mike," said Paul Harold who finally got a turn and introduced Louise Brabazon, secretary to late Mayor James McIntyre and former city council clerk of committees as "the 10th member of the City Council."

McCauley noted that two of the councillors--Arthur Tobin and himself--had buildings named after them: Tobin Towers seniors complex and the McCauley Wing at Quincy Hospital.

And, that two others -- Ted DeCristofaro and Leo Kelly -- have mini-parks named in their honor.

"Maybe someday," he said, "The Town River might be renamed in honor of Dan Raymondi as the Daniel G. Raymondi Riverway. And every time it overflows and floods roads and homes, Raymondi will be remembered."

Mayor James Sheets who was elected Ward 4 councillor in 1973, the same year Jack Lydon went in from

SHEETS

Lydon.

"Jim, it's really important," Lydon said. "I need your vote for city council president."

Council President Peter Kolson, turned up in a tux, too. "McCauley made me wear one," he said. "He said it would add a little class if I called the council roll call in a tuxedo."

"Where did you get it--a funeral home?" someone asked.

"No, Bernie's--it was on sale for $70. Not bad, huh!"

Kolson did such a good impression of Frank Anselmo everyone thought Frank was there. And he got off a story about Walter Hannon making a purchase in a drugstore that produced a few howls. (Sorry, you'll have to ask someone else who was there.)

While he was mayor from 1982 to 1989, McCauley projected an image of a no-nonsense, Jack Benny-like penny-pinching chief executive but a little short in the humor department.

That's the public Frank McCauley. The private one is a fun one on occasions like this reunion.

McCAULEY

Ward 3, remembered a telephone call.

He was awakened from a sound sleep around 3 a.m. by

McCauley dragged out an old video tape of his farewell party when he left the mayor's office.

It featured a supposed future special front page of The Quincy Sun dated Sept. 15, 2025. McCauley had asked to have it done for the farewell party.

A few excerpts--all in fun:

"Former Quincy Mayor Francis X. McCauley died unexpectedly Tuesday morning while disco-ing at The Quincy Bay Inn. He was 95 years old.

"He is survived by his third wife, Daphne McCauley, age 26. Mrs. McCauley who met the former mayor when she was a contestant and he was a judge at the Miss Quincy Bay Beauty Pageant of 2020 said of her late husband:

"He was a great old guy who made no bones about the fact that he married me for my body and not my mind.

"The late mayor's first wife, Sandra, died 25 years ago and had said: "He will be married again six months after I'm gone and the second wife will get everything.

"Former Mayor McCauley was interviewed five years ago on the occasion of his 90th birthday party by Robert Bosworth, editor of The Quincy Sun (who) asked what he considered his most significant accomplishment during his eight years as mayor.

"Raising the mayor's salary from $25,000 per year to $55,000 was by far my greatest accomplishment. I would have raised the salary level even higher if I had had a City Council with any b. . . s at all.

"Funeral arrangements are being made by the Hamel, Wickens & Troupe Funeral Home, 26 Adams St. The former mayor will lie in state on Thursday and Friday on the 50-yard line at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

"The stadium was chosen because of the large outpouring of Quincy citizens who are expected to pay their final respects to their former leader.

"A solemn high Mass of Requiem will be offered Saturday at the Church of the Most Blessed Sacrament in Houghs Neck where the mayor lived all his life.

"The eulogy will be delivered by the Honorable Paul D. Harold, United States Ambassador to Ireland. Ambassador Harold, a lifelong friend and colleague of the late mayor, was visibly shaken when informed of McCauley's death.

"Frank McCauley was a great and wonderful man," he said between sobs. "I have so many wonderful remembrances and stories to tell about him, my eulogy will be at least two hours."

"At the conclusion of the funeral services, the late mayor's body will be borne to Mt. Wollaston Cemetery in the Rescue 1 fire truck purchased in 1986 during his administration. The vehicle remains in service having over four million miles on it.

"The death of former Mayor Francis X. McCauley leaves only one surviving politician who served as mayor during the latter part of the 20th century. Former Mayor and city councillor Joseph LaRaia has been a resident of a Quincy nursing home for over 20 years.

"When awakened and informed of the death of his long-time political colleague and adversary, he said simply, 'Isn't that wonderful' and promptly went back to sleep."

It was all in fun, folks.

Launching of U. S. Submarine Boat "Octopus," Fore River Shipyard, Quincy, Mass.

THIS OLD POSTCARD shows the launching of one of the first submarines built at Fore River Shipyard. Almost 100 submarines were built at the yard in its first 20 or so years of operation. Many were built for foreign navies. Although they later focused on surface ships, several nuclear attack submarines were built here in the 1960s. The sub shown here, the Octopus, was one of four built for the U.S. Navy in 1903. Its sister subs of the same design were the Cuttlefish, Viper and Tarantula.

Have We Sold Out?

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

As a somewhat conservative Democrat who voted for Bill Clinton back in 1992 because I felt President Bush had gone back on his word on public policy stances, I have concluded that liberals in this country seem to come across as a vast left-wing conspiracy supporting this president, the facts be damned.

Latrell Spewell, the newest New York Knick is a far better role model for our young people than President Clinton because at least Spewell owed up to his outrageous actions, apologized and asked for a second chance.

The only thing President Clinton apparently seems contrite or sorry for is that he got caught. If my generation condones this president's apparent recklessness and misleading behavior, then the generations to follow will just conclude such behavior as the norm for future American leaders.

How do we tell our children not to lie and then overlook alleged lying from inside the White House? In the end, President Clinton isn't the biggest hypocrite, we are. Maybe, liberals can live with anything as long as the economy, but the price we pay is steep. Have we sold out our moral outrage for low interest rates and high Dow Jones averages?

Opposes Quarry St. Apartment Complex

Editor, The Quincy Sun,

After reading the newspapers and attending the hearings regarding the proposal to build a 1,650 unit high rise development on top of Quarry St., we would like to go on record during the community comment period to oppose the Congress Group Venture's proposal to build a 1,650 unit apartment complex on the former landfill/toxic dump site for the following reasons:

1. A hazardous waste site and air quality protection:

The area is classified as a toxic dump site by the Massachusetts Environmental Protection Agency (MEPA). We would need to know, what hazardous materials may become airborne during blasting and earth moving? Second, how are we and the neighborhood going to be protected from it? We would like to receive scientific documentation how it is done, and documentation showing that it is done. Is monitoring conducted by the developer or independent air-quality engineers? Based on the previous information and studies reported by the newspapers, we understand that the land is not safe to build on. The Flatley Corporation, a well-known developer, did not want to build on the site. We would like to review the result of the environmental studies the Flatley Corporation conducted that influenced that decision.

2. Traffic:

Quarry St. is the single lane, narrow entranceway to the City Of Quincy and would add to an already heavy traffic load, unless the traffic from the project is directed to all areas of the neighborhood. For example, it is now hazardous to turn to Garfield St., due to low visibility and the awkward traffic flow coming from the south. We would like to know how this will impact an already congested traffic flow.

If traffic lights were installed, car idling on the incline would add more carbon monoxide to the air while cars idling are on an incline. According to MEPA, Quincy already has low air quality, due to the fact that it "houses" four MBTA parking garages and many additional satellite lot, including Quincy Adams, the largest MBTA on the east coast. Quincy is also situated in the center of major highway interchanges.

3. Sewer:

According to the City Councilors, Sewers from this size project would add to the old, narrow lines. We would like to know how the sewer improvements would add to the cost of the city and the taxpayers. What is the stand with the MWRA regarding this project's sewer services. According to a Harvard study, development never lowers real estate taxes because the amenities and services that cities need to expand as a result of development, outweigh the benefits. The new fire engine that the developer promises to the ward, will cost almost one million dollars for the city to put into operation.

4. Health Studies:

We would like to know how many deaths in the immediate area are cancer related, so that a baseline can be established for future comparisons.

The developer has already stated that they do not need an environmental impact report, and has already started earth moving with heavy machinery. He has destroyed the vegetation and most of the hardwood trees. The dust from the barren area has already become airborne according to resident's complaints recorded during the hearings.

5. Density:

We would like to know what impact on population density this magnitude of a project has on the Historic city of Quincy and how it will affect the overall quality of life for its citizens.

We are looking forward to receiving answers to these questions and thank you in advance.

900 Workers End Strike At Gear Works

By PAUL HAROLD

Nine hundred production workers returned to work for the 11 p.m. shift at the Boston Gear Works' plant, ending a wild-cat strike which began on Tuesday.

The walk-out was in protest of the suspension of shop steward Joseph Mischener. Following a meeting of union members at Central Junior High School, Union President Joseph Walsh announced that the workers would return to work, beginning with the night shift.

Boston Gear was one of the largest employers in the city with a mix of private industry and military contracts.

HELFRICH CALLS FOR NEW BEALE ST. BRIDGE

Councillor Alfred Helfrich called for a new Beale St. railroad bridge, removing the bridge's hump that was a long-standing safety hazard.

Helfrich asked City Manager William Deegan to contact the New Haven Railroad to lower the tracks along the right of way so a new bridge could be designed to increase the visibility and safety for motorists. The present bridge had a blind spot that prevented drivers from seeing traffic approaching from Newport Ave.

HEDGES DENOUNCES MEALS TAX

State Senator Charles Hedges (R-Quincy), denounced the state's meal tax at a State House hearing, saying that it would lead to a "race of anemics."

Hedges said that red meat was required for proper sustenance and that the proposed five percent tax would make restaurant meals so costly that people couldn't afford to order red meat.

The proposed tax would apply to meals costing over $1. Hedges proposed that the tax apply only to meals over $1.50.

E FOR EXCELLENCE!

The results of a study recently published in the Journal of the National Cancer Institute would indicate a significant decrease in the incidence of prostate cancer among tobacco smokers who were given Vitamin E (alpha-tocopherol) supplements. The study followed more than 29,000 male Finnish smokers between the ages of 50 to 69 for five to eight years. Among the subjects taking 50 mg. per day, the incidence of prostate cancer decreased 32 percent, and the number of prostate cancer deaths was reduced by 41 percent. While Vitamin E seems to offer significant help in the prevention of prostate cancer, the study also showed that Vitamin E did not reduce latent (existing but inactive) prostate cancers. Recent research on the utility and effectiveness of vitamins has increased our knowledge of their benefits. Ask your doctor what would be most suitable for your health, history and lifestyle. At AFFILIATED MEDICAL GROUPS, located at 700 Congress St., Quincy, we listen to your concerns. We are affiliated with Quincy and South Shore Hospitals. Please call us at 617-472-2550; office hours by appointment.

P.S. While vitamin E is generally safe, ask your doctor about taking it if you currently take a blood thinner such as warfarin.

ture, schools...and we have to do that within. When the state issues a mandate, it should be "better thought out as to how we are going to pay for them. This is frustrating as hell to come up with this reasoning," said the council president.

He said he would be speaking with Quincy's legislators and ask them to address this issue. "I know they feel the same way, but they might say their hands are tied."

"Granted there is a state surplus right now, but it's not going to be there all the time, and they have got to take a long, hard look at that. Cities and towns cannot bear the burden [of the cost of education] on the backs of the taxpayers forever," said Kolson.

"I'm all for education. My last daughter is in the Quincy school system. But these mandates are going to continue to usurp the funds we need to do other things in the city, along with maintaining a top school system and top teachers."

Quincy has applied for a state grant from the Department of Education to help offset these new costs, but there is no guarantee

Quincy will receive any of those funds.

As a result, Sheets advised Kolson that he would be requesting an appropriation so that a program to address the required curriculum changes will be in place by the end of this academic year.

He said he would ask Creedon to provide the council with a full explanation of this issue.

Ward 6 Democrats To Caucus Feb. 6

Registered Democrats in Ward 6 will caucus at 10 a.m. Saturday, Feb. 6, at Amelia's Restaurant, 305 Victory Road, North Quincy, to elect delegates and alternates to the 1999 Massachusetts Democratic convention.

Joseph M. Lydon, caucus chairman, said Ward 6 will be electing 10 delegates and four alternates equally divided between men and women to represent their ward.

The caucus is open to all registered Democrats, those ineligible to register and media representatives, but only registered Democrats will be eligible to vote. There is no proxy or absentee voting.

Candidates for delegate or alternate must give their written permission to be nominated. All candidates may make a two-minute statement and may distribute materials on their behalf.

half.

All ballots are written and secret. Those candidates receiving the greatest number of votes on the first ballot shall be elected. Slate making is allowed, but no special preference will be allowed. There is no quorum requirement and no admission fee at the caucus although the ward committee may solicit donations.

A Reunion For 28 City Councillors

TWENTY-EIGHT PRESENT and past City Councillors attended the second annual City Council Reunion at the Quincy Neighborhood Club last week. Seated, from left, are: Ted DeCristofaro, former Mayor Walter Hannon, Joanne Condon Walsh, former Mayor Joseph LaRaia, Alfred Helfrich, who at age 93 is the lone surviving member of the Plan E City Councils; Mayor James Sheets, former Mayor Francis McCauley, George Burke, and George McDonald. Standing, former Mayor Arthur Tobin, Tom Fabrizio, Larry Chretien, Charles McIntyre, Judge Warren Powers, Peter Kolson, Dennis Harrington, Tim Cahill, John Lydon, Michael Cheney, Thomas Nutley, Charles Phelan, Stephen Durkin, Daniel Raymond, Patrick McDermott, Leo Kelly, Paul Harold, Bruce Ayers and Michael D'Amico.

ENJOYING A LAUGH are Mayor James Sheets, Council President Peter Kolson and former Mayor Frank McCauley who was the emcee.

ALFRED HELFRICH (left), 93, and the last surviving member of the Plan E city councils, with former City Clerk John Gillis, former Dist. Atty. George Burke and former Mayor Joseph LaRaia.

FORMER MAYOR Frank McCauley, the only Republican among the 28 city councillors attending the reunion, didn't feel too lonely thanks to this life-sized cut-out of Newt Gingrich he brought along for company.

TEN WHO SERVED as City Council President were among the 28 councillors attending the second City Council Reunion. From the left, former Mayor Joseph LaRaia, Leo Kelly, Ted DeCristofaro, Michael Cheney, John Lydon, present President Peter Kolson, Charles Phelan, Mayor James Sheets, George Burke, George McDonald, who was not a president, and former Mayor Arthur Tobin.

AMONG THOSE ATTENDING were, from left, Judge Warren Powers, former Ward 5 councillor; Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymond, former Mayor Arthur Tobin, former Mayor Walter Hannon, Mrs. Shirley Tobin, Mrs. Patricia Hannon and Mrs. Sharron Raymond.

IT WAS ALSO a City Clerk's reunion. Former City Clerk John Gillis, now a Norfolk County commissioner, Assistant City Clerk Maureen Hallen, former Asst. City Clerk Tom Burke and City Clerk Joseph Shea had the chance to get together again.

Councillors Want Public Input On Hospital Merger

By MARILYN JACKSON

Before Quincy Hospital enters into a formal affiliation or merger agreement with another health care provider, the City Council wants to make sure the citizens have a say.

Last week, Councillors-at-large Paul Harold and Francis X. McCauley, who is chairman of the hospital committee, introduced a resolution to hold a public hearing at the appropriate time.

"Everyone is concerned about what the end result affiliation is going to be," said Harold. "A lot of negotiations have been taking place with the mayor's office, the hospital and health care organizations in the region. Obviously, we can't negotiate in public, but there has to be an opportunity for public comment."

Harold pointed out that the councillors did not have an opportunity to discuss the RCN proposal for a second cable television provider "until it was all over" but the formal signing. "We want to make sure the hospital agreement is not announced as a completed deal without input."

"We want to make sure that Quincy Hospital is not downgraded, that it will continue to be a full-service hospital," said Harold.

In layman's terms, that would mean an emergency room, intensive care and a full-range of in-patient services. We want to make sure it is full service in name and in fact.

PAUL HAROLD

"If [Quincy Hospital] were to become a feeder hospital, we would be picked up in a minute," Harold said. "In-patient services would be moved into the city of Boston, and Quincy would provide out-patient services. We have to fight against that."

There is no legal requirement that there be a public hearing, he added.

Harold and McCauley said they were prompted to introduce the resolution after a woman telephoned them about concerns she had about one of the hospitals under consideration where a daughter had died of cancer.

"If we're going to make a major change, people should know all facts and have an opportunity to comment, good or bad, about their experiences. There will be a hearing or more than one if necessary," Harold said.

"When we finally settle on a course of action, we will have to draw up a home rule petition approved by the council and the mayor and go to the Legislature to sign," McCauley added. "At that point, we would call for public hearings."

Jeffrey Doran, Quincy Hospital's chief executive officer, has scheduled a meeting Feb. 3 meeting with the strategic planning task force at the hospital to update city officials, physicians, union representatives and the administration at the hospital to update them on the progress of negotiations.

At the last board of managers meeting, Doran reported that for the month of December, the hospital's bottom line was in the black. For the first quarter of fiscal year 1999, which began Oct. 1, however, the hospital reflected declining losses.

In October, the operating loss was at $1.6 million, but the bottom line loss was $1.3 million; for November, the operating loss was $989,000, with a bottom line loss of $764,000. The operating loss for December was $548,000, but the bottom line was recorded with a $341,000 gain due to investments.

"When we implemented the reduction-in-force and expense reductions, we realized it would take a while for the measures to have a more solid impact on the bottom line," said Renee Buisson, a hospital spokesman. "We're beginning to see the impact of those changes we made in the fall."

"We're beginning some evidence of the finance plan," added Doran, "and we hope to continue in that vein. Six months ago we evaluated the hospital's investment committee evaluated its portfolio and made some changes in a piece of it."

"We all benefited from the rising tide in the market."

Hospital Steps Up Fight Against Breast Cancer

Lui now serves as the medical director of the mammography at the hospital's Simon C. Fireman Imaging Center for Women. Since the equipment has been in operation, the hospital has drawn attention from the medical community beyond its primary care service area and has received several referrals.

In addition to acquiring this new equipment, the hospital is working on a breast care project with a multi-disciplinary group of physicians and other medical professionals to create a "care map" for patients with suspected breast disease, added Buisson.

This details step by step the process a patient follows who is suspected of having a breast disease, from having a mammogram to when to see an oncologist or a radiation therapist. The "care map" lays out who to go see and when. Developing such a "care map" is becoming more popular in medical care, added Buisson.

Last year the hospital received a state grant from the Department of Public Health to conduct mammograms and pap smears for 200 women, she added.

Working with the Manet Community Health Center in establishing the program, the hospital began screening in October. To date, 30 women have benefited from this program, and another 40 are scheduled to go through the screening. The stereotactic equipment is part of their workup, she said.

The DPH grant, said Buisson, is in addition to the Marie Curry Fund established by Robert Curry in memory of his wife who died in 1995 of breast cancer. Women who are underinsured or who have no health insurance can obtain a free mammogram through this fund, she said.

HIGHPOINT

Over the last year, we at Congress Group Ventures, the developer of the Highpoint residential community, feel we have prepared a sound, viable plan for the development of our site on Quarry Street. We firmly believe that the Highpoint development will not only be instrumental in the continued economic growth of the City of Quincy, but, more importantly, will be beneficial to the neighborhood, and the City's residents and businesses.

Traffic and Environmental Benefits:

- Traffic enhancements along Quarry Street, including the renovation of the intersection of Quarry and School Streets and the renovation of 8 additional intersections, will be part of the development project.
- The operation of a shuttle bus from Highpoint to Quincy Center, reducing traffic volume, will be established.
- Congress Group, by decreasing the number of units planned for the development to 1,241, has also decreased traffic generation from the development by 22%.
- A final and complete environmental cleanup of the Quarry Street site, at a cost of approximately $3,500,000, will be conducted.
- Initiation of a Public Involvement Plan to actively engage the community in the planning and implementation of the environmental cleanup of the site has been prepared.

Additional Highpoint Highlights:

- Congress Group Ventures has reduced the number of units in the development from 1,391 luxury apartments to 1,116 luxury apartments and 125 senior residences.
- Approximately 1,400 construction jobs and 40 permanent jobs will be created.
- Highpoint will be a privately financed development, without any public funding, subsidies or reimbursement.
- Tax revenue for the City of Quincy is expected to be approximately $2 million per year.

You may review the Highpoint plan in greater detail at the Thomas Crane Library. Please visit our Website, currently under construction, at www.highpointquincy.com.

"The Highpoint development will provide for a well needed cleanup of the Quarry Street site and assist in the overall effort to beautify the area. Congress Group and the City have promised to develop a traffic plan that will enable us to travel safely throughout our area. My expectation is that this development will act as a springboard to bring additional enhancements to the adjacent neighborhoods."

Martha Robinson
Board Member
Ward 4 Neighborhood Association

"A high-grade development such as Highpoint, built by a well known and capable developer, is a welcomed addition to the City of Quincy. Congress is diligently working to address the traffic and other site issues raised and I believe their plan will be able to eliminate any concerns. A project of this magnitude and quality will serve as a draw to attract professional people to the area, both young and old. I would encourage everyone to consider this new residential community as an exciting housing option."

building at 1610 Hancock Street which houses three businesses — an optometrist's office, a Wing's Express and a nail salon, said Colton.

In addition, three wood-frame multi-family residences will be torn down on Mechanic Street. The city will relocate the occupants, but that won't take place for another year, he said.

Meanwhile, Joseph Zink, senior vice president of Atlantic Management Inc. which owns the building at 169 Parkway, said he expects to have a signature on a lease for the former Paperama space within 10 days to two weeks.

"It probably will take 45 days to move in," he said. Although he declined to identify the tenant for the 33,000-square-foot space, he described it as a regional, not national, retail company.

Zink had high praise for both Mayor Sheets and for Joseph Mannarino, executive director of Quincy 2000.

"We worked closely with Quincy 2000, and Joe met with the tenant to describe the benefits of Quincy and the demographics. They've done very well by me," said Zink. "The mayor and Joe both care a lot about Quincy. They have visions."

Zink said he was not planning to make any changes to the exterior of the building until the Quincy Concourse comes through.

"The parking lot will be dug up, and it would be difficult to access the area. There will be a temporary parking lot across the street, which the public works department is coordinating," he said.

Zink added he is negotiating with a couple of other businesses interested in moving into the 14,500-square-foot site previously occupied by Bed and Bath.

QHA Director To Speak At Beechwood Breakfast Feb. 3

Quincy Housing Authority Director Jack Mather will speak at the Beechwood Community Life Center's Current Events Breakfast Wednesday, Feb. 3 at 8 a.m.

Mather, who became QHA director in April, 1998, is interested in stabilizing the housing program in Quincy. He plans to ensure the continuance of a caring approach to various housing issues. A new project will focus on affordable assisted living for low-income citizens in Germantown.

Formerly of Brockton, Mather is a Quincy resident and is interested in environmental and intergenerational issues.

Beechwood's monthly breakfasts are open to all. Seating is limited and reservations are required.

For reservations or a brochure on other Beechwood programs and activities, call (617) 471-5712.

Two Logo Design Winners At Merrymount School

Merrymount School has two new logo designs for its T-shirts and sweatshirts after a recent contest was held at the school.

Melissa Walter, a third grader in Room 37, submitted one of the two winning designs. She depicted the school mascot, Odyssey, a smiling octopus, inside a chest full of Merrymount School treasures.

Lisa Nickerson won the adult competition, who entered a design which included a sailboat logo with the inscription written beneath a wave: "A great place to learn."

A committee of five — Merrymount School Principal Kathleen Kelly, PTO President Paul Kurtzman, PTO Treasurer Carol Gerry and two teachers, Mrs. Barbara Tyminski, a Grade 3 teacher, and Mrs. Peg Daly, a Grade 2 teacher — judged approximately 30 entries.

Melissa was awarded a $50 savings bond while Mrs. Nickerson won a $50 gift certificate to the South Shore Plaza.

Sweatshirts with the winning designs are available by contacting Mr. Kurtzman through the school.

Adoption Information Meeting Feb. 3

Interfaith Social Services (ISS) will offer a free Adoption Information Meeting Wednesday, Feb. 3

(snow date Feb. 10) at 7 p.m. at the Adams Inn, 29 Hancock St., North Quincy.

Adoption social workers from Interfaith Social Services will present information on adopting children born in the U.S. and internationally. A local family, who has adopted through ISS and an ISS adoptee will share their personal experiences and answer questions.

Interfaith Social Services (formerly Protestant Social Service Bureau) is a private, non-profit, non-sectarian agency, which has provided adoption services since 1974.

ISS places children of all races and religions.

Foot Notes

by Dr. Richard A. Hacker
Surgeon-Podiatrist

FEET FIRST

Most of us ignore them, but all of us depend on them. On what?

Our feet, of course. The sad fact is that most people only start to pay attention to their feet when something hurts. The day of reckoning comes sooner or later. Four out of five adults eventually develop foot problems, and most of these could have been prevented. Taking care of your feet means making sure that your shoes fit properly, that your feet are kept clean and dry, and that you see your podiatrist regularly to make sure that little problems are taken care of before they become big ones. There is a lot that can go wrong, with 26 bones, 20 muscles, and 33 joints in each foot. In the weeks to come, we'll be bringing you information on your feet and how to care for them.

Welcome to our new column on the care and attention of one of the most overlooked parts of the body, the feet. We walk, run, jump and step on them. No other part of us would permit such abuse. Don't you deserve better treatment? Professional treatment? Our office has been designed specifically to treat your feet with the most modern equipment and newest innovations available for the benefit of your feet's well-being. For an appointment for family foot care, please call 617-472-3466, 110 Squantum St., North Quincy.

P.S. The average person walks 70,000 miles in a lifetime. That is three times the distance around the world.

Another favorite involvement of his is the Quincy Partnership, a small group of civic minded individuals who have become close friends working together in community causes.

The Partnership has quietly raised funds for the "Welcome to Quincy" signs placed at entrances to the city; spot-lighting at old City Hall, First Parish Church, the Thomas Crane Public Library and the Adams Academy, and financed the Abigail Adams statue.

The group's next goal is a decorative water fountain for Merrymount Park which will cost an estimated $100,000.

It's a great group," says Curry. "No one is looking for credit. And there are no ego problems."

Curry has received the Forrest I. Neal Award for Volunteerism from the South Shore Chamber of Commerce and the Work Inc. Probud Award for Community Service.

He has given freely of his time and contributions—financial and products—to numerous causes throughout the city.

His affiliations are many and wide-ranged.

He is a member of the Board of Directors of the Quincy Hospital Health and Education Foundation, the Quincy Partnership, City of Quincy Commission on the Family, South Shore Chamber of Commerce, South Shore Economic Development Corporation, Quincy 2000 Corporation and the Quincy Rotary Club, where he is a Paul Harris Fellow Award recipient.

He is also a member of the Quincy Flag Day Committee, Quincy Historical Society, Disabled American Veterans, Morrisette Legion Post, Work Inc., Caddy Marine Corps. League Detachment and the Boston Foundation.

Past affiliations include: Quincy Community Action, Quincy Neighborhood Housing Services, Friends of the Blue Hills, Pantry Shelf, Share New England, Beechwood Community Life Center, Eastern Retail Hardware Association and board member, former Hibernia Savings Bank.

Curry is well known for being an active member rather than just lending his name to various committees, boards and projects.

Curry is a 1962 graduate of Quincy High School and completed business courses at Northeastern University and Boston University.

The Curry ACE Hardware stores were founded by his parents, Paul and Grace Curry in 1945 in West Quincy. He purchased the business from them in 1974 and expanded it with his son, Sean.

He has been nationally recognized by the National Hardware Association and conducts trade seminars and speaks at conferences nationwide.

Ask Bob Curry for his personal philosophy and he will tell you:

"It's nice to create business and some personal success but it is important to give back to the community."

Those who know him will tell you he more than practices what he preaches.

The Panel Of Judges

Members of the judges panel which selected the 1998 Quincy Sun Citizen of the Year are:

Sharron Beals, executive director Beechwood Community Life Center.

Eugene Creedon, superintendent Quincy public schools system.

John DeCarli, past president Quincy Sons of Italy.

Robert Derbes, Derbes Brothers contractors and immediate past recipient of the Quincy Sun Citizen of the Year Award.

Robert Guarnieri, president Colonial Federal Savings Bank.

Paul Harold, city councillor and former state senator.

Maralin Manning, executive director Quincy Center Business and Professional Association.

Jeremiah Ryan, president Quincy College.

Joseph Shadduck, president Quincy Rotary Club and president Shadduck Financial Group.

46 Other Nominees For Sun Citizen Of The Year

There were 46 other nominees for the 1998 Quincy Sun Citizen of the Year Award.

They are, in alphabetical order:

Frank Anselmo, a World War I and World War II veteran and former Quincy School Committee member who has also contributed financially to the city.

Ernest Aristide, for his love for the city and his willingness to help any project.

Bruce Ayers, for his quiet devotion and leadership in improving our city.

Richard and Robert Barker, who have served Quincy for a combined total of over 50 years.

Ray Cattaneo for his outstanding life-long efforts and dedication involving American Legion baseball, as well as being a tremendous role model for the youth of Quincy.

Mary Centola, director of Elder Services at Beechwood Center, who has helped senior citizens through Senior Olympics, lunch programs and Alzheimer support groups.

Mary Collins, always ready and willing to help with her car to take people to the doctor, hospital or shopping.

Ted DeCristofaro, who has spent his adult life doing things for other people and continues to work in the community to make it a better place.

Joseph Desmond who has been involved in the youth of the city for 40 years.

Robert Dion, for his devotion to his family and friends.

Suzanne Doherty, who takes special care of those with disabilities.

Maureen Durkin, for devoting 22 years as a figure skating teacher and friend to her students in Quincy.

Robert Leo Eng who raised $2,000 to sponsor 10 boys from Quincy and North Quincy High Schools of the junior class to attend the American Legion's Boy State program to learn about town, city and state government.

Eileen Feeney, principal of North Quincy High School, an "unsung heroine" who treats all with a great deal of respect.

Daniel Flynn, who gives countless hours of volunteer time, financial contributions and boundless energy to numerous charities and noble activities throughout the city.

Donald Gohl, the "people's banker" in Quincy for 53 years who has always been there for his customers.

Paul Harold for his intelligence and initiative in investigating the shipyard scheme.

Mark Jaehrig for founding the Sacred Heart Basketball program and spending countless hours developing and organizing this program.

Bob Johnson, who has actively served Squantum by volunteering for many community services including the Causeway cleanup and Squaw Rock cleanup.

Frank LaPierre, who has run an excellent youth T-ball program for several decades.

John "Butch" Mahoney, as social health coordinator and head of security for Quincy public schools, has dedicated his life to the children of Quincy so that they may be safe and free of drugs.

Joseph Mazzarella, who took on the responsibility as full-time director of the Center of Technical Education because of his desire to do what's best for the students at Quincy High School.

Bill and Ann Macdonald who for more than four decades have selflessly served the people of Quincy, particularly those in need of special help.

Helen MacDonald, who raised seven good, honorable children and did a good job as a matron for the Quincy Police Department.

Sandra McCauley, a "tireless foot soldier for numerous local causes and organizations who has made a lasting, positive impact on the City of Presidents."

Charles McLaughlin, director of the Quincy High School Heritage program, for treating each student as an individual.

Stephen Moynihan, "constantly working for all the people in Quincy from the homeless, the unwed mothers, city workers and retirees."

Annette Paglierani for her three decades of enthusiastic, dedicate and untiring voluntary service with the Quincy Art Association.

Valerie Palmer, a very caring and compassionate person who helps many senior citizens, especially those unable to take care of themselves.

Jane Reikard, a staunch supporter of tenant rights who goes above and beyond the call of duty.

Deacon John D. Salenius of Sacred Heart Parish, whose kindness and assistance to many people started long before his being ordained a deacon of the Catholic Church.

Alfred (Fred) Saluti, who has dedicated his entire life to helping those less fortunate.

Zaida (Hassan) Shaw, "Quincy Point's own angel" and a goodwill ambassador for the city.

Mayor James Sheets, a nice man who does a lot of nice things for everybody.

Ed Spargo, "he makes everyone feel so important with his kindness, generosity and thoughtful soul."

Michelle Stenberg, manager of Quincy Youth Arena who does the little things "that make life sweet."

Linda Stice, who helps people newborn to age 100, works with teenagers and counsels them and family members.

Agnes Trillcott, a volunteer for many community organizations for 40 years.

Edith Volpe, a senior citizen who volunteers her time in the community at the Eventide Home, Allerton House and Hancock Park.

John Walsh, head of the Nut Island Citizens Advisory Board and a director of Boys Basketball, Most Blessed Sacrament Church and Wollaston Beach Advisory Board for over 20 years.

Gerard Weidmann, active with South Shore Elders, Quincy Council of Aging, Squantum Gardens Housing Committee, Knights of Columbus and other organizations.

George White for the many years of directing the Quincy Christmas Festival Parade that benefits all citizens.

Thomas Williams, who is very generous with his time and talents, and whose heart has always been in the right place.

Pete Zoia, for his volunteerism and contributions to youth football, high school scholarships and Sacred Heart Church.

North Quincy High School Stay Out Meeting Feb. 8

REAL ESTATE

Conway Relocation Offers Tips For Home Sellers

Conway Relocation, a division of Jack Conway and Company, says selling a home is an emotional process. Most people have memories built into their homes - from marks on the walls noting the children's growth to the kitchen floor tiled by hand.

Maureen McCaffrey, president of Conway's Relocation division, said that although it can be difficult to watch other people walk through your home, there are ways to ease the process and help turn your emotional investment into a financial gain.

•Enlist a professional.

Let a professional salesperson talk to the customer. Conway, a member of the RELO network of 1,100 independent real estate firms across the country, can market your home to people already living in the community as well as those thousands of miles away who are looking to move to the area soon. The agent can address the selling price, terms, possession date and other details.

•Attendance is not mandatory. You do not have to be present during your home showing. This may be a great time to treat yourself to a movie, shopping, massage, or dinner. Let an agent know how to reach you, however, since an offer could be waiting.

•Avoid crowds. Potential buyers will feel like intruders and want to hurry through the home inspection if there are too many people around. Send the kids over to a neighbor's home or take them to a ice cream parlor when the real estate agent shows your home.

•Put Fido outside. Dogs may be man's best friends, but not when showing your house. Keep all pets out of the way and not underfoot.

•Silence is golden. Keep the televisions and radios down - or off. Let the real estate agent and buyers talk freely without having to yell over noise.

•This is not a social call. Be courteous and friendly, but don't try to force conversation with potential buyers. They are there to inspect your house, not be social. Let the salesperson do the talking.

•Stay in the background. The real estate agent knows what the buyers need and are looking for; the agent can best describe and emphasize the best features of your house. Don't tag along. If there are any questions, the agent will ask you for information.

•Do not apologize for the appearance of your home. If something out of the ordinary should happen to mar the home's appearance, inform the salesperson when you are first called for the showing. Should any negative comments or objections be offered, let the trained professional salesperson answer them.

•No garage sales. A showing is not the time to unload unwanted furniture or furnishings. Offering additional items may complicate a potential sale.

Through its alliance with RELO, Conway Relocation can assist individuals relocating to virtually any community in the United States or abroad with purchases, sales, school reports and comprehensive community data. Norwell-based

Jack Conway and Co. is the largest independent real estate company in Massachusetts, with more than 600 agents in 35 offices from Boston to Cape Cod. For more information, contact Conway Relocation at (800) 283-1030 or visit the firm's Web page at www.jackconway.com.

Flynn Aids Springfield Bridge Lighting Project

Daniel Flynn, CEO of Daniel J. Flynn and Co., Inc., recently helped light the way across the Connecticut River by serving as a charity auctioneer at the Spirit of Springfield auction in Springfield.

The black tie event raised more than $16,000 to help fund new lighting for the city's historic Memorial Bridge that spans the Connecticut River.

The auction was held as part of Springfield's City of Bright Nights Ball in the Sheraton Springfield at Monarch Place. More than 300 attendees bid on items including Rolex watches, a Hilton Hawaiian Village vacation package, a royal Caribbean Cruise and Broadway tickets to The Lion King.

"As a member of the real estate business, one develops a sensitivity towards maintaining and preserving significant structures, particularly when living in a city with as much history as Quincy," Flynn said.

"Memorial bridge in Springfield is a historical landmark in need of some improvements, and I am pleased that I was able to lend a hand."

Presidents, Raiders Skate To 2-2 Tie

By CHARLES ROSS

The first round of the championship of the City of Quincy High School hockey teams turned out to be a hard fought draw.

Quincy took a 1-0 lead after the first period, saw North score twice in the third period to take the lead, and then the Presidents scored to tie the game at 2-2.

With 1:59 to go in the first period junior forward Brian Nolan scored on a power play goal with senior Co-Captain Joe Vallatini assisting. Quincy held the lead until 8:45 to go in the game when senior co-captain Paul Makarian beat President goalie Jeff Langille to tie the score.

A minute and a half later, the Red Raiders took their first lead of the night as senior co-captain right wing Mike Sullivan stole a Quincy pass and walked in and scored to give North a 2-1 lead. It then took the Presidents 14 seconds to score the equalizer as junior forward Scott Mattson poked the puck past North goalie Chris Carthas to tie the match at 2.

Both teams had chances to win the game, but were unable to score as the varsity game ended in a 2-

HOCKEY

2 tie. (The JV game also ended in a 3-3 tie).

North Coach Bob Doyle was disappointed, as this was the fourth time this year that North has led in the 3rd period only to see the opponent tie it up.

"I was pleased with our defense as we had two starters out and the young defensemen came up and played well," said Coach Doyle. "We have to do a better job and learn as a young team how to hold on to the lead in the third period."

For Quincy Coach Bob Sylvia, he was glad to get the point, but would like to have come away with a win. "I was pleased with our goalie Jeff Langille who kept us in the game. We only put 11 shots on the North goalie, and as a team we usually come up with 30 shots on net and we will have to address that in practice."

Hockey Notes: I asked Quincy Coach Bob Sylvia if after 33 years behind the Quincy bench, a game against North Quincy ever gets routine.

His response: "Once the puck is dropped, it's the most exciting thing to me in the world. When it stops being like that, I'll be out fast."

It was a sellout crowd at the Quincy Youth Arena for the game. In typical fashion, students, friends and alumni from both schools mingled together in a friendly rivalry that ended as the 3rd period came to a close. The Quincy and North's get competitive against each other a few times a year, but when the game is over, everybody's from the same city and they all get along.

Last Saturday night, Quincy came away with a 6-3 win over the Taunton Tigers. Joe Vallatini and freshman Brian Scott each scored twice for the Presidents. Steve Ford and Scott Mattson added the other two goals to back up a 22-save performance from Jeff Langille.

For North Quincy, Saturday night was not as pleasant as they dropped a 3-1 decision to Silver Lake. Freshman Tom Hughes scored assisted by Jay Allen and Paul Makarian. Makarian is the leading scorer in the Old Colony League with 34 points so far this season.

North Bounces Quincy

By CHARLES ROSS

In a week where all three major winter sports had the cross-town rivals playing each other, you knew that the girls' game had to be close too.

The Red Raiders of North Quincy handed the First Ladies of Quincy a 49-46 loss.

Kristen Bowes had 16 for North and Jill Nicholson 10 in the game played at Quincy.

For the First Ladies, Kaitlyn McLaughlin led all scorers with 19 points and Colleen Nichols, back playing in her first game since being out with a broken hand, had 13 points and hauled down 14 rebounds.

North Coach Doug MacFarlane was pleased with the road victory, which boosted North's record to 4-6.

It was a tough loss for Quincy Coach Bob Noble and his team. But on Friday night, the First Ladies pulled a big upset as they bounced first place Taunton 51-43.

Coach Noble told the Sun last week that he was looking for a big lift with the return of Colleen Nichol from her injury. She poured in 15 points. Her Sister Caitlin had 10 points and 13 rebounds.

Kelley Raymer also came up big for Quincy. The game marked Quincy's first win of the season (1-10) and what Coach Noble hopes are better nights to come in the second half of the season.

Also Friday night, North Quincy lost to Silver Lake 50-37. Kristin Bowes was the leading scorer for North with 13.

North Quincy Boys' Swim Team Bows To Sandwich

The North Quincy High School boys' swim team bowed to Sandwich High School in an exciting meet, 61-91.

Captain Devin O'Brien finished first in the 100 backstroke and second in the 200 individual medley. Senior John Mercurio won the 100 freestyle. Brendan Griffin, the team's third senior, took first place in the 100 breaststroke.

Sophomore Pat McGovern came in second place in the one meeting diving. A relay team consisting of Mike Manganaro, Dave Birmingham, Dallas Hodgins and Pat McGovern finished second in the 400 freestyle relay.

North Quincy Steals One From Presidents

BOYS' BASKETBALL

It went down to the final seconds with each team having a shot at victory, but it was North Quincy boys' basketball which came away with a 50-48 win in the first meeting of the two teams this season.

Quincy led the game almost the whole way until North stole victory from the President's grasp.

Quincy led at half-time 23-21. The Red Raiders took the lead with 48 seconds left when junior forward Matt McCann hit 2 foul shots giving North a 48-47 lead. The Presidents came back to tie as junior forward Clark Chase hit a foul shot with 25 seconds to go.

A Quincy turnover gave North the ball and McCann hit the lay-up in the waning seconds to give the Raiders their second win of the season.

North Quincy Coach Ted Stevenson was pleased with the strong effort of his senior captain Frank McNamara who has played strong all season long for North and as only one of three seniors on the team, has provided leadership to the younger players.

Quincy Coach John Franceschini was pleased with the Presidents' efforts until the closing stages of the game. "In a Quincy and North Quincy game, anything can happen," said Coach Franceschini.

Junior forward Sean Fitzpatrick had 18 rebounds for Quincy. Junior Chase Clark had 14 points in the loss, including 3 three pointers.

The good feeling of the North win didn't carry to the next game as they dropped a 62-43 loss to Silver Lake last Friday night. Matt McCann led the NQ scoring with 10 points. The loss dropped North's record to 2-11 on the season.

Defense Carries Freshmen Raiders

A much improved defense allowed the North Quincy freshmen boys' basketball team to win two and lose one in recent action. The freshmen Raiders raised their season record to 5-7, 3-5 in the Old Colony League.

Eleven players scored for North, as the freshmen handled Archbishop Williams, 45-28. Jackie Liuzzo led all scorers with 12. Wayne Moynihan and Adam O'Hara contributed 8 and 5 points each. Quincy natives Mark Chella, Pat Duff and Tom Buckley led the way for the Bishops.

North Quincy avenged its opening season loss to Silver Lake with a 51-36 home win. The Raiders came out in an aggressive man-to-man defense, which pushed the Lakers out of their normal offensive set. Solid rebounding by Mark Maher and John O'Connell kept the Lakers fast break on the blocks. North did a much better job of getting back on defense than they had the first meeting, as the Raiders took a 23-19 half-time lead. Wayne Moynihan, Dennis Thomson and Maher led the freshmen defense for North Quincy.

O'Connell exploded for 16 points in the second half as North pulled away for the 51-36 final.

"From 62 points in the first game to only giving up 36 in the second game is outstanding," said Freshmen Coach Scott Madden. "Our defense really played a great game." O'Connell led all scorers with 22 points, Moynihan contributed 9 and Dave Rochon added 6 to go with 3 steals and solid floor leadership. Dan Duggan's quickness on defense was a real plus for the Raiders.

Solid defense and rebounding kept North in the game but in the end Boston English had too much firepower, winning 64-59. English closed the first half with a 12-2 run to lead 36-26 at the break. John O'Connell's 3-point play brought the Raiders back to within three, 38-36 with 11:06 remaining.

English opened the lead back up to nine, 50-41, at the 6-minute mark. Mike Haines and Wayne Moynihan kept the Raiders close over the next few minutes allowing the Raiders opportunities in the closing moments. North couldn't get past the English defense in the final minutes to fall by five.

O'Connell had another huge offensive game with 25 points to go with 10 rebounds. Moynihan had eight points and Jackie Liuzzo had six before leaving early in the second half with an injury.

The freshmen Raiders have the opportunity to get over the .500 mark this week with league games against Taunton and Falmouth, as well as a non-league visit to Hingham.

Mike Morrissey Club doubled-up Coffee Break Cafe, 6-3. George Snowling scored a hat trick and Tim Duggan added two goals and Daniel Duval one goal for the winners.

Assists went to Matt MacNeil (2), Bill Cox (2) and Tim Duggan.

For Coffee Break Cafe, James Sheehan, Joe Norris and Mike McNulty had goals. Assisting were Patrick Maloney, Matt Lavery and Sean Warwick.

Squirt B's Take Two On Road

The Quincy Squirt B travel team rang in the New Year with back-to-back victories over Hyde Park and Needham.

The Squirt B's gained a decisive 9-5 victory at Hyde Park. The offense was led by Rob DeAngelis's hat trick (goal in each period). Other goals were scored by Joe Canavan (2), Mike Marshall, Joe Garland, Jim Fitzpatrick, and Steve McDonough.

Goalie Jimmy Carito was solid between the pipes and heads-up defense produced the win.

Against Needham, a last-minute goaltending assignment for Mike Lohnes proved to be the answer in the 5-4 victory. Strong defensive play by Joe Fontana, Mike Maxey and John Kurpeski enabled Quincy to hang on for the win.

Lighting the lamp for the Firefighters were Mike Gillespie and Bryan Gilligan with two goals apiece and Jim Fitzpatrick who added one. Also contributing to the team's success was David Arrufat in goal and the checking line of Ted Finnegan, Matt Lawlor and Tom Pasquantonio.

Michael Welch Aces Hole At Orange Bowl Golf Tourney

Michael Welch of Quincy recently scored a hole-in-one in the Orange Bowl International Golf Tournament.

The tournament, by invitation only, was held at the Biltmore Golf Club in Miami, Fla. Only 35 students from the United States played in the tournament.

Welch aced the 189-yard second hole with a six iron.

This is only the second hole-in-one ever made in the 35-year history of this tournament.

The son of Terry Belotti-Welch and Robert Welch of Quincy, Michael is a junior at North Quincy High School where he is a member of the golf team.

He is also a member of the Furnace Brook Golf Course where he plays on the Junior Four-Ball Team.

CAM-BELT REPLACEMENT

Car owners should take the time to familiarize themselves with the replacement schedule of their cars' camshaft belts (if they have them). Failure to replace a cam belt within the prescribed time can lead to a broken cam belt that will cause massive internal engine damage. The cam belt's job is to maintain a fixed relationship between the position of the crankshaft and the camshaft (which opens the engine's intake and exhaust valves). If the cam belt stretches, it can "jump" on the cam sprocket, altering the relationship between the camshaft and the crankshaft. This can lead to loss of engine power. Car owners should not wait to experience this symptom before having the belt replaced. For more of your car's automotive needs, including its cam-belt, rely on our ASE Certified technicians at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO. Learn for yourself why so many of your friends and neighbors turn to us to keep their family cars in top condition. For the best service in town, we're here at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (781-843-1550). Hours: Mon-Fri. 8am-9pm, Sat. 7am-9pm, Sun. 9am-5pm. Sunoco and most major credit cards honored. We are "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer." We are your local source for propane for grills, motor homes, and converted vehicles.

QHS Women's Tennis To Be Nominated For Academic Excellence

Quincy High School Principal Robert Keuther announces he will nominate the women's tennis team for the "Team Academic Excellence Award" this spring. To qualify for the award, the team must be "in season" at the time of nomination.

Although the tennis season falls into the third quarter of the school year, Keuther said that a preliminary ranking has been calculated based on the group's first term report cards.

"The team's grade point average is currently 3.64 out of a maximum of 4.0. Although this is an outstanding GPA for the 29 women athletes, student awareness of this nomination will motivate them to even improve their present team GPA," Keuther said.

School officials said a program called "Match Point" has been instrumental in the team's academic success. The program has become a tradition for tennis players at Quincy High School. Each player is assigned a teacher/mentor once they show interest in the program.

"The mentors are really friends to the students. It creates a nurturing environment and we have seen the success grow each year," Keuther said.

Besides academics, mentors attend many of the tennis matches to support those students they have worked with during the student's high school years.

Linda Day, one of the teachers/mentors, said "Match Point" is a means of motivating students to each their potential while attending the high school.

"Student-athletes participating in this program are maximizing their skills as members of our school's population. We are so proud that former members of 'Match Point' are now attending some of the finest colleges in the country," Day said. The colleges include UPenn, Stanford, MIT, Tufts, Brandeis and Harvard.

Born in Brookline, she lived in Dorchester before moving to Quincy 36 years ago.

Mrs. Whalen was a homemaker.

She is survived by two sons, Sgt. William M. Whalen, OPD of Quincy and John F. Whalen, Jr. of Lynnfield; a sister, Joan M. Keane of Quincy, and three nieces and one nephew.

She was the wife of the late John F. Whalen.

Burial was in Holyhood Cemetery, Brookline.

A Thought For The Week

Today we live in a very mobile society. In these days of moving about, more families than ever before are faced with emergencies that occur away from home.

We, at the Deware Family Funeral Home, would like you to know that if a death occurs away from home, a single collect telephone call to us can relieve you of many worries and responsibilities.

Through the years we have always maintained close contact with many highly respected and responsible funeral directors throughout this country who are experienced in handling all details to your complete satisfaction. And, if so desired, we will take charge of all the complex details of transportation back to Quincy.

Remember our long experience and knowledge of requirements are available at any time -- day or night -- whenever the need arises. Remember we care and we show we care by the service we render.

Mrs. Leonard died Jan. 19 at the Boston Medical Center after a long illness.

Born in Boston, she attended Boston parochial schools. She lived in Dorchester before moving to Quincy 20 years ago.

She is survived by two sons, Barry J. Leonard of Quincy and Paul A. Leonard of Braintree; two daughters, Colleen M. Leonard and Teresa A. Truitt, both of Quincy; two brothers, John O'Sullivan of Easton and Thomas O'Sullivan of Quincy; and three daughters, Nora McDonald of Avon, Maureen Smith of South Boston and Kathleen O'Sullivan of Lynn; her dear friend, Robert Weiners of South Boston; and seven grandchildren.

Burial was in Pine Hill Cemetery, West Quincy.

Donations may be made to the American Cancer Society, 1115 West Chestnut St., Brockton, MA 02401.

Thomas E. Sullivan, 79 Retired Quincy Sun Sports Editor

THOMAS SULLIVAN

A funeral Mass for Thomas E. Sullivan, 79, retired sports editor of The Quincy Sun whose newspaper career spanned more than a half century, was celebrated Jan. 22 in St. Mary's Church, Randolph.

Mr. Sullivan, a life-long resident of Randolph, died Feb. 19 at Good Samaritan Hospital, Brockton.

A 1937 graduate of Stetson High School, now Randolph High School, he began his newspaper career a year later as a sports correspondent for the then Quincy Patriot Ledger. He coined the nickname Blue Devils for the Randolph football team by which they are still known today.

He was a part-time assistant manager of the Wollaston Theatre in 1940-42.

A World War II veteran, he served in the Navy from 1942 to 1946 and returned to the Ledger. He remained there as a high school sportswriter until 1960 when he went to the old Boston Herald, now the Boston Herald, as a copy editor.

He joined The Quincy Sun for its very first issue in September, 1968 and remained as sports editor for 25 years until his retirement in 1993.

Sun Publisher Henry Bosworth, who had a long association with Mr. Sullivan going back to the days when they both worked at the Ledger, said in tribute:

"Tom was a good family man, a good friend and an always reliable and conscientious colleague. He was a major player in getting The Sun through its crucial early days in 1968 and helped build our readership over the next 25 years with his coverage of high school and youth sports.

"He never forgot that a high school player, no matter how big they might be, were still kids and not professional athletes and treated them accordingly. He played up their good plays and played down their mistakes. He never put the blame on an individual player."

The high esteem in which he was held by the coaches and former players was underscored in 1993 when he was inducted into the Quincy-North Quincy High School Football Hall of Fame as a writer.

His hometown a year later inducted him into the Stetson-Randolph High School Football Hall of Fame and presented him the Citizens Award.

Upon his retirement from The Sun, Mr. Sullivan received a special commendation from Mayor James Sheets.

"He was a wonderful person," said Ken McPhee, North Quincy High School head football coach. "He never wrote a negative thing about a kid.

"He was a very solid reporter and led a very solid life. He could always find something positive to write about your team even if you lost 50-0."

Former Quincy High School head football coach Jack Raymer said:

"Tom was always there with you--win or lose. He cared about the kids. He was great for them. Very compassionate.

Ted Stevenson, head basketball coach at North Quincy, said Mr. Sullivan had a knack for putting a positive spin on his stories, no matter the situation.

"He was always so upbeat," Stevenson said. "He always came up with the upbeat angle. He was always friendly and sincere. A great guy. He was really nice to deal with."

Pete Zoia, a North Quincy football legend who knew Mr. Sullivan since the 1940s, said:

"He was a great person to know and to be around. He was well respected and liked by everyone."

Mr. Sullivan is survived by his wife, Genevieve M. "Gerry" Sullivan; three sons, Dennis Sullivan of Colorado, Timothy Sullivan of Connecticut and Thomas Sullivan of Sarasota, Fla.; three daughters, Patricia Burns of Brockton, Nancy Benefit of Randolph and Maureen Sullivan of Braintree; a brother, Arthur J. Sullivan of Holbrook; 10 grandchildren and a great grand-daughter.

Burial will be in National Cemetery, Bourne.

Donations may be made to the Joslin Diabetes Center, 1 Joslin Place, Boston, MA 02215.

Your Horoscope by Natasha

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Someone you haven't heard from or seen in a while suddenly re-enters your life. However, your significant other isn't too happy about this. Try to exercise sensitivity.

TAURUS (April 20 May 20) Good news arrives about a certain business venture. Bigwigs are still being congratulatory toward you. A friend comes to you with an odd request concerning money this weekend.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Your tendency to worry is in full bloom. Try to take better care of yourself. The mental torture you are putting yourself through can be quite hazardous to your health.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Something you've been working on for some time reaches fruition this week. Enjoy that feeling of accomplishment and pride. You've earned a good pat on the back.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) It's a good week to stress originality and to take the initiative on certain projects. It seems everything goes pretty much your way. Romance is not favored this weekend.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) You're chugging along at work, but you can't seem to get anything substantial done. Perhaps it's time to consider a vacation. Financial developments are positive.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Planning a getaway for the weekend is favored. Those in love should make it a point to be open and spontaneous with each other. A family matter arises over the weekend.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) If you're looking for a change on the home front, it's a good week to follow up on leads. Real estate matters are favored. Socializing should take a back seat this weekend.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) You receive a rather intriguing social invitation. A loved one has an unexpected, happy surprise for you later this week. Don't allow yourself to be delayed for an appointment.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Developments on the job this week could include a new assignments, a promotion, or even a raise in salary. In general, business is favored. A feeling of loneliness is temporary.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A partner comes to you with an innovative idea. It's well worth listening to this. Any social plans you make will be strictly spontaneous this weekend.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) The financial news you receive is music to your ears. New chances arise on the job for success and additional income. It's not a good idea to spend your weekend worrying over trivialities.

Souther Tide Mill Plan Moves A Step Closer

By MARILYN JACKSON

The proposed restoration of the Souther Tide Mill is moving a step closer.

With the award by the Massachusetts Historical Commission of a matching $100,000 preservation grant for the endangered site two weeks ago, Mayor James Sheets has asked Gov. Paul Cellucci to set aside some $2 million in the fiscal year 2000 budget to help restore the mill.

Cellucci was expected to present the budget to the House yesterday (Wednesday).

The mill and surrounding land is historically and perhaps even archaeologically significant, dating back to the 1640s, and the mayor is banking on the mill restoration as a key component for a proposed waterfront heritage park and museum.

Sheets' vision is that the area be developed with several museums, a restaurant, a restaurant, retail shops, wharf facilities, a wood shipyard and landscaping, which would cost close to $5 million, exclusive of land acquisition.

The first order of business, however, will be to elevate the grist mill to protect it from tidal floods and repair the stone foundation, including increasing its height to protect it from the flood tides and winter ice as well as the twice-daily high tides.

In addition, new wood shingles will be added and sections of the roof which had been vandalized will be repaired.

The city hopes that other emergency repairs to the saw mill, planing mill and adjacent garage could be financed by non-profit groups which support the restoration project, such as the Friends of the Souther Tide Mill and the Fore River Watershed Association.

The immediate work is estimated to cost about $245,000, said Richard Meade, director of planning and community development, so funds need to be appropriated.

The five-acre site of the Souther Tide Mill is under a purchase-and-sale agreement between the CVS Corporation of Woonsocket, R.I., and the heirs of Eleanor Cottle who have agreed to sell the former Quincy Lumber Company property. The sale is anticipated sometime this summer.

CVS has pledged to donate three acres of the site to a private non-profit corporation that would preserve and maintain the mill and any other buildings constructed on the site. The mayor and city council would have a say about what non-profit it would be.

One of those entities under consideration is Quincy 2000, a public-private partnership created by the legislature in 1993.

"Quincy 2000 is a leading candidate to manage this project," the mayor said Tuesday. "They have the financial strength."

Sheets said he would discuss with Joseph Mannarino, the executive director of Quincy 2000, the feasibility of creating a real estate division within its organization to oversee the work.

"We've had preliminary discussions but nothing has been formalized," said Mannarino who has presented the proposal to his board of directors.

Mannarino added that under the legislation which created Quincy 2000 nearly six years ago, it is allowed to own and sell property, to loan money and to issue bonds. At this point, Quincy 2000 only has loaned money to existing businesses and startups, totaling $2 million during the past four years, he said.

Sheets said he hoped to recommend to the city council the non-profit organization Feb. 8 or 9. Although he would not identify the others under consideration, Sheets said it would be a Quincy group.

"I wouldn't go out of Quincy," he said.

Two weeks ago the Massachusetts Historical Commission also approved a $100,000 preservation grant for the United First Parish Church.

The money will be used to supplement earlier preservation grants to continue the major repairs of shoring up the existing roof trusses, which also support the domed ceiling. The new grant will be used to replace the slate roof, downspouts and gutters.

The Rev. Sheldon Bennett, minister, said a contract for the 16 specially fabricated steel trusses should be awarded within the next few weeks.

Morrissey Re-Appointed Chair Of Government Relations Committee

State Sen. Michael W. Morrissey was recently re-appointed as Senate Chairman of the Joint Committee on Public Relations by Senate President Thomas F. Birmingham (D-Chelsea).

Morrissey, in his fourth term of office, will chair the Committee on Government Relations, which deals with all legislative issues in the area of public utilities, liquor, gambling, Lottery, Keno, and various licensing and registration boards.

This will be Morrissey's fourth year as senate chairman of the Joint Committee on Government Relations.

Senator Morrissey has developed significant knowledge and proficiency in these areas, and he understands the complexity of policy and political implications involved," Birmingham said. The senate will be served well by his expertise in the coming term.

"I appreciate the Senate president's faith in my leadership on this important committee," Morrissey said.

"Over the past three years, we have worked on issues such as utility deregulation, brew pubs, legalized gambling, and greater consumer protection from the telecommunications industry. We will have more challenges ahead this coming year with expanding consumer protection with the Division of Registration and potential area code redistricting, and more debate on legalized gambling.

In addition to being Senate chairman of Government Relations, Morrissey will retain his membership on the Senate Committee on Ways and Means, the Joint Committee on Natural Resources and Agriculture, and the Joint Committee on transportation. Morrissey will be involved in a variety of issues, including the development of the annual budget, environmental protection, and public transportation.

"Each of these committees touch upon different important elements in my district and gives me influence on policy that impacts my district," Morrissey said.

In addition to his chairmanship and committees, Morrissey will also take on new responsibilities as vice chairman of the Redistricting Committee. The Redistricting Committee will ultimately be responsible for using census information to determine Massachusetts' congressional and legislative districts.

The Committee is composed of members from different sections of the state with Morrissey representing the South Shore. As vice chairman, Morrissey will have significant input on the district lines for State Senator, State Representative and United States Congressman.

"The Committee is charged with addressing the legal and practical demands of developing a computer system and an implementation plan prior to the 2,000 census results," Morrissey said.

"This is in addition to assessing other available data and determining the best way to change the district in accordance to the population demographics."

The National Conference of State Legislators have been urging each state to begin this project at least two years before the 2000 census is due. By establishing this committee now, Massachusetts is at the forefront of the redistricting issue.

Morrissey said he looks forward to the challenges. "Last term was an opportunity to make headway but there is more work ahead and I'm pleased to be in a position to influence the budget and policies regarding utilities and gaming in the commonwealth."

Charles Milone On Dean's List

Charles Milone of Quincy, has been named to the Dean's List at

'Story Of Quincys' Topic At Beechwood Breakfast

Barbara Gilliland recently presented a program on "The Story of Quincys" at a Current Events Breakfast at Beechwood on the Bay.

Gilliland has been visiting and corresponding Quincys throughout the country since 1995. She counts 14 and has visited three: Quincy, Illinois in 1995; and Quincy, Kansas and Quincy, Indiana, both this year. She's exchanged mementos and souvenirs, and she plans to visit Quincy, Missouri for its 160th anniversary in 2000.

Other Quincy's she talked to or learned about are located in Florida, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Washington, New Hampshire, California, Wisconsin, Kentucky and West Virginia. She's invited residents from other Quincys to visit here next October.

Gilliland said she was delighted when she heard about Bill Morrill's trip to visit Quincys throughout the country, said Mary Centola, director of Beechwood's multi-purpose senior center. "Mr. Morrill is personally delivering invitations for the October, 1999 gathering scheduled in Quincy, Mass.," Centola said.

Gilliland shared her enthusiasm for Quincy with a poem:

*"We Spell it with a C
But we say it with a Z.
We're Quincy! We're Quincy!"*

*We're a great little city
That's diversified and pretty We're Quincy! We're Quincy!"*

*We have the Quarries and the shore
How could you ask for more?
We're Quincy! We're Quincy!"*

*We have a great historic trail
You must see it without fail
We're Quincy! We're Quincy!"*

*We have Abigail and John
We're where the Adams' belong
We're Quincy! We're Quincy!"*

*We're the City on the Bay
And we proudly want to say We're Quincy!
The President's City

Elm St. Residence B Zone Extension Is Sought By Raymondi

Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi has asked the City Council to extend the Residence B zone along a stretch of Elm Street and South Walnut Street.

Most of the streets in the area, like Union Street and South Walnut Street, already are zoned Residence B, said Raymondi, who lives across the street from the proposed zoning change.

He was prompted to make the request after meeting with neighbors who are concerned about a proposal to build an eight- or nine-unit residential complex at 115-117 Elm St. on the site of a two-family home.

"The neighbors are concerned about traffic, parking and sewage," said Raymondi. "I wrote to the public works commissioner [David Colton] who replied that in recent history there have been between 30 and 40 sewage backups reported in the area.

"There appears to be an infrastructure problem on a system that is overburdened."

"It's a very dangerous corner in a heavily trafficked area," he added.

"And [the proposed complex] would change the residential character of the Elm Street community."

Raymondi added that the owner of the property, Meadowland Realty Trust, would still be allowed to construct four or five units on the site as of right and if he wanted to pursue the eight- or nine-unit development, he could seek approval from the zoning board of appeals.

The planning board is expected to review the proposed zoning change at its Feb. 10 meeting.

Raymondi said he has asked Colton to investigate more thoroughly what conditions exist in the area that are generating the sewage backup.

"This area has been impacted seriously because of the overflow of Town Brook to the extent that basements, cars and backyards have been under water three to five times a year," he said.

However, the Army Corps of Engineers and the MDC have remedied much of the water problem with the construction of the multi-million dollar construction of the Town Brook tunnel which has been in service for slightly more than a year.

"This year, there have been some pretty good rainstorms, and the brook hasn't overflowed," he said.

And, once the Bigelow Street conduit is in place, that should solve the backup problem. Construction of that project is expected to begin this spring.

"Until the Army Corps completes addressing the flooding problem, I wouldn't think about developing anything on Elm Street," said Raymondi. "Still, traffic, density, parking, the change of character of the neighborhood and sewage backup are issues of concern."

Recognition Overdue For 7 Brothers In World War II The Papile Family And 'The Greatest Generation'

By HENRY BOSWORTH
Quincy's Papile family would have made an appropriate and heart-warming chapter in Tom Brokaw's current best seller, "The Greatest Generation."

No doubt he overlooked them only because he didn't know about them.

But their hometown knows them and, in a way, has sort of overlooked them, too.

The family of the late Raffael and Lucia Papile of Quincy Point truly symbolizes the generation that grew up struggling through the Great Depression and then—still kids—patriotically went off to fight World War II.

Sixteen children!

Seven of whom, one by one, enlisted in the armed forces to do their part in the biggest of all wars.

Seven sons scattered around a dangerous world at war and a mother and father praying they would all come back and fearful they might not.

Seven sons—seven brothers—all in that war at the same time. Can any other family or community say that?

There were, of course, the five Sullivan brothers who tragically went down on the same ship in one of the great sea battles in the Pacific.

GEORGE PAPILE

But seven brothers! All serving overseas in a war at the same time with the Army, Navy, Marines and Coast Guard. Can anyone else claim that distinction?

"Not many, if any," says Julie Papile McCormack, whose father, Jim, a long-time Quincy city assessor, is one of the seven brothers.

The other brothers: William, Albert, Leo, Ralph, Angelo and George.

Julie is proud of her father and uncles and hopes the city—now more than a half century later—will give them the recognition she feels they have so long deserved.

She's not on a crusade. It's family pride.

After Planning Board Go-Ahead Council To Have Say March 2 On High Point Project

By MARILYN JACKSON

The controversial multi-million-dollar proposal to construct the largest apartment complex in the city will be debated by the city council at 7 p.m. Tuesday, March 2, at Quincy High School.

Councilor-at-large Timothy Cahill asked that MediaOne cablecast the meeting live for viewers who may not be able to attend.

The council sits as the city's permit granting authority for planned unit developments and must issue a decision on the plan by March 8.

Last week the planning board in a 2-1 vote favorably recommended Congress Group Ventures' scaled-down proposal for Highpoint, to be located off Quarry Street — with several conditions:

• There shall be no more than 1,195 total units, with a maximum of 995 apartments and 200 assisted living units. Fifty percent of the rental apartments may be one-bedroom units; the other half, two-bedroom units.

• If kitchen/dining facilities are to be provided within the proposed assisted living facility, the developer must secure health department approval.

• The developer must obtain health department approval for a proposed swimming pool and receive an annual permit from the department to operate the fenced-in structure.

• All paving and infrastructure — sewerage and drainage — work on Quarry Street must be completed before 50 percent of the units can be occupied; other traffic improvements must be completed before occupancy of the development reaches 75 percent.

• Larger lined water mains must be installed by the developer along sections of Quarry Street to improve fire flows. A new 12-inch pipe will be required to provide a second large main

Councillors Should Uphold Laws Too, Says Raymondi Perjury Penalty Set For Council Hearings

By MARILYN JACKSON
It's official.

Paid professionals such as lawyers and engineers who provide information to the city council during hearings will have to pledge to testify truthfully under penalty of perjury.

In the meantime Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi wants councillors to be held to the same high standard.

"If you were asking someone to raise his right hand to speak the truth, perhaps that should apply for city councillors as well," he said proposing to amend Harold's ordinance.

Raymondi proposed Monday that if a city councillor "willfully and knowingly violates the oath of office to uphold the laws of Massachusetts and the Constitution of the United States during the conduct of city business, he/she shall forfeit any leadership position he/she holds in the council," including the council presidency (Cont'd on page 30)

Millennium Committee Seeking Suggestions

When a committee met last month to discuss ways for Quincy to celebrate the millennium, the members offered dozens of ideas.

One suggestion was that children create tiles about what they think of their world and what they think the future is going to be, said committee chairman Peter Kolson, city council president.

"It could be a pictorial, installed in the new library so that children could see that for the next 100 years," he said.

The committee is seeking other ideas and suggestions of events to celebrate the occasion as well, Kolson continued.

Any group, organization or individual can forward comments and suggestions to Rhonda Merrill, coordinator of events and tourism, at the Richard J. Koch Family Park and Recreation Complex, One Merrymount Parkway, Quincy 02170.

The next scheduled meeting of the millennium committee is Feb. 25, Merrill said.

P.U.D. Permit Filed To Develop Lumber Site

On behalf of the CVS Corporation of Woonsocket, R.I., Coffman Quincy Trust has filed for a P.U.D. (planned unit development) special permit to develop the former Quincy Lumber Company site.

The City Council, as the special permit granting authority, has scheduled a hearing on the proposal at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, March 3, at City Hall.

CVS has entered a purchase-and-sale agreement with the heirs of Eleanor Cottle to acquire the five-acre site which includes the historic Souther Tide Mill. The sale is expected to be consummated this summer.

Last month, real estate developer Jeffrey Coffman, representing CVS, and Dominic Schiavone, a real estate manager for CVS, unveiled their proposal to build a stand-alone store on 100,000 square feet close to Southern Artery and deed the remaining three acres of the property to a non-profit 501(c)(3) corporation that would preserve and maintain the mill and any other buildings constructed on the site.

Mayor James Sheets said previously, he would recommend to the council the name of a Quincy-based non-profit corporation which would oversee the restoration and management of the waterfront park project.

This week, Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymond questioned whether the city should have a say in the ownership of private property.

"The city council has no business indicating who owns the property," said

Raymond, questioning under what authority did the mayor or council should have a say.

"I don't have an answer," said John Keenan, the mayor's executive secretary. He said the mayor wanted to be sure that everyone was informed about what was going on with the parcel so that there would be no surprises.

Raymond suggested that city involvement could pose some liability, and Council President Peter Kolson agreed.

"How do we guarantee that the Souther Tide Mill will be restored?" asked Councillor-at-large Paul Harold. The non-profit corporation cannot be comprised only of people who are well-intentioned, he said.

"I'm not sure how the subdivision or the transfer of ownership takes place," said Harold.

Richard Meade, director of planning, said it was his understanding that in the purchase and sale agreement is for the entire parcel, out of which 100,000 square feet will be carved out for the CVS store and the rest to a non-profit.

"It was never the intention of the city to own the property," said Meade.

A significant amount of work needs to be done on the site, said Kolson, noting that the Massachusetts Historical Commission recently awarded a $100,000 matching grant to the city to make some immediate repairs.

Those repairs call for elevating the grill mill and repairing the stone foundation, adding shingles and repairing sections of the roof which had been vandalized.

Raymond also said that the construction of the CVS could resolve longstanding traffic problems at the Cove Way condominium complex and asked whether the Mass. Highway Department would approve lights there.

"It's a package deal," replied Kolson. "Jack Gillon is well aware of the traffic issues from Sea Street to Washington Street."

Tedeschi Seeks Beer-Wine Permit

The Tedeschi Food Shop at 751 East Squantum St. has filed a new application to sell beer and wine on the premises. A hearing date before the licensing board has been set at 10 a.m. Tuesday, Feb. 9.

Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers said the Squantum community has consistently voiced an overwhelming opposition to the sale of alcohol at this location.

"I don't know what changed between December and February that has caused Tedeschi's to reapply for this license," he said. "I know the residents have not changed their minds because the store owner hasn't done anything to answer the many concerns about alcohol sales in this neighborhood."

Ayers said parishioners from the Star of the Sea Church and their pastor are opposed to this application.

"As a business owner, I know how important it is to foster positive relations with the community. By pursuing this license against the will of the residents, Tedeschi's is not being a good neighbor and will probably reduce their customer base in the long run," Ayers added.

Several issues remain unresolved — traffic impact, lack of parking and what will be done to help ensure that beer and wine sales at this location will not contribute to youth problems evident in the area, especially Squaw Rock.

SALT SENSITIVITY

If you're reluctant to give up salt but think you should for your blood pressure, you should know that not all people react to sodium the same way. Consider this interesting option: There is now a blood test that checks for blood levels of angiotensin, a hormone that reacts to sodium by constricting blood vessels, thereby elevating blood pressure. Seventeen percent of white Americans inherit this gene from both parents, overproduce this hormone, and are very sodium-sensitive. Another 48% of the same population has one normal and one overproducing gene and exhibit moderate difficulty with sodium. That leaves 35% of the population for whom sodium does NOT el-evate blood pressure and who may not need to restrict salt intake.

The only way to know for sure what group you fall into, however, is to be tested. Ask us for more information if you think this test may be useful for you. At AFFILIATED MEDICAL GROUPS, located at 700 Congress St., Quincy, we listen to your concerns. We are affiliated with Quincy and South Shore Hospitals. Please call us at 617-472-2550; office hours by appointment.

P.S. A study by researchers at the University of Utah showed that dietary sodium restriction by borderline-hypertensive people without the gene to over-produce angiotensin had no effect on their blood pressure.

23 Others Reappointed By Sheets Childs Departing As Treasurer-Tax Collector

Mayor James Sheets re-appointed 23 department heads Monday for a one-year term, but city treasurer-collector Dana Childs was not among them.

Childs was named treasurer-collector by former Mayor Frank McCauley 12 years ago and Sheets had reappointed him.

"Dana feels he has completed his job here," said Sheets. "He took us through a period of time when we had all these bankruptcies and back taxes.

"He did a lot of reorganization [of the department] and basically feels it is time to move on," said Sheets.

Childs was aggressive in chasing money owed to the city and succeeded in collecting $2.5 million due on various Ricciardi properties. The most recent payment of $504,000 was collected last month.

"There are no more large amounts, what I would call impact amounts," due the city, said Childs. "When you get one [of those payments] in, it makes a big difference in free cash levels."

He said the city's tax collection efforts among the taxpayers are "very, very good, in the high 90s" percentage-wise.

He declined to comment about his future career options.

"He's a valuable guy," said Sheets. "I suspect he would have a lot of different entities" interested in his talents.

Receiving one-year appointments were Lester Gerry, director of building construction and maintenance; Rosemary Nolan, public works program manager; Ann McLaughlin, director of public libraries; Charles Phelan Jr., director of data processing; Jane Reikard, secretary of the Rent Grievance Board; J. Joseph MacRitchie, legal counsel, and Alfred Grazioso, purchasing agent and parking clerk.

Also, James Chiccano, director of personnel; Stephen McGrath, solicitor; James Timmins, assistant solicitor; John Gillon, director of traffic and parking; Kevin Madden, assistant solicitor; Barry Welch, director of recreation; David Colton, commissioner of public works, and James Papile, assessor.

And, Rhonda Merrill, coordinator of events and tourism; Walter White, director of inspectional services; Jonathan Yip, equal opportunity administrator; Brian Buckley, director of Council on Aging; Thomas Fabrizio, public works contract manager; David Murphy park department program manager; Heather Sargent, conservation enforcement officer, and Saeed "Fred" Mirza, city engineer.

Morrisette Post Signs Purchase Agreement For New Home

Morrisette Legion Post has signed a purchase and sales agreement for the building at 81-83 Liberty St., South Quincy, as the site for their new post home.

Atty. George Burke, representing Morrisette Post, confirmed that the agreement was signed Jan.

22 with a purchase price of $227,500.

Burke said the agreement was signed by Charles Downing, Jr., owner of the property, and Morrisette Commander John Joyce and Robert Lotterhand, of the post's Building Committee.

Morrisette sold its former post home on Miller St., West Quincy off the Southeast Expressway about three years ago to Saturn automobile company, and is currently holding meetings at the Torre dei Passeri social club on Washington St.

The post has also met at the Quincy Sons of Italy in the past.

The Papile Family And 'The Greatest Generation'

gushing forth when she heard of the long overdue World War II Memorial the city has planned for Merrymount Park.

It will honor the Quincy men and women who served on the fighting front and those who played major roles on the homefront, building ships at Fore River and doing the many other things, big and small, so vital to the war effort.

She has asked the committee planning the memorial to consider some little special recognition for the Papile family in that area.

"There have been citations," she says, "from Washington, D.C., the State House and Cardinal Cushing but, strangely enough, no one can remember any recognition from the city of Quincy."

Her father, who still lives in the family homestead on Harkins St., next door to her, served in the Pacific with the Coast Guard. He was a sonarman on a sub-chaser around the Philippines.

Bill, who was the first to go into the service, chose the Army and saw action in the early island invasions in the Southwest Pacific, advancing to the rank of captain. Returning home, he served as Ward 2 city councillor in 1948-49 and was a top salesman at the then Quincy Motor Co. on Quincy Ave.

Al could have easily stayed out of the war. Working at the Fore River shipyard, he had a top priority exemption. But he enlisted in the Navy, for a six year stint not just for the duration. And, he stayed in for 26 years which included service in the Korean and Vietnam Wars.

He was mainly aboard aircraft carriers, and retired as a chief petty officer. He became a manager at a Las Vegas hotel.

Leo joined the Marine Corps and trained Marines in judo to ready them for combat. He later served in the Pacific and was with the occupational forces in Japan. He is a retired MDC police detective and was recently inducted into the Quincy-North Quincy Football Hall of Fame.

His middle name is Quincy and he's proud of it. It was given to him by his father because of his own love of Quincy.

Ralph, better known as "Chick," enlisted in the Navy and served aboard the cruiser USS Little Rock and the battleship USS Tennessee in the Atlantic and Pacific theaters. He own's Chick's barbershop in Quincy Point and has served as chairman of the Massachusetts Board of Barber Commissioners.

Angelo, known as "Mike," like Al, could have stayed home. In his 40's, he had an essential job at the Charlestown Navy Yard and wore glasses. But he kept trying to get into the war and finally made it with the Army.

"We still wonder how he got in," says Jim. "He never told us but he got in and they trained him as a cook and sent him to Europe to cook in George Patton's Third Army.

When he arrived there, they told him they ate K-rations and didn't need a cook so they handed him a rifle."

Mike's company received a commendation for advancing 99 miles in nine days in combat.

After the war, he went back to his job at the Charlestown Navy Yard and was entertainment chairman for the Quincy Lodge of Elks. Ironically, he survived combat action but died

FOURTEEN OF THE Papile family children attended the 50th wedding anniversary of their parents at the Quincy Neighborhood Club in March, 1956 despite the first of two blizzards in of lung disease apparently brought on by asbestos at the shipyard.

George, the last to enter the service, enlisted in the Navy and somehow wound up aboard the carrier USS Bennington in the Mediterranean with his brother, Al.

Brothers weren't supposed to serve together on the same ship after the Sullivan brothers tragedy.

The pair got the chance to visit with relatives in Torre dei Passeri, the hometown of their parents in Italy. A retired letter carrier, George was inducted into the Quincy-North Quincy Football Hall of Fame like Leo.

All seven brothers came home unwounded.

But irony and tragedy struck the family just after the war when another brother, Edward, was killed when he fell from a staging at the Fore River shipyard. Edward, who was also a short order cook at Eddie's Diner, had wanted to go into the service but was married with children.

Besides the seven brothers in the service, two brothers-in-law were there, too. Sisters Amelia and Helen were "war brides." Amelia married Edward Flaherty, U.S. Navy and Helen wed Lou Mariano, U.S. Army.

Gloria, the baby of the family, later married Alfred Kelly who saw service with the Army in the Korean War.

Of the 16 children, eight are now alive and eight deceased. The surviving children, Jim, Leo, Chick and George, four of the seven World War II veterans, Amelia, Helen, Gloria and Mary still live in Quincy and the immediate South Shore.

Mary, the oldest of the children who will be 92 in April, is a retired assistant city treasurer and likes to remind you she was appointed and reappointed by five consecutive mayors.

Among the deceased are three of the World War II veterans, Bill, Mike and Al.

Gone, too, are Alfonzo "Pop" Papile, Pasadea "Sadie" Papile, John, Jenny and as noted, Eddie.

"Pop" served on the Quincy Housing Authority board as a spearhead in Little League, PTA and senior citizen associations and a founder of the Torre dei Passeri Mutual Benefit Society.

"Sadie" was also active in the community and founded the Ladies Torre dei Passeri Mutual Benefit Society of which was its first president.

John was a member of the Quincy Board of Registrars, superintendent of the Milton Post Office and a president of the Torre dei Passeri Society.

Jenny, Jim's twin sister, died at an early age. What was it like growing up during the depression in a family with so many children?

"My mother was cooking and baking all the time," Jim recalls. "My father had a huge garden and she would also the same week. Kneeling, from left, are Leo, Ralph, Albert, George and James. Standing, Angelo, Alfonzo, Helen, Mary, parents Lucia and Raffael, Sadie, Gloria, Amelia, William and John. Two other children, Jenny and Edward, were deceased. preserve tomatoes, string beans, and other vegetables. We didn't go hungry, thanks to them."

Jim still remembers his father's intense pride.

"He told my mother to stay away from the welfare office. He said he would work and take care of his family. They weren't going on welfare. And that was that."

He found road jobs and worked on WPA projects.

After the war, whenever the shipyard was on strike, the family could expect a line-up at their door.

"My father would find the men jobs to help them get through the strike," Jim remembers.

What was it like at dinner time with all those kids?

"It wasn't bad. We ate in shifts at two tables."

How did the kids get along?

"There were no problems, really. We looked after one another. It was sort of all-for-one-and-one-for-all."

Getting to school was no problem, either. The children went nine years to closeby Webster Elementary and Point Junior which were in connecting buildings.

"All we had to do was jump over the fence and we were there," laughs Jim.

Being in the shadow of the school had one drawback.

"The city took a big chunk of my father's garden to build the Point Junior gym," says Jim.

His father died in 1962 at age 76.

"He was very patriotic and loved this country and Quincy," says Jim. "He told us to go to school and learn and to do the very best at whatever we decided to do in life and, to be good citizens."

His mother died in 1978 at age 90. She stressed the importance of religion and set an example.

"She walked a mile or so to St. John's Church and received Communion every day until her very late years," recalls Jim.

Raffael and Lucia DiLorenzo had been next-door neighbors in Torre dei Passeri. He came to the U.S. at age 15 and while living in Quincy in 1905, sent Lucia a photo of himself. She sent one of herself back to him. He looked at it and proposed to her by mail. And then bought her a boat ticket—shrewdly, one-way.

They were married in 1906. He was 21 and she 17. They were married 56 years until his death parted them.

A little special recognition seems long overdue. Whether it be at the World War II Memorial, the new Point Junior High School or some other appropriate location.

A most unusual family, that has served their country and community well.

A family with the stuff—the right stuff—that "the greatest generation" was made of.

Scenes From Yesterday

METROPOLITAN SEWERAGE PLANT, HOUGHS NECK, MASS.

THIS 1910 POSTCARD shows the Metropolitan Sewerage Plant on Nut Island at the end of Houghs Neck. Built in 1901, it served as a screen house for the MDC sewer system for 50 years. Raw sewage came here through pipes from throughout the system to be screened. The liquid passed right through into the harbor and the solid debris was burned. For many years, Neckers referred to the plant as the 'pumpy.' In 1951, a new plant to treat raw sewage replaced this facility. It never really worked well but it was better than this operation. It served towns from as far away as Ashland until it was shut down last fall. It is currently being demolished. Sewage still passes through here though, but it now goes under the harbor through a deep tunnel to a new treatment plant on Deer Island. After 100 years, Nut Island will soon be returned to the people of Houghs Neck as a seaside park.

Wondering About The Quincy Center Concourse

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

I wonder why the 25% plans for section two of Quincy Center Concourse were submitted to the state on Monday, Jan. 26 without a vote of the CAC or the city council.

I wonder why we were told on Jan. 21 at the CAC meeting that the proposed landtakings now include the eye doctor and the karate studio on Revere Rd. (for additional parking) in addition to the three homes on Mechanic St. and the American Legion on the corner of Mechanic St. and Revere Rd.

I wonder if the proposed Sheriff's Office at 14 Revere Rd., the site of the former Premier Furniture store, which is scheduled to open in March has anything to do with the proposed parking directly across the street on Revere Rd.

I wonder if the parking will be available for people who want to shop on Hancock St.

I wonder how pedestrian friendly and safe the Concourse will be to people crossing the street at the intersection of Mechanic St. and Revere Rd.

I wonder what is going to happen to what is left of the upper part of Revere

Rd. from Hancock St. to what is now Mechanic St.

I wonder when and if there will be a public hearing where the public will be given an opportunity to voice their concerns about these proposed changes to our neighborhood and if anyone will listen to our concerns.

Tom Sullivan Loved Quincy Sports

Editor, The Quincy Sun:
Tom Sullivan was one of the people who loved Quincy school sports and made it something that other towns would envy.

Every week in The Quincy Sun, Tom would tell the stories of the games win or lose with an enthusiasm that is rare. No matter if it was the star of a game or the kid who sat at the end of the bench, Tom would mention them all and point out how their contributions helped North or Quincy out in that game. Tom was a truly nice man who loved what he did and he carried a torch for all of the athletes of Quincy. We have all lost a friend, but have an example he set that we all need to try and live up to in order to keep Quincy and North Quincy High School sports number one.

Tom will still cover local sports, but he has a higher seat in the press box. I know he's still looking down and rooting for all the kids from Quincy.

Appreciates Quincy Citizens Police Academy

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

I recently had the good fortune of being a graduate of the 10th Citizens Police Academy run by the Quincy Police Department.

The Citizens Police Academy, as a concept, is a fresh approach to facilitating interaction between the Department and the people it serves. Over the course of the 10 weeks of class, we were afforded the opportunity to see first hand how our Police Department operates. Through the lectures and ride-alongs, we gained valuable new insight into the job of a city police officer.

Though I've always had ultimate respect and admiration for those called to serve in this capacity, this experience broadened my perspective in terms of seeing those officers as fellow citizens. I will now be more comfortable approaching a police officer, calling 911 if I am in need of assistance, and/or being prepared to assist the Department if ever called to do so.

On behalf of the Citizens

Police Academy #10, I would like to publicly thank Mayor Sheets, Chief Frane, and the Quincy City Council for making this experience available to the residents of Quincy. Our sincerest thanks and appreciation go to Officer Bob Hanna for organizing this class so well, treating us with utmost respect, sharing his knowledge, information and expertise, and doing it all with such grace, compassion and good humor.

Thank you to all the officers who participated in our class for sharing your experiences and wisdom. It was all so much fun.

Della Chiesa Files $2.5 Million Capital Improvements Plan

By PAUL HAROLD

Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa filed a major capital improvements plan with the city council this week for projects totaling more than $2.5 million.

Included in the package was $200,000 for a new North Quincy branch of the Thomas Crane Library; $641,000 for projects at the hospital, including modernization of the x-ray lab and a new medical library; a new gymnasium at North Quincy High School and $1.4 million for construction of a city incinerator. The incinerator plan was "tentative," but the mayor was working with the consultants Metcalf and Eddy to finalize the project.

City Council President William Ellis predicted an easy approval by the council.

TOWN RIVER YACHT CLUB'S 50TH YEAR

Commodore Kenneth "Buck" Yoerger announced that plans were underway to celebrate Town River Yacht Club's 50th anniversary.

The major event of the golden anniversary would be a regatta with sailing boats of the National One-Class design. Carl Ross, Adam Tomson and Rear Commodore Ted Beck were in charge of the anniversary book.

The club was established in 1911 and operated out of a small boat house at the foot of Edison St., run by Michael Shea and Charles Jones. Nine years later the boat house was put on a raft and floated to the present location. Eugene Stone, Quincy's famous yachting mayor, was a former member of the club.

The 1961 membership stood at 292, with 60 juniors.

COURT RULES AGAINST BRETT

Norfolk Superior Court Judge Edmund Dewing ruled against Rep. Joseph Brett's bid to stop construction of a bowling center on Faxon land on the Southern Artery.

Brett attempted to stop construction because of the adverse impact to the neighborhood. He served as his own attorney in case.

The court dismissed Brett's challenge to the Zoning Board of Appeals' decision, ruling that he was not an aggrieved party and thus had no standing to challenge the board's decision.

QUINCY-ISMS

John Sullivan and Michael Flaherty were in charge of the North Quincy Knights of Columbus St. Patrick's Day party. . . In response to the difficulty in plowing streets during the recent storms, the city council passed, over the mayor's veto, a new towing ordinance. It provided for a $20 fine, with $5 a day storage charge. . . At a prior council meeting $1,002 was approved to pay Colletta Brothers for the towing of 77 cars during a storm. The cars were towed to the North Quincy High School parking lot, but the owners refused to pay the fines. . . Christine Lane of North Quincy received a thank you letter from President and Mrs. Kennedy. She knitted booties for John Kennedy, Jr. . . Mrs. James McIntyre was chairman of the St. Ann's Women's Club spring luncheon. She was assisted by Mrs. Paul Hunt, Mrs. John Daniels and Mrs. John Quintiliani. . . County Treasurer Raymond Warmington was chairman of the testimonial for Rev. Thomas Tierney of St. John's. Henry Bosworth of the Herald Traveler was in charge of publicity, along with Herb Fontaine of WJDA and Percy Lane. . . Blood donors this week included, from the Jewish Community Center, David Ezickson and Alfred Saltzman; from the Knight of Columbus, Maurice Horrigan, Jr. and from the Theodore Roosevelt Lodge A.F. and A.M., Eric Pearson and Franklin Willard. . . Kenneth White, director of the Quincy College division, reported to the school committee on plans to get state support for a community college. . . Eric Starck was superintendent for the church school at Covenant Congregational Church. . . Thomas McDonald was commander at the Bryan V.F.W. . . Those on the honor roll at Central Junior High School included Paul Bregoli, Ann Yeomans, Scott Healey, Peter Kenney, Dawn Krasinski, Karen Lundsgaard, Lorraine Gentile and Ellen Zack. . . Joe Streadwick was YMCA wrestling coach. . . The force of ice in Quincy Bay pushed the front porch of the Quantum Yacht Club into the bay. . . Charles Ross was elected to the building committee for Legion Post 95.

STRESS FRACTURES

Stress fractures also known as "March Fractures," received their name because they were common in the military due to the repetitive motion of marching during training. Very often a person will present to the Podiatrist's office with pain, redness and swelling localized to a specific area in the foot with no history of trauma. A common finding is that the patient has started exercising or has increased current activities where there is significant amounts of weight bearing. X-rays are usually unremarkable.

A stress fracture is a weakening of the bone as opposed to an actual break in the bone. Left untreated, it can progress to a fracture. X-ray changes usually lag two to three weeks behind the initial presentation of the stress fracture. This is why at initial presentation there are usually no changes on the X-rays. Repeat X-rays done three weeks later will show the stress fracture most of the time.

If you are experiencing pain or symptoms similar to those described above, contact a qualified Podiatrist. It is important to treat stress fractures as continued activities can lead to an actual break in the bone.

If you are suffering from these or any other foot related complaints call us at 773-4300. We are located at 1261 Furnace Brook Parkway, Suite #18, Quincy, and are affiliated with Carney, Quincy and South Shore Hospitals.

Fashion Show Benefit For Dianne DeVanna Center

The Second Annual Swing Into Spring fashion show and dinner fund raiser will be held at the Neighborhood Club, 27 Glendale Road, Quincy, Thursday, Feb. 25. The 6-9 p.m. event will benefit The Dianne DeVanna Center for the Prevention of Child Abuse and Neglect.

Chairman Theresa David said Caryn Smith of Caryn's Corner will have her collection of clothing showcased. In addition, there will be a full dinner and raffle prizes.

Tickets are $30 per person and are available at the DeVanna Center by calling (781) 843-7010 or from Smith at (617) 770-0536.

Susan Nagle, Executive Director of The DeVanna Center expressed appreciation for the support that the community has provided over the years.

"Just over 20 years ago, Dianne DeVanna died as a result of child abuse. The center was founded in her memory, and it continues to provide support services to families who are suffering from the trauma of child abuse and neglect."

"Functions of this nature help us to raise funds in order to ensure the continuation of our parent aide, parent education, support groups, and transportation programs with the 10 communities we serve-- Braintree, Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Milton, Norwell, Quincy, Randolph, Scituate, and Weymouth. The staff, our board of directors, and all of our volunteers are committed to preventing another tragedy."

Biscotti With Anise

You never know who you're going to run in to when you leave the house.

And so it was last week when I was having some physical therapy.

All I said was "who baked the cookies?" It turned out to be a former teamster doing his exercises. Anyway, during the conversation, I promised him I'd print today's basic recipe for biscotti.

Biscotti with Anise

- 1 stick butter or margarine
- 2 cups flour
- 1 cup sugar
- 2 tsp baking powder
- 2 large eggs, slightly beaten
- 1/2 cup milk

1 teaspoon anise oil (I use the oil for more flavor)

In a mixing bowl, melt butter and add the sugar. Gradually add flour, baking powder, eggs, milk and anise and blend until a dough is formed. Place on floured board and knead until smooth adding more flour if needed.

On a slightly greased cookie sheet, form two or three narrow loafs of the mixture and bake in a 350 degree oven for about 20 minutes. When cooled a bit, slice into biscotti size and bake again until toasted. They can be topped with an icing with sprinkles if desired, and can be stored for weeks in a tin or closed container. (almond or vanilla flavoring can also be used in place of the anise.)

(Marie D'Olimpio has written a cookbook containing recipes printed in The Quincy Sun.

They can be purchased at the Fruit Basket (near Star Market), Previte's Market, Sumner Street, Nanci's Barber Shop, Elm St., Braintree, Curry's Hardware, Copeland Street, and the Cherry Gift Shop at Quincy Hospital.)

Montclair/Wollaston Neighborhood Association To Meet Tonight

The Montclair/ Wollaston Neighborhood Association will meet today (Thursday) at 7:30 p.m. at Work Incorporated, 3 Arlington St., corner of West Squantum.

Open House Saturday At Renaissance Coffee And Tea Emporium

An open house will be held Saturday from 9 a.m. to noon at the Renaissance Coffee and Tea Emporium which opened recently at 45 Billings Rd., North Quincy.

Mayor James Sheets will cut the ribbon in the grand opening ceremony at 9 a.m.

Complimentary coffee and biscotti will be served from 9 to noon with special events planned for the whole day.

The shop features a selection of fine coffees and teas served fresh or packaged to take home.

Kevin McGurl, proprietor says the decor of the shop is reminiscent of an 1850's era coffee roasting house.

McGurl, who attended the Culinary Institute of America, has 20 years of experience in restaurant operation.

Fire Dept. Seeks Radio Equipment Update

Enhanced 911 Gets 'Working Well' Report

The enhanced 911 system which includes a listening post and a monitoring device at the central fire station has been in operation for about two weeks and is working well, reported Charles Phelan, director of data processing.

"The firefighters hear a call, see an address and see the priority of the call," such as number one for an ambulance, he told the City Councillors Monday night.

"It's a little bit of fail-safe," he said.

Now the fire department needs to update its radio equipment, added Fire Chief Thomas Gorman.

"Much of the equipment is 20 years old. We have a serious problem," Gorman told the councillors.

"The [radio] transmitter [on top of Quincy Hospital] has been struck by lightning twice, and Motorola no longer makes the parts" used in the city's fire department radios.

The company that repairs the radios can no longer locate parts, added the chief. "These radios are the life-line for the firefighters."

Fire Alarm Superintendent Robert Campbell said replacing the radios would cost about $50,000, and another $50,000 would be needed to redesign the radio room which includes telephones, radios and other equipment.

"The radios would not cost much money, but to change the room would mean a major renovation," he said. On a positive note, he said the work would be done in-house.

Chief Gorman has forwarded a request to the mayor for funds for new radios.

Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi, who is chairman of the public safety committee, asked what was in the fire department's capital outlay plan.

John Keenan, the mayor's executive secretary, said all the budget requests for fiscal year 2000 are being reviewed.

"The purpose of the public safety committee is to advocate for the public safety for the entire safety," Raymondi said. The enhanced 911 system is "something we can be proud of, similar to our work on community policing."

He said it was about a year ago when the firefighters made an impassioned plea to introduce an enhanced 911 system to Quincy. "The firefighters' union deserves a lot of credit." Other councillors echoed his sentiments.

"Quincy's version of E911 has enhanced the city's public safety," added Councillor Stephen Durkin. Councillor-at-large Paul Harold noted the cost of the work by SESCO of Hingham totaled about $9,000, far less than what the telephone company had estimated.

"We've changed 911 in the state," said Kenneth Lippens, president of the firefighters' Quincy local. "The next step is to update our equipment."

He added that the two firefighters who monitor the E911 calls need a supervisor in that room. Presently, there is no officer during the night shift. The day staff who handles personnel serves as the supervisor of those firefighters, said Campbell.

Laborers Union Agrees To 3-Year Contract

Local 1139, the laborers' union, has agreed with the city to a three-year contract, effective as of July 1, 1998.

In addition, supervisory personnel also have reached a negotiated settlement.

"They agreed to a 0 and 2, 0 and 3 and 0 and 4 settlement," said Mayor James Sheets.

That means as of July 1, 1998, there was no wage increase, but as of Jan. 1, 1999, the employees received a 2 percent increase. Wage increases of 3 percent and 4 percent will occur as of Jan. 1, 2000, and Jan. 1, 2001, respectively.

"This is the same agreement that the patrolmen's association reached with the city" a few months ago, said the mayor.

As of Jan. 1, 1999, entry level positions in Local 1139 will start at $445.58 with an increase to step 10 to $500.28 a week.

Starting wage schedules for members of unit D of District 925 for 35-hour-a-week positions range from $23,512 to $44,445. The animal control officer and the custodian supervisor are paid on a 40-hour-a-week basis.

The salary schedules will be reviewed by the finance and the ordinance committees.

Senior Exercise Classes At YMCA

The South Shore YMCA will be offering three new Senior Exercise classes beginning Feb 1.

Classes are held Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday mornings. Other unions working without contracts include the firefighters' and the school department. Executive secretary John Keenan said the library staff and the crossing guards and three nurses are close to agreement.

Registration is underway. For more information, call Gail Laing at 479-8500, ext. 135.

Drinking Water Quality Ward 5 Forum Topic

The Ward 5 Community Association will hold a public forum on the quality of Quincy's drinking water Feb. 11 at 7 p.m. at the Beechwood Knoll School, Fenno St., Wollaston.

The association noted that the meeting coincides with the movie "A Civil Action," which has heightened awareness about the consequences of unsafe drinking water.

Speakers will be Bruce Adams, a city water consultant from Weston &

Sampson Engineering, Quincy Health Commissioner M. Jane Gallahue, and a representative from the MWRA.

The speakers will outline where Quincy's drinking water comes from, how it gets from its sources to homes and businesses, what testing and monitoring efforts are undertaken to ensure that it is clean and safe, and recent improvements to city water lines.

"The movie and best-selling book "A Civil Action" raises public consciousness about the consequences about not protecting the public's water supplies," said Association President Doug Gutro. "This meeting will give residents across the city a chance to learn first-hand the role that city and state officials play in bringing safe, potable water into our homes."

The Ward 5 Community Association now meets on the second Thursday of each month.

D'Amico Calls Neighborhood Meeting For Tonight

Councillor Michael D'Amico has called a neighborhood meeting for tonight (Thursday) at 7 p.m. at the Ward 4 Community Center, 100 Brooks Ave., South Quincy.

D'Amico said discussion will focus on the plans of Lappen's Auto Supply Company, Liberty St. to purchase the McLean Steel building on Columbia St., and connect the two buildings.

He said the proposal requires input from the neighborhood and a permit requires approval by the Zoning Board of Appeals. The plans will be available for examination at the meeting, he said.

D'Amico said a representative from Morrisette Legion Post has been invited to update residents on their progress to relocate their post home at Liberty St. and Brook Rd.

D'Amico, meanwhile reported that the new traffic signals have been installed at Albertina St., Brooks Ave., and Centre St.

The next phase of work scheduled for the winter, he said, includes a working light at the intersection of Centre St., Common St., and West St.

HIGHPOINT

To the Citizens of Quincy:

My name is Dean Stratouly and as President and CEO of Congress Group Ventures, I would like to thank the City's Planning Board for voting, "Yes," to grant a special permit for my company's proposed development, Highpoint, to be built on Quarry Street.

Over the course of three public hearings, board meetings, many neighborhood meetings, and dozens of private conversations with elected officials and abutters, we have listened to the concerns raised regarding our plans for the Quarry Street site and we have addressed these issues. We came up with a plan for the Highpoint development that we believe will have a positive impact on the City of Quincy, and the Planning Board has recognized our efforts.

We have reduced the overall scope of the project. We have worked with abutters, and city and state officials to help mitigate problem areas such as traffic and groundwater flow. We have developed a project that will create 1,400 construction jobs over the next five to seven years and approximately 40 full-time jobs upon its successful completion. Highpoint will be privately financed, without any public funding, subsidies or reimbursement and will generate tax revenues of over $2 million each year.

We now anxiously await the vote of the City Council and we hope they will affirm the merits of this development and allow the project to move forward.

I would also like to thank all of you that have given your time and attention to the project. I know that many of you did not embrace the development, but we have appreciated your comments and input, and believe we have produced a better project as a result. All your help has been greatly appreciated.

I look forward to becoming a significant member of the Quincy community in the near future.

Sincerely,

Dean Stratouly

Will Aid Haiti

For Broad Meadows Students 'A Days Work' Will Have New Meaning

By BERT GARR

For many Quincy students, "a day's work" consists of earning enough money to save up for a new CD or video game, but for the students at Broad Meadows Middle School, those three words recently took on a more significant meaning:

They were selected for a new program run by the United States Agency For International Development (USAID).

The program, entitled "A Day's Work", asks students to devote one day in each school year to earn money to be donated to educational projects in a developing nation.

The students have chosen Haiti as the recipient of this year's donations.

Set to begin in Quincy in May, the students will search out sponsors willing to pay them minimum wage or greater for such jobs as mowing lawns, office work, holding bake sales, and washings cars.

The students will donate their earnings to a trust-worthy Haitian aid organization designated by USAID which will use the money to help build a school, purchase textbooks, and fund scholarships.

USAID hopes to have the program in every school in the country by 2003.

Broad Meadows was one of six schools in the nation chosen for pilot run of "A Day's Work".

The school was chosen for the program in recognition of their four-year crusade to end child labor that began when Iqbal Mashish, a former child laborer from Pakistan visited Broad Meadows in 1994.

He spoke of the injustice he suffered when sold into slavery at a Pakistani carpet factory at age four.

Murdered shortly after he spoke at the school, Broad Meadows students and educators rallied to raise over $140,000 to build a school named after Iqbal in Pakistan.

They have since spoken at a congressional committee in Washington D.C. addressing the harmful effects of child labor, received an award from Celtics Coach Rick Pitino at the Fleet Center, and appeared on national news programs.

Speaking at the program's kickoff at Broad Meadows' Auditorium last week, Rev. William McCarthy and others expressed hope and gratitude for the Broad Meadows students' efforts.

Fr. McCarthy thanked the students for their past efforts in Pakistan and emphasized to them the added importance of assisting Haiti, the western hemisphere's most impoverished nation.

He told the students that, in the two times he had visited Haiti, he worked in soup kitchens and saw children "walk in with hubcaps that they hoped to get filled with rice", houses which consisted of nothing but cinderblocks and cardboard, and prisons filled with starving children jailed for stealing food.

Broad Meadows student Sabrina Squatrito drew the parallel between the campaign in Pakistan and Operation Day's Work.

"In our 'School For Iqbal' campaign," said Squatrito, "we are trying to end child labor one school at a time. In Operation Day's Work, we are helping poor, working children, one country at a time."

Students then showed that they had already begun working towards that goal.

Broad Meadows student Quiana Blair took to the stage and presented over twenty boxes of clothing that she and fellow Broad Meadows children, assisted by teacher Ron Adams, collected.

The students lined the aisles and passed the boxes, hand over hand, to Haitian native Marie Charlot, member of the Foundation for the Survival of Haitian Children. Her organization had recently built a orphanage in Haiti.

Charlot expressed thanks and anticipation that the work done by the school would help Haitian children, particularly the country's 133,000 orphans.

"With your help, I believe we can give [them] a better life."

Following the presentation of a $1,300 check from State Street Bank meant to assist Broad Meadows buy new computer hardware needed to talk to other "Day's Work" students by e-mail, Congressman William Delahunt (D-Quincy) spoke to express his pride in the school's humanitarian efforts.

"You have the proudest congressman in the United States House of Congress. You've made a challenge to white-haired people like me," he said.

Delahunt mentioned that others congressmen had complimented him after Broad Meadows students had spoken at a congressional roundtable last year.

"When you hear adults speak about young people, they talk about young people being the leaders of tomorrow, and that it's the responsibility of adults in the community to nurture and show you an example of leadership," Delahunt said.

"But let me tell you what makes you so different and why I'm so proud of you. You're leaders in the community today."

After he spoke, Delahunt expressed parallels to The Sun between what the Broad Meadows students were doing and the direction in which he saw the country headed.

"As the world gets smaller, we are connected more," he said. "This presents more opportunities and challenges, and will allow students to meet more leadership issues now."

"There's a lot of talk recently about moral leadership and what is responsible leadership."

"What the students of Broad Meadows have done and are doing -- that is responsible leadership. This is an example of moral responsibility."

10 Do's & Don't's For Investors

By WILLIAM GALVIN

Secretary of State, Commonwealth of Massachusetts Securities Division

In these days of the hot stock market, I thought it might be appropriate to give you some professional tips on investing properly.

1. Be wary of unexpected telephone calls, letters, or even personal visits from strangers who offer quick-profit schemes that require your immediate investment.

2. Look with doubt on promises that you can double your money or even expect a high return on your investment within a short period of time.

3. Turn down money requests accompanied by high-pressure warnings like, "Tomorrow will be too late," or "Act now because there will soon be long waiting lists of others who want to take advantage of this golden opportunity."

4. Always demand written information about the organization behind the investment plan and its past track record. But bear in mind that even printed documents can easily be created, forged, or falsified.

5. Be suspicious of "inside information," hot tips, and rumors that supposedly will give you a big advantage over other, less knowledgeable investors.

6. Ask for a prospectus, offering circular, financial statement, or other similar document before you even consider investing. Then read the small print carefully and make sure you understand the terms thoroughly before signing any kind of commitment.

7. Before making a commitment, get a professional opinion from your attorney, stockbroker, accountant, or other reliable consultant.

8. When in doubt, make no promises or commitment, no matter how tentative. It is far better to wait and lose an opportunity than to take the plunge and lose everything.

9. When hounded on the phone by a promoter, don't be afraid to hang up without explanation. You don't owe the caller anything -- in fact this kind of solicitation is an invasion of privacy.

10. Call the Secretary of the Commonwealth's Massachusetts Securities Division's Toll-Free Hotline at 1-800-269-5428 to confirm that the company or individual is properly licensed to conduct the business in question and has no history of violating the law.

Follow the above suggestions and you stand a much better chance of dealing with a reputable individual or company.

Ayers Named To Two Important House Committees

Freshman Rep. Bruce Ayers of Quincy has been named to two important committees.

Ayers will serve on the Committee on Human Services and Elderly Affairs and the Committee on Public Safety.

The committee oversees two of the largest and most important portions of state government and includes two of the biggest segments of the state budget.

Ayers said as a member of the Human Services and Elderly Affairs Committee, he will help demand more accountability from troubled agencies like the Department of Social Services. That department has been under fire recently for lax foster parent monitoring.

Ayers said he will use his business experience as a handicapped conversion provider to further assist those with developmental and physical disabilities to live and work in their communities to the greatest extent possible.

Ayers said he feels his experience on the City Council will be an asset to him as a member of the Public Safety Committee.

As a member, he will help craft policy for 15 agencies including the State Police, Registry of Motor Vehicles, Department of Corrections, Department of Fire Services/State Fire Marshal and the Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency.

"During the upcoming session, this committee will oversee some very important matters pertaining to Quincy," Ayers said. "I look forward to working with the State Police to ensure sufficient patrols at Wollaston Beach and on Furnace Brook Parkway. I will also work to promote greater Emergency Management involvement with various seawall and flooding issues."

He said constituents can contact him at the State House by calling 617-772-2000.

City Recognized For Quincy 2000 Partnership

The City of Quincy was recognized for its successful public-private partnership last week during the winter meeting of the United States Conference of Mayors held in Washington, D.C.

The Mayors Business Council, established a year ago, honored 17 cities. Mayor James Sheets said he believed Quincy was the smallest, competing with cities such as Huntsville, Jersey City, New Orleans, Philadelphia, Washington, D.C., Atlanta, Richmond, Scottsdale, Cranston, R.I., and New Bedford which also won awards.

Quincy received an honorable mention for its economic development partnership with Browning-Ferris Industries and Quincy 2000 of which BFI is a charter member.

It was Sheets shortly after he became mayor in 1991 who worked with business and community leaders to draft legislation to create Quincy 2000 as a development corporation.

"Since its creation, Quincy 2000 has grown steadily into a true public-private partnership with annual membership dues to fund its operating budget now being paid by 230 businesses, labor unions and individuals.

"The City of Quincy, in addition, provides annual funding for specific economic development programs through the federal Community Development Block Grant program."

The citation also recognized that Quincy 2000 has become a model partnership replicated in several other communities, including Brockton and Cranston.

Cranston was recognized for its lease and service agreement with a private corporation which now manages the city's wastewater system.

Other public-private partnerships in Quincy have benefited the community. They include school-business partnerships providing learning opportunities for students, First Night Quincy which draws more than 30,000 to a family-oriented, alcohol-free celebration; Cleaner-Greener Quincy which results in investment and maintenance of city parks and open space, and Quincy Family Day, an annual outdoor festival celebrating the Quincy's history and culture.

Conway Financial Services Offer MHFA Loans For First Time Buyers

Through a new partnership with the Massachusetts Housing Finance Agency, Conway Financial Services has become the first mortgage broker to process the MHFA's low interest loans for home buyers.

Known as third-party origination, allowing brokers to offer the agency's mortgages is designed to give consumers more choices, said CFS President Carol Bulman.

Bulman said the partnership between the MHFA and members of the Massachusetts Mortgage Association will increase access to the mortgage programs, which offer generous qualifying standards and give consumers more buying power.

"Conway Financial Services will get this product to consumers through our presence in the Jack Conway and Company real estate sales offices," Bulman said. "In order to offer one-stop shopping to our customers, many of whom are first-time buyers, we are obligated to offer these products."

Bulman said CFS loan originators are actively encouraging buyers to take advantage of the MHFA loan, which offer low rates for owner-occupants of single-family homes and condominiums. Plymouth Mortgage was the sponsoring lender for the first loan, Bulman said.

"Low and moderate-income families seeking to buy their first homes are the big winners with this new partnership arrangement with the states mortgage brokers," said

Michael Dirrane, chairman of the MHFA board of directors.

The guidelines for the participation of mortgage brokers in MHFA first-time buyer programs were developed during the last year by a working group that included representatives of the MHFA, the MMA, lenders and mortgage insurers, said MHFA Executive Director Steven Pierce.

"This increased accessibility is part of the agency's continuing efforts to be more user-friendly," Pierce said.

In recent years, the business generated by mortgage brokers has grown steadily in Massachusetts and is now estimated to include approximately 50 percent of all loans in the state, Pierce said.

"The closing of an MHFA loan originated by a mortgage broker is a tremendous milestone," said MMA President

Stephen Sousa. "We're happy to have played a role in making this happen."

The MHFA is the leading provider of affordable housing in Massachusetts; since 1970, the agency has provided more than $5.5 billion in loans to finance mixed-income rental housing and affordable home ownership opportunities statewide.

Norwell-based Conway Financial Services, a mortgage brokerage firm owned by Jack Conway and Company, maintains correspondent lending relationships with some of the top mortgage lenders in the East and originates a full line of mortgage products, Jack Conway and Company is the largest independent real estate company in Massachusetts, with more than 600 agents in 36 offices from Boston to Cape Cod.

Quincy 2000 Workshops Spotlight Business Plans, Taxes

Quincy 2000 recently hosted two workshops for local businesses and those planning to start a business.

"How to Write a Business Plan" was the subject of a two-part workshop given by Don Reilly, senior management consultant at Boston College's Small Business Development Center. Stephen Sacco of Business Resources spoke about "Tax Issues for Small Business Owners."

The workshops were attended by several dozen people, including Philip Rugnetta who owns a North Quincy bakery. "I worked with Don Reilly several years ago when I was preparing to open my business. It was so good to hear his advice again, about what I have done and still need to do."

Participants in the tax issue workshop were equally enthusiastic. Debra Pasquale Hamlin of Photography by Debra, and Maura Allison of Allison Heating, said they wished the tax issues program had been longer than two hours. "I learned a lot and would like my husband to come to this workshop. I hope the next time it is three hours long," Allison said.

Quincy 2000 Executive Director Joseph Mannarino said "the workshops are a great way to help businesses learn and grow."

Philip Rugnetta agreed. "Quincy 2000 has made me want to grow my business beyond a mom-and-pop shop into a larger enterprise."

Reilly began the workshop on how to write a business plan by describing the type of planning an entrepreneur must do initially. "Planning is the most important activity you must do before going into business," he said. "Any action resulting from a well-prepared plan allows you to utilize, control and direct, with maximum effectiveness, your time, energy, creativity, enthusiasm and money."

Reilly discusses elements of a business plan, which include a description of the business and its administrative structure, the venture's management team, its market and competition profiles, and key financial statements, such as a cash flow, income statement and balance sheet. He stressed the importance of setting prices and determining expenses accurately, and described how a business should make these determinations. He concluded the workshop by stating every businessperson should understand his or her tax obligations and insurance needs.

Sacco's workshop on tax issues focused on what the small business owner should know about taxes. He said good recordkeeping "is the single best way to save on taxes." He recommended entrepreneurs keep track of expenses by categories, such as office supplies and utilities, rather than by month.

Sacco also said sole proprietors and partnerships are taxed on profits of their businesses. These types of businesses complete a Schedule C, which serves as the business's income statement. A sole proprietor whose business earns profits must file quarterly estimated payments with the IRS.

He also explained the difference between an employee and independent contractor. In conclusion, Sacco said in 1999, the IRS was re-allowing a deduction for the business use of a home, as long as the business has no other outside office.

Ann Fisher, economic development specialist at Quincy 2000, coordinates the business workshops. Quincy 2000 will sponsor monthly workshops this year, including "Tactical Marketing" on Feb. 11; "Creating Incentives That Work: Getting and Keeping Good Employees" on March 10; and "Get Ready for the Year 2000" on April 28.

Foot & Notes

by Dr. Richard A. Hacker
Surgeon-Podiatrist

DIABETES? NO PROBLEM

Anyone with diabetes knows that a lot of medical care attention is focused on the feet. This is because the feet are so vulnerable to infection due to the killer duo of hampered circulation and a reduced blood supply. Since nerve damage often causes diminished feeling in the feet, a person with diabetes also can't rely on pain to signal when something is wrong. Still, the good news is that foot problems are NOT inevitable. A podiatrist can help set up a simple daily foot regimen that will both care for the feet and put in place an early warning system for detecting the smallest changes that could lead to serious trouble.

Self-care may not be the best option for diabetes when it comes to their health, unless directed by a podiatrist. We see the results of what happens when foot problems are left untreated or are only self-treated. A better avenue of defense is to see a foot specialist. If your feet hurt and you don't have a podiatrist at this time, we would be happy to schedule an appointment for you news at 110 Squantum St., North Quincy. Please call 617-472-3466. I am Board Certified in Primary Podiatric Medicine.

P.S. The goal of foot care for diabetes is to stop infection before it starts. Your podiatrist can help!

North Improving; Defeats Taunton

By CHARLES ROSS

The North Quincy boys' basketball team has gone 3-3 in their last six games and Coach Ted Stevenson has seen a vast improvement in his team's play over the season.

Last Monday, North played the number two-ranked team in Eastern Massachusetts in Boston English and came up short 65-40. Phil McGillicuddy had 14 and Mike Keddy 10 in the loss.

The Red Raiders trailed by only 5 points with 7 minutes to go before English put the game away.

Last Tuesday night, North played their best game of the year as they handed Taunton a 66-58 loss. Once again it was freshman guard Phil McGillicuddy who led the scoring with 28 points. Matt McCann had 11 and Joe Holleran 10 in the victory.

Last Friday, North had to play in what Coach Ted Stevenson calls the toughest gym in the league and the Raiders came up short, 52-43, at Falmouth. McGillicuddy again led the way with 20 points for North.

Coach Stevenson's squad is at 3-13 on the season, but he sees a lot of improvement as the year goes on.

"At the start of the year, the coaching staff would have to alert the squad of what the other team was doing on the floor so we could adjust. Now the team sees what the other team is doing and making adjustments themselves.

"We knew this year would be a learning one for this team and they had come along as the coaching staff had expected."

Coach Stevenson added, "We look for things to get better as the season goes along and in future years by the great play of our underclassmen."

Presidents Blast N.B.; Fall To Falmouth, Tie S-L

By CHARLES ROSS.

The week for the Quincy High hockey team was like going into the candy store and asking for one of each behind the counter.

The Presidents won, lost and tied in their three games this past week.

Last Monday, the Presidents blasted New Bedford in a non-league game 11-0 at the Quincy Youth Arena. Junior winger Scott Mattson scored 4 goals and added one assist in the win. Sean LeFebvre had a hat trick and Kevin Patten, Sean Haidul, Sean Richardson and Christ Lumaghini each scored once in the win.

Goaltenders Jeff Langille and Ryan Kruger joined to pitch the shutout over the Whalers.

Last Wednesday, the Presidents hit the road to Barnstable and got hit with an 11-1 thrashing. The Cape teams in the Old Colony League are tough and Quincy found that out.

Last Saturday night, the Presidents played what Coach Bob Sylvia called their "best game of the year" in a 2-2 tie at home against Silver Lake Senior captain Joe Vallatini had a goal and played an outstanding game along with Senior captain goalie Jeff Langille.

Coach Sylvia also had praise for Senior captain defenseman Jake Flemming and Junior forward Scott Mattson.

HOCKEY

Coach Sylvia told the Sun, that at this point in the season he's looking at every game from now on as a tournament game.

"We have 17 points and need 20 to make the tourney. This team is peaking at the right time as we get closer to the end of the regular season and I hope that the upswing continues."

Presidential Notes: Saturday morning at 2:25 a.m., Quincy High Coach

Bob Sylvia became a grandfather for the first time as his daughter Linda Damon gave birth to a 9 pound 10 ounce boy at Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston.

Bob's son-in law Frederick, daughter and grandson are all doing well. The baby will be named Frederick Damon, Jr. according to the proud grandfather who pointed out that the young lad already has his first pair of hockey skates.

A GOOD DEAL ALL AROUND

Increased interest in leasing automobiles in recent years has developed into a rising tide of late-model used cars that are returning to dealers' lots at the end of their leases. Of these estimated 2.5 million off-lease cars, more than half are clean, low-mileage vehicles that are being returned from short-term leases. The benefit to consumers is that many automobile manufacturers are subjecting their best late-model cars to certification programs backed by extended warranties. This helps consumers on a budget who are looking for high-quality, low-cost alternatives to purchasing a new car. And, it helps to maintain high trade-in values, which benefits people who lease with attractive deals. The higher a car's residual value, the less costly it is to lease.

Don't neglect your car whether it is owned or leased. It represents a sizeable investment. LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO invites your inquiries about most anything connected with the car of your car. Quincy Bows As Desperation Shot Falls

The Quincy High School boys' basketball team looked like they had scored a big victory over Taunton last Friday as they led the Tigers 51-49 with just six seconds left.

Jim Munchbach had just hit a field goal to give the Presidents the lead. The Lakers then inbounded the ball with a long pass down the court. The ball hit the arm of a Quincy player and the Lakers were awarded the ball in the Quincy end.

The ball was inbounded and the Presidents played tough defense to keep Silver Lake away from the hoop. As time was running out, Laker captain Lee Willis let go of a desperation shot outside the 3 point line that went through the net as time expired, giving Silver Lake a 52-51 win over Quincy. Munchbach had 21 in the game; Sean Fitzpatrick had 10 points and 9 rebounds in the game.

Coach John Franceschini was pleased with his team's effort in spite of the loss.

"It was a freak thing having the inbound pass graze one of our players and then them hitting the shot for the win," Franceschini said.

After a loss like that, a team needs a day or two to try and forget the heartbreak, but the schedule was not kind to Quincy as they had to get on the bus last Saturday and play at Nauset Regional High School in a non-league game. The shock of the night before was still in the player's minds and the presidents dropped a 67-54 decision to the home team.

Dan Kelley had 16 points, Mark Robinson and Jim Munchbach each had 10 in the loss.

Coach Franceschini was disappointed by the two losses, but looked ahead. "We have some tough games coming up with Falmouth, Plymouth South and another meeting with North and I know these kids will regroup and give it their all in the future."

Quincy, like North, is undergoing a rebuilding year and stand at 3-11 on the season.

North Quincy Wins Between Two Losses

By CHARLES ROSS

There is a very fine line in any sport between winning and losing and for the North Quincy High girls' basketball team, that line has been as thin as a human hair.

Of the 9 losses this year, 6 of those games have been by less than 10 points.

Last Tuesday, the Red Raiders came out on the short end of a 56-53 score with Taunton. A bid for a 3-point shot to tie the game fell short with 2 seconds left.

Junior Jill Nicholson had 16, Lauren Sleeth 12 in the game.

In a non-league game, North came away with a 46-41 victory at home against Randolph as Nicholson chipped in 23 to lead the Raider attack.

Then last Friday, Jill Nicholson's 20 were not enough as the North girls fell to Falmouth 51-45. Kristin Bowes played well with 9 points and 5 steals for North which was eliminated from the post season tournament with the loss.

Coach Doug MacFarlane has had high praise for his team's defense, but has been frustrated with their trouble on offense.

"I'm proud of these kids the way they have played defense and we've improved, but have just not been able to hit the offensive end the way we need to in order to win.

"We've done a good job defensively against each teams big gun and one of these nights when we put our offense together the way we want it, we will give some team a good thumping," said Coach MacFarlane.

ers and 26th overall in the team's opening races at a carnival hosted by the University of Massachusetts. She guided the squad in the giant slalom.

Freshmen Raiders Post Three Victories

The North Quincy High School freshmen boys' basketball team ran off three wins in recent action.

The Raiders have now won six of their last eight to raise their season record to 8-7. Two league wins last week brought their Old Colony League record to 5-5.

North avenged an early season loss at Taunton by getting off to a fast start against the visiting Tigers. Bert Vivatyan's six-footer in the lane gave the Raiders a 7-0 lead in the opening minutes. Full court pressure by the Raiders led to a Sean Ginty steal and an eight-point lead with less than six minutes gone in the half.

Eric Stanton's turnaround off the low post gave North a 12-2 lead less than half way through the first half. North opened up a 14-point lead before Coach Scott Madden started mixing up the Raider lineup who cruised to a 29-14 half-time lead.

Dennis Thomson's driving lay-up game the home team a 40-28 lead with 7:28 remaining. Taunton mounted a comeback to close the lead to six with a minute remaining. Dan Duggan's two free throws with 22 seconds on the clock sealed the Raider win, as North prevailed 54-49.

Fourteen players scored for the host Raiders, including Leo Ahern with 5 and Mark Maher with 8. Phong Quach and James Hawko led a strong Raider defensive rebounding effort.

Back to back games and an easy win the first time against Hingham could have spelled trouble for North Quincy as they visited the Harbormen. Hingham controlled the offensive boards early in the game but fortunately for the visiting Raiders, couldn't convert. North trailed by one or two points early until a Matt Donovan 3-pointer gave the Raiders the lead 9-7 at the 10-minute mark.

BASKETBALL

Two Dennis Thomson steals and another Donovan 3-point shot pushed the lead to seven, less than a minute later. Charlie Vidoli and Steve Pizzi had separate steals and baskets off of Hingham inbound passes, to push the lead to 15 over the next five minutes. North led 41-26 at half.

Nine players scored in the first half for North, paced by Matt Donovan's 10 and Mike Haines's eight points. Donovan hit his third three of the game in the opening minutes of the second half, to give the Raiders an 18-point lead. The lead would go as high as 20.

Full court pressure by the home team cut into the North Quincy lead, but the outcome was never in doubt as the game wasn't as close as the 63-53 final. Donovan finished with 16 points on 6-for-6 shooting. John O'Connell added 12. Steve Pizzi had four points to go with three steals. For the second straight game, 14 players scored for North. Quincy native Chris Ham had a strong game for Hingham.

In the first meeting with Falmouth, North Quincy had easily handled the Clippers in the second half. That memory, in combination with the long bus ride to the Cape, may have contributed to the slow start for the visitors. After an early tie score, Falmouth went on a 13-4 run. Rushed Raider shots and poor defensive rebounding led to numerous second chances for the home team, which pulled ahead 17-8 with less than six minutes to go in the first half.

Mark Maher's 3-point play seemed to spark the Raiders. A John O'Connell baseline turnaround pulled the visitors to within two, 17-15. Maher's steal and lay-up gave North the lead 19-17 with three minutes left in the half. North Quincy built an eight-point lead with less than a minute to go before two Raider turnovers allowed the Clippers to close the gap to four, 25-21 at the half.

Ten second-half Raider turnovers kept Falmouth in the game, with the Clippers taking a 41-38 lead with 3:45 remaining. Mark Maher followed his own miss to help North retake the lead, 42-41 with 1:10 to go. The Raiders prevailed, 44-41.

Maher finished with 13 points for the game to go with O'Connell's 15. Mike Haines, who was one of the few freshmen to turn in a steady performance from start to finish, ended the game with eight points.

The Freshmen Raiders look to improve on their recent success with visits to B-R and Archbishop Williams this week. The Raiders host Barnstable Friday.

Shedevils Win Three, Lose Heart-Breaker

St. Joseph Shedevils squeaked by St. Columbkilles 26-25, bested Blessed Sacrament of Walpole 43-37, downed Holy Name and lost a heart-breaker to St. Catherine's in recent action.

Shedevils were taken out of their game by a much quicker St. Columbkilles. The girls, however, held off the last minute attempts with strong defense. Jaclyn Brogna came up with a great rebound and Nikki Groleau was able to dribble out of trouble. Brogna led the scorers with 11 points. Colleen Young had six, Meghan Chagnon five and Groleau four.

The Shedevils played much better overall defeating Blessed Sacrament of Walpole, 43-37. Jaclyn Brogna and Colleen Young each scored 14 points. Nikki Groleau added 8 points and made some key free throws down the stretch. Meghan Chagnon played a great game, contributed six points, and contained Blessed Sacrament's point guard to two baskets. Jennifer Skayne scored a basket and played great defense in the second half.

St. Joseph's traveled to Norwood to face St. Catherine's and lost a heart-breaker. Shedevils showed a great come-from-behind effort in the second half. They had the ball with seconds left. Jaclyn Brogna took a great half-court shot but didn't get the bounce, and Shedevils went home with a 29-28 loss. Colleen Young led the comeback effort with 14 points. Brogna had 7 and Meghan Chagnon added 6. Chagnon and Katie Carew played awesome defense but St. Catherine's had a balanced scoring effort and a quick press breaker that proved to be the Shedevils' demise.

St. Joseph's came back home and defeated Holy Name easily. Shedevils starting line up was flawless. Colleen Young had 10 points, Jaclyn Brogna had 9, Nikki Groleau had 8 break-away points and Meghan Chagnon again held it all together on offense as point guard and added 6 points.

The Shedevils bench came alive and added great full court press defense with Allison Horrigan and Maggie Lewis stepping up. Holy Name was held to only six first-half points.

The Shedevils improved their record to 5-3 with a 33-20 win.

North Girls' Run Track Record To 4-3

The North Quincy High School girls' track team finished their dual meet season at 4-3 with wins over Barnstable, Plymouth South and Quincy.

On the invitational circuit they did very well with great performances in the 600, mile and 4X400 relay.

In the Barnstable meet won 62-15 by North, Lynda Wilson (mile), Genevieve O'Brien (1000), Kellyrose O'Brien (600), Kellie Johnston (300), Liz Leuchte (50) and Lisa Dellacroce (shot-put) all won events.

In the Plymouth meet won 50-41 by the Raiders, North had to win the 4X200 relay to clinch the meet. Winners were Kellyrose O'Brien (600), Colleen Lahar (300), Kellie Johnston (50), Lena Yuen (shot-put) and the 4x200 relay team of Lahar, O'Brien, Johnston and Liz Leuchte won with a state qualifier of 1:55.0.

In the Quincy meet several events were non-scoring due to low numbers of Quincy girls so a 33-22 score was kept finishing out the season at 4-3. Winners were Nancy Gardner (mile), Laura Wells (1000), Genevieve O'Brien (600), Katie Markhard (high jump) and Liz Leuchte (50). Winners for Quincy were Lisa Barrett (300) and Samantha Cohen (shot-put).

The 4X400 relay team was non-scoring but competed against Silver Lake and Bridgewater-Raynham, the other two teams competing in the Reggie Lewis Center that night and clocked a 4:22.8, the fastest in many years for North. Members of that team were Colleen Lahar (65.8), Kellie Johnston (65.2), Natalie Caron (67.7) and Kellyrose O'Brien (62.9).

At the Red Auerbach Freshman-Sophomore Meet Kellyrose O'Brien placed third in the 600 meters with a clocking of 1:43.68. Natalie Caron took fourth in the mile in 5:45.12 and the 4X400 relay of Natalie Caron, Colleen Lahar, Linda Nguyen and O'Brien ran 4:31.99 thanks to a 62.77 leg by O'Brien.

At the Bob McIntyre relays held on Jan. 30, North put a distance medley relay team in the meet. They ran the fastest at North since 1982, but were disqualified on a lane infraction on the lead-off leg. Members and splits were Natalie Caron (1200 meters; 4:04.6), Kellie Johnston (400 meters 65.2), Kellyrose O'Brien (800 meters 2:31.8) and Lynda Wilson (mile 5:33.8) for a combined 13:15.6.

North's season continues with the OCL championships set for Wednesday at Reggie Lewis Center, and the State Class A Championships Friday, Feb. 12, also at the Reggie.

3 Quincy Teens Receive Medals at Bay State Games

Three Quincy teens competed in figure skating competitions Jan. 15 as part of the Bay State Games held in Williamstown, MA.

Jolene Dooley, a sophomore at North Quincy High, won a gold medal in the Preliminary A level.

Kristina Pan, a student at the Woodard School, won a gold medal in the Preliminary B level.

Courtney Thompson, a sophomore at Quincy High, won a bronze medal in the Ladies Intermediate Long Program. A previous Bay State Games 1997 silver and gold medal winner, it was Ms. Thompson's fifth year competing at the Games.

The athletes have been qualified to go on and compete in the Games of America being held for the first time this August in St. Louis, MO.

Ward 5 Community Assn. Creates Beach Awareness Hat

The Ward 5 Community Association, in an effort to raise awareness about water quality improvements at Wollaston Beach, has created a new hat for civic-minded Quincy residents.

The baseball-style hats, tan with midnight blue trim, have "Wollaston Beach -- Clean It Now" emblazoned on the front and "Ward 5 Assoc." on the back.

The hats designed to raise awareness on the need to improve water quality at Wollaston Beach and to raise money to improve educational and recreational opportunities along the beach.

"Improving water quality at Wollaston Beach won't be easy and will truly require community-wide support," said Association President Douglas Gutro. "At a time when most people are contemplating snow shoveling instead of swimming, they can take comfort in knowing that we plan to continue to our year-round advocacy for a cleaner, healthier Wollaston Beach."

Residents interested in purchasing a Wollaston Beach "Clean It Now" hat can send a check for $15 to "Wollaston Beach Cleanup Fund, c/o Douglas Gutro, Ward 5 Community Association, 10 Weston Ave. #221, Quincy, MA 02170 or call (617) 328-7982.

During the past two years, Wollaston Beach has been closed to swimming one in three days during summer months. The Ward 5 Community Association is an active participant on the Mayor's Wollaston Beach Task Force, which is currently developing recommendations on how to improve water quality at the beach.

Last summer, along with Tony's Clam Shop and MDC Wollaston Beach Operations, the Ward 5 Community Association co-sponsored the first annual Wollaston Beach Volleyball Challenge and Children's Sand Castle Contest.

The Association has stenciled more than 500 storm drains in the Wollaston and North Quincy area that read, "Don't Dump -- Drains to Wollaston Beach" as well as co-sponsored several cleanups along Wollaston Beach, Black's Creek and the Neponset River during the past two years.

'Tot Time' Starts Friday At Ward 4 Center

Quincy Recreation has limited openings for "Tot Time," a program for preschool age youngsters and their parents which begins Friday, Feb. 5.

"Tot Time," a parent and tot recreation program for children age 3-5, will feature 90 minutes of supervised play, one day a week, in the Ward 4 Community Center located at the Amelio Della Chiesa Early Childhood Center.

"This program is designed to provide an opportunity for increased socialization among parents and children through games and activities conducted by recreation staff," said Recreation Director Barry Welch. "The department has received many requests for this type of activity particularly during the inclement weather of the winter months."

Welch thanked the Ward 4 Civic Association for their assistance in organizing

"Tot Time" which is open to all Quincy residents.

Program costs $19 for a seven-week period. It will be held Fridays from 10 to 11:30 a.m. Enrollment is limited and taken on a first-come, first-serve basis.

Registration is underway at the main office of Quincy Recreation Department, 1 Merrymount Parkway (formerly 100 Southern Artery).

Craig Farrell and Kevin Shea assisted on the Kiley goals. Gilbody had an assist for Doherty & White.

Raymondi Wants Hazardous Waste Materials Warning

Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi wants abutters and neighbors, especially those with young children, of city construction projects to be notified of potential exposure to hazardous materials.

When the water pressure problems on Penn's Hill were being addressed some 18 months ago, the city had to take down one of the tanks. In the process, lead paint dust spread over the area, and the city was required to remove contaminated soil from neighbors' property.

"It was really unknown to them that lead paint was present," said Raymondi.

Raymondi proposed that any city project which has the potential to create a nuisance condition of air pollution and involves the application, removal or repair of any material deemed to contain hazardous materials must include an environmental assessment and control plan.

He said those materials would not be limited to only asbestos, lead and petroleum products.

He proposed that public notification be made at least 24 hours before the start of a project. Also to be notified would be the health commissioner and/or environmental sanitarian, the hazardous materials officer in the fire department, the mayor's office and the ward councillor where the project is located.

Raymondi said he had not spoken with Public Works Commissioner David Colton, whose department would be impacted the most.

Councillor-at-large Francis X. McCauley recommended that the proposal be forwarded to the ordinance committee and asked, "Are we getting a little bureaucratic here? Is this for every time someone is building?"

Launches $10,000 Fundraising Goal Committee To Restore Sailors' Home Cemetery

The Sailors Home Cemetery Restoration Committee announces a year-long effort to raise $10,000 necessary to restore and preserve the history of Sailors Home Cemetery off Fenno St., near Wollaston Beach in Quincy.

The committee will raise funds to repair damaged headstones, purchase a memorial describing the cemetery's history and its veterans buried within as well as interpretative signs visible from Fenno St.

A summer fund raiser is being planned. The group intends to repaint the flagpole as well as the fence surrounding the cemetery. They are conducting research to accurately identify all veterans buried at the cemetery.

In addition, historical information obtained by the committee will be incorporated into a book about the salt water marsh nature trail being updated by Beechwood Knoll School.

"For 60-plus years, the Sailors Cemetery has anonymously resided along banks of Black's Creek," said Michelle Lydon, chairperson of Sailors Cemetery Restoration Committee.

"Our aim is to restore dignity to the veterans buried here and enlighten visitors about the important role these men played in our nation's history."

In conjunction with the Committee's work, Harold Crowley Jr. of Quincy has created a chronology of the National Sailors' Home which provided respite for infirm and aged veterans of Naval service on more than 100 acres in the Beechwood Knoll area of Quincy, from 1865-1931. The chronology is available at the Thomas Crane Public Library and Quincy Historical Society.

Commercial Painting Wins Behind Brendan Craig Hat Trick

Brendan Craig notched a hat trick to lead Wood Commercial Painting to a 7-4 win over Local #103 IBEW.

Stephen Maggio added two goals for the winners. Also scoring were Jarrod Abbott and Jason Amato. In the assist column, Andrew Jordan had two while Brendan Craig, Ross Pasquantonio, Jonathan Griffith, Frank Ruzzano, Paul Grazioso and Andrew McAllister had one each.

For Local #103, Pat Malone scored twice while Pat Mullen and Jim Callahan had a goal each. Assists went to Dan Durocher (2), Anthony Fernandez, Pat McLean, Brendan Clifford, Ed Laura and Jim Callahan.

In other action, Mike Morrissey defeated Colonial

PEE WEES

Federal Savings Bank 6-4. Tim Duggan had two goals for Morrissey. Patrick Casper, Rob Richards, Tim Sommers and Sean O'Neil added a goal each. Steve Kelley (2), Rob Richards and George Snowling (one each) had assists.

Josh Giordani led the offense for Colonial with a hat trick. Patrick McGrath had the other score. Assisting were Dennis Magaldi, Kevin Shinnick, Chris Tufo, Patrick McGrath, Kevin Barry and Gene Nazzaro.

Bernie's General Store shut out Coffee Break Cafe, 2-0. Patrick Kelley and Justin Thorley scored for Bernie's. Assisting were Bryan Donelin, Ryan Barter and Patrick Kelley.

Goal Bill Barter was solid in net to earn the shutout.

Morrissey Club and Quincy Car Wash skated to a 5-5 tie.

Morrissey goal scorers were Chris Tierney, Steve Kelley, Patrick Casper, Rob Richards and Brian Lynch. Assists went to George Snowling, Rich Stone, Steve Kelley and Matt MacNeil.

Car Wash offense was paced by Steve Ohlson's hat trick. James Spellman and Liam Powers also connected for Car Wash. Assisting were Joe Cafano and Mike Flaherty.

Joe, Jim Carita Hat Tricks Pace Keohane; Sun Rises

Keohane's, paced by hat tricks from Jim Carita and Joe Carita, clipped Pat Foley Painting, 11-8 in recent Squirt House ice hockey action at Quincy Youth Arena.

Mike Giordani scored twice for Keohane's while Amanda Maggio, Eric Beale and Matt Lawlor added a goal apiece. Joe Carita dished out three assists and Brendan Gavaghan had two assists. Other assists went to Mike Gibbons, Matt Giordani, Amanda Maggio and David Guerriero.

Pat Foley Painting was led by Bryan Gilligan's hat trick. Other goal scorers were Tom Pasquantonio (2), Mike Gillespie and Patrick Devlin (1 each). Assisting were Patrick Devlin (2), Tom Pasquantonio (2), Steve McDonough, Meaghan Shaw, Steve Bythrow and Charlie McGee (1 each).

In other action, The Quincy Sun eclipsed Bur-

SQUIRTS

Mulcahy's hat trick. Mike MacPherson and Mike Barter also lit the lamp for the Sun.

Assisting for the winners were Mike MacPherson (3), Kevin Bossart (2), Joe Canavan, Brendan Mulcahy, Frank Sorrento and Patrick Dunn (1 apiece).

For Burgin-Platner, Glen Gibbons, Carla Nickerson, Alex Smith and Tim Lally scored. Assisting were Dave Regan (3), John Kurpeski, Justin Auriemma, Tim Lally and Alex Smith.

Smith & Brink, PC edged Westminster Dodge,

6-5, led by the two-goal efforts of Anthony Gilbody and Mike McKeon. Nick Masone and Cory Lumaghini also scored for Smith & Brink. Ian McRae, Nick Masone, Rob DeAngelis and Mike Lohnes had assists.

For Westminster, Jeff Bailey, Donald Gardiner, Brian Carney, Andrew Donovan and Marissa Powers lit the lamp. Assisting were Dan Poggi (2), Donald Gardiner, Marissa Powers, Dave Tapper, Ted Finnegan and Ray Marchand.

Lt. John Griffin Completes Deployment

Marine 1st Lt. John F. Griffin, son of John F. Griffin of 103 Putnam St.,

Quincy, recently completed a six month deployment to the Western Pacific Ocean, Indian Ocean, and Arabian Gulf with the 15th Marine Expeditionary Unit aboard the ships of the USS Essex Amphibious Ready Group.

During the deployment, Griffin received training on urban warfare techniques, rope rappelling, close-quarter battle, weapons and small unit fighting.

His unit also completed training in Hawaii which tested all areas of amphibious warfare, including non-combatant evacuations operations and amphibious assault.

A 1987 graduate of Boston College High School, Griffin joined the Marine Corps in May, 1987.

Bantam B's Capture Coca-Cola Tourney

The Quincy Youth Hockey Bantam B travel team cruised to a four wins sweep of the Coca-Cola Tournament at the Gallo Arena on Cape Cod.

Quincy captured the tournament title with wins over Cape Cod Canal (3-2), Hingham, (3-2), Canton (4-2) and New Hampshire Junior Wildcats (4-3) in the championship game.

The Quincy Bantam B's now have two tournament crowns to their credit this season. In December, they won the Knights of Columbus tourney at Quincy Youth Arena.

Members of the team are goalie Tom Shruhan, James Chicchio, Bryan Cooper, Ryan Donahue, Bob Donavan, Jeremiah Hasson, Michael Joyce, captain Scott Markarian, Michael McGonagle, Robert Mooney, Sean Moriarty, Andrew Ross, Ryan Tobin and Peter Turowski.

The team is managed by head coach Brad Vinton and assistant coach John Hasson.

Delahunt Offers Updated Student Financial Aid Info

Congressman Bill Delahunt today made available, free of charge, updated information packets on higher education assistance for local students applying for college financial aid.

"Looking ahead to college is exciting, but assembling everything to pay for it is hard work," said Delahunt.

Each of the 1999 packets contains federal financial aid forms and guides, details on programs at Massachusetts colleges and universities, and background on scholarships and other private aid. Also included is a list of Internet websites for college, financial aid, and career planning.

The Delahunt packets are intended to help families shoulder these expenses by explaining the types and amount of assistance from a variety of potential resources.

Delahunt offered a version of this packet last year and hundreds of local residents requested copies.

Each of the 1999 packets contains federal financial aid forms and guides, details on programs at Massachusetts colleges and universities, and background on scholarships and other private aid. Also included is a list of Internet websites for college, financial aid, and career planning.

PUBLIC SERVICE ANNOUNCEMENT

EPA, Local Water Officials Concerned About Lead Levels

(The following is a public service announcement from the Quincy Sewer, Water and Drain Department).

The United States Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and the City of Quincy Department of Public Works are concerned about lead in your drinking water. Although most homes have very low levels of lead in their drinking water, some homes in the community have lead levels above the EPA action level of 15 parts per billion gallons of water (ppb), or 0.015 milligrams per liter (mg/l). Under Federal law, in conjunction with the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority (MWRA) we are required to have a program in place to minimize lead in your drinking water.

The program is centered around corrosion control treatment. The MWRA has been adjusting the pH of the water feeding the City of Quincy in order to reduce its corrosivity.

The water leaving the Quabbin Reservoir which feeds the City of Quincy meets all State and Federal drinking water standards. Lead enters drinking water primarily from corrosion of water mains and household plumbing. Remember - not every home has a lead contamination problem. Most people have low levels of lead in their drinking water. But because you cannot see, taste, or smell lead, testing the water is the only way to know whether you have a problem.

We can help. In this PSA, we tell you how and where to get your water tested. We also explain the simple steps you can take to protect yourself and your family by reducing exposure to lead from drinking water.

If you have any questions about how we are carrying out the requirements of the lead regulation, or want more information about what you can do, please call the Sewer, Water and Drain Division at (617) 376-1911.

HEALTH EFFECTS OF LEAD

Lead is a common metal found throughout the environment in leadbased paint, air, soil, household dust, food, certain types of pottery porcelain, pewter, and water. Lead can pose significant risk to your health if too much accumulates in your body.

Lead builds up in the body over many years and can cause damage to the brain, red blood cells, and kidneys. The greatest risk is to young children (especially under the age of 6) and pregnant women. Amounts of lead that won't hurt adults can slow down the normal mental and physical development in the growing bodies of children. In addition, a child at play often comes into contact with sources of lead contamination - like dirt and dust - that rarely affect an adult. It is important, therefore, to wash children's hands and toys often, and try to make sure that they only put food in their mouths.

HEALTH EFFECTS OF LEAD

Lead in drinking water, although rarely the sole cause of lead poisoning, can significantly increase a person's total exposure, particularly the exposure of infants who drink baby formulas and concentrated juices that are mixed with water. The EPA estimates that drinking water can make up 20 percent or more of a person's total exposure to lead.

HOW LEAD ENTERS OUR WATER

Lead is unusual among drinking water contaminants in that it seldom occurs naturally in water supplies such as rivers and lakes. Lead enters drinking water primarily as a result of the corrosion, or wearing away of materials containing lead within the water distribution system and household plumbing. These materials include lead based solder used to join copper pipe, brass, and chrome plated brass faucets. In some cases pipe made of lead connect your house to the water main (service connections). In 1986 Congress banned the use of lead solder containing greater than 0.2% lead, and restricted the lead content of faucets, pipes, and other plumbing materials to 8.0%.

When water stands in pipes or plumbing systems which contain lead for several hours or more, the lead may dissolve into your drinking water. This means the first water drawn from the tap in the morning, or later in the afternoon after returning from work or school, can contain fairly high levels of lead.

STEPS YOU CAN TAKE AT HOME TO REDUCE EXPOSURE TO LEAD IN DRINKING WATER

1. Have Your Drinking Water Tested Despite our best efforts mentioned earlier to control water corrosivity and remove lead from the water supply, lead levels in some homes or buildings can be high. To find out whether you need to take action in your home, have your drinking water tested to determine if it contains excessive concentrations of lead. Testing the water is essential because you cannot see, taste, or smell lead in drinking water. Several local laboratories can test drinking water including: Analytical Balance Corp. (508)697-2650 American Environmental Laboratories 1-800-522-0094 Aqua Air Analytical (617) 337-4334.

American Environmental Laboratories will have sample bottles including directions at the Quincy Public Works Sewer, Water, and Drain Billing Office at 55 Sea Street, Quincy MA. 02169. The homeowner, (for $15.00), will be able to conduct the test for lead and copper and return the bottles to the Sewer, Water, and Drain Billing Office where the sample will be picked up and analyzed by the laboratory. All results will be forwarded to the homeowner.

2. Flush Your System Flushing tap water is a simple and inexpensive measure you can take to protect your family's health. It usually uses less than one or two gallons of water and costs less than one cent per month.

To flush, let the water run from the tap before using it for drinking or cooking any time the water in a faucet has gone unused for more than six hours. The longer water resides in your home's plumbing, the more lead it may contain. Flushing the tap means running the water until it gets noticeably colder, usually about 15-30 seconds. If your house has a lead service line to the water main. You may have to flush the water for a longer time, perhaps one minute, before drinking. Although toilet flushing or showering flushes water through a portion of your plumbing system, you still need to flush the water in each faucet before using it for drinking or cooking. In order to conserve water, fill a couple of bottles for drinking water after flushing the tap, and whenever possible use the first flush water to wash the dishes or water the plants.

If you live in a high-rise building, letting the water flow before using it may not lessen your risk of exposure from lead. This is because plumbing systems have more, and sometimes larger, pipes than smaller buildings. Ask your landlord for help in locating the source of lead and for advice on reducing the lead level.

3. Use Only Cold Water for Cooking and Drinking Try not to cook with, or drink water from the hot water tap. Hot water can dissolve more lead quicker than cold water. If you need hot water, draw water from the cold tap and heat it on the stove.

4. Remove Loose Lead Solder and Debris from the plumbing materials in newly constructed homes, or homes in which the plumbing has recently been replaced. To do this, remove the faucet strainers from all taps and run the water from 3 to 5 minutes. Thereafter, periodically remove the strainers and flush out any debris that has accumulated over time.

5. Identify and Replace Lead Materials With Lead-Free Ones If your copper pipes are joined with lead solder that has been installed illegally since it was banned in 1986, notify the plumber who did the work and request that he or she replace the lead solder with lead-free solder. Lead solder looks dull gray, and when scratched with a key looks shiny. In addition notify the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection about the violation.

6. Determine if the Service Line That Connects Your Home to the Water Main is Made of Lead. The best way to determine if your service connection is made of lead is by either hiring a licensed plumber to inspect the line or by contacting the contractor who installed the line. You can identify the plumbing contractor by checking City records of service installations.

The Quincy Department of Public Works maintains a record of materials located in the distribution system. If the service line that connects your dwelling contributes more than 15 ppb of lead to drinking water after the MWRA's comprehensive treatment program is in place the City will be required to replace the line. If the line is only partially controlled by The Quincy Department of Public Works, we are required to provide you with information on how to replace your portion of the service line, and offer to replace that portion of the line at your expense and take a follow-up tap water sample within 14 days of replacement. Acceptable replacement alternatives include copper, steel, iron and plastic pipes.

7. Have An Electrician Check Your Wiring. If grounding wires from the electrical system are attached to your pipes, corrosion may be greater. Check with a licensed electrician or your local electric code to determine if your wiring can be grounded elsewhere. DO NOT attempt to change the wiring yourself because improper grounding can cause electrical shock and fire hazards.

Additional Steps

The steps described above will reduce the lead concentrations in your drinking water. However, if a water test indicates that the drinking water coming from your tap contains lead concentrations in excess of 15 ppb after flushing, or after the MWRA has completed actions to minimize lead levels, you may want to take the following additional measures:

8. Purchase or Lease a Home Treatment Device. Home treatment devices are limited because each unit treats only water that flows from the faucet to which it is connected, and all devices require periodic maintenance and replacement. Devices such as a reverse osmosis system or distillers can effectively remove lead from your drinking water. Some activated carbon filters may reduce levels at the tap, however, all lead reduction claims should be investigated. Be sure to check actual performance of a specific home treatment device before and after installing the unit.

9. Purchase Bottled Water for Drinking and Cooking

For More Information

You can consult a variety of sources for information:

Your family doctor or pediatrician can perform a blood test for lead and provide you with information about the health effects of lead.

State and local government agencies that can be contacted include:

Quincy Department of Public Works at: (617)376-1911 or Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection at: (617)932-7600 can provide you with information about your community's water supply, and a list of local laboratories that have been certified by the State for testing water quality.

Massachusetts Water Resources Authority Public Affairs at: (617)241-6037 can provide further information about your community's water supply.

Quincy Plumbing Inspector at: (617)376-1461 can provide you with information about plumbing permit records that should contain the names of plumbing contractors that plumbed your home.

The Massachusetts Public Health Department at: (617)522-3700 or The Quincy Health Department at: (617)376-1273 can provide information about the health effects of lead and tell how and where you can have your child's blood tested.

REV. CAROL SNOW-ASHER and
REV. CHARLES KRAJEWSKI-ASHER

Husband-Wife Pastoral Team At First Baptist Church

Members of First Baptist Church of Wollaston have, after a two year search, selected a husband and wife pastoral team.

Rev. Charles Krajewski-Asher and Rev. Carol Snow-Asher will be installed Sunday, March 7 at a 3 p.m. service at the church, 81 Prospect Ave.

Both of the Ashers come originally from Rhode Island, and both of them came to the ministry after having had others careers. Carol received a BA from the University of Rhode Island and an M.Ed. from Rhode Island College. She taught languages in the Providence schools for eight years and served with the Peace Corps in Brazil for four and a half years. Charles earned a BS from the University of Rhode Island and worked in the data processing field for 20 years. Both received Mdiv degrees from Andover Newton, Carol graduating in 1986 and Charles in 1992.

Carol comes to Wollaston from the North Baptist Church in New Bedford where she served as a pastor for 12 years. Charles leaves the First Baptist Church of Norwood, having pastored there for four and a half years.

The Ashers said they are excited about the prospect of fulfilling their dream to pastor a church together.

A Thought
For The Week

Decisions, decisions, decisions... Life is one hectic round of decisions... and none is harder than the one you have to make in the split second when the cafeteria line passes the dessert counter!

Many people have difficulty in making decisions. Some make decisions too quickly and others too slowly. Some people make decisions easily. There are others who appear to do nothing but wring their hands and bite their fingernails when they are confronted with the necessity of making a decision.

Every day, each of us makes decisions that determine the direction in which our lives will move. No one, no matter how wise or how highly principled, can make the right decision every time. To err is no disgrace. The disgrace lies in not learning from our mistakes, but recovering from our defeats, not picking ourselves up, brushing ourselves off and trying again.

Yet many of life's problems are insoluble. They just have to be lived with. And, yes, the problem of making decisions is certainly one of these...

Houghs Neck Congregational

Four Chaplains Sunday will be observed Sunday at Houghs Neck Congregational Church, 310 Manet Ave.

The observance is a reminder of the sacrifice of the lives of four U.S. Army Chaplains: First Lts. Clark L. Poling (Reform Church of America), Alexander D. Goode (Jewish), John P. Washington (Catholic), and George L. Fox (Methodist).

Their troop transport ship Dorchester was torpedoed and sank on Feb. 3, 1943. The chaplains gave their own life jackets to others and went down with the ship, their voices raised in prayer.

The 9 a.m. sermon will be titled "No Great Love" and the 10:30 sermon will be "The Heart of The Ecumenical Movement".

United First Parish

Rev. Sheldon W. Bennett, Ph.D., minister, will give the sermon "To Whom Would You Be True?" during the 10:30 a.m. worship service Sunday at United First Parish Church (Unitarian Universalist), 1306 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

Church school children will go to classes after opening worship with adults and will continue its curriculum on world religions with an introduction to Islam.

Norman Corey, music director, will play organ selections during the service. Guest musician Alfred Cameron will play bass. Florence Grose and Ed Smith will usher.

Visitors and newcomers are welcome and invited to the social hour following the service in Parish Hall hosted by Pat Artis and Jack Phillips.

Your Horoscope
 by Natasha

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Those you meet casually can open doors for you career-wise. Your determination to make the most of your natural abilities is admired. Follow through on hunches.

TAURUS (April 20 May 20) A friend seeks you out to share a particularly titillating confidence. This person knows you can be trusted implicitly. Partnership interests have you happily occupied this weekend.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) The financial developments that occur behind the scenes are to your ultimate benefit. You feel left out, but you don't have to be privy to everything. Over the weekend, your creativity is highlighted.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Shopping is not favored as your finances need some reorganizing. Your usually good judgment is off the mark. The weekend favors cultural interests and pursuits.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) You're apt to drive yourself batty looking for something you lost early in the week. This is just a waste of time. This object soon resurfaces of its own volition.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) You're at cross purposes with a family member who just refuses to meet you halfway. Rather than going at this head-on, try a different tactic. Cleverness wins the day eventually.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) It's a good week to reorganize and get rid of any clutter in your closets. Out with the old and in with the new is a good idea. However, watch your wallet.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) What you think is a snap to do actually proves to be your undoing. It's best to call in an expert to complete this project. Later in the week, it's time to get out and have fun.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) You spend some time burning the midnight oil to complete work tasks. You can save yourself some steps by implementing new procedures. Your accomplishments give you satisfaction.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) This is the week to get niggling little errands out of the way and to spend some time visiting with friends. Partnership interests are favored, as well as any activities of a group nature.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) If traveling, check to be sure you have all your belongings. You are inclined to lose things this week. Mixed messages come from a contact at a distance over the weekend.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You receive conflicting advice on a business matter and you could be misled as a result. Sports and leisure activities are favored; get out and enjoy the weekend.

Lydon Funeral Home Renews Lofty Oaks Affiliation

Lydon Funeral Home of Quincy has renewed its affiliation with Lofty Oaks Association, a New Hampshire organization dedicated to reforestation and conservation efforts in Massachusetts.

The firm arranges to have a tree planted for each service that they perform to provide a living memorial in honor of the deceased and to renew the forest life of Massachusetts.

The memorial trees are planted in the spring and fall. This program is part of a large endeavor, to restore the landscape and environment with living trees.

After each service, close family members and friends are informed that the memorial tree has been arranged by Michelle and John J. Lydon, Jr. of the Lydon Funeral Home. When a certified nurseryman has planted the tree, the designated people will receive a certificate of planting suitable for framing and keeping in the family's history.

Council Perjury Penalty Set

dency. Raymond said the councillors would have no say as to whether the individual would continue to sit with the council, but "we can strip away any leadership positions."

He said when he first heard of Councillor-at-large Paul Harold's proposal to require individuals who provide information to the City Council to testify truthfully under penalty of perjury, he was hesitant.

Initially, said Raymond, "my reaction was less than enthusiastic." But after attending a licensing board hearing and listening to arguments from an attorney seeking the transfer of a liquor license, Raymond changed his mind.

"It was clear to me that the representative was attempting to mislead and intimidate the board," said Raymond as he introduced an amendment to Harold's proposal Monday night.

"As an attorney, we should advocate for our position; we must not mislead but tell the truth," said Raymond.

He said the attorney told the licensing board it could not determine whether transferring a license was in the public interest or if the board voted against the transfer request, the matter would be back before the board.

Raymond did not want to name the attorney, but it was clear that the issue pertained to the transfer request of an all-alcoholic license at 536 Washington St. The former Point Pub had been closed for more than 18 months during renovations and the owner was seeking to reopen it as the Chapter Saloon.

More than 1,000 parishioners from St. Joseph's Church petitioned the licensing board to oppose the license, citing the fact that the site was close to the church parking lot and St. Joseph's School.

Raymond said the lawyer maintained there was case law which defined the public interest, but at the appeals hearing before the Alcoholic Beverages Control Commission, the representative admitted that there was no such case law.

The lawyer's remarks before the licensing board "were irresponsible," said Raymond.

"The ABCC ruled that public interest can be defined to include more than the qualifications" of the license holder, said Raymond. "Thank God, the licensing board did the right thing. As far as I'm concerned he misrepresented facts to the licensing board."

Raymond asked that his amendment be incorporated into Harold's proposal, but Ward 4 Councillor Michael D'Amico, chairman of the rules committee, said the amendment should be considered separately. Other councillors agreed.

Harold added he did not want the councillors to be in the business of enforcing sanctions. By having individuals sign appearance slips before they testify before the council, a mechanism would be in place to refer the matter to the district attorney if someone makes deliberate misrepresentations to the council.

Harold added that many documents which people sign are signed under the penalty of perjury, citing as examples census forms and tax returns.

D'Amico said the rules committee previously approved Harold's proposal unanimously, and the council itself adopted the new rule.

Harold was prompted to seek the tougher language added to the council's rules after learning that an attorney representing shipyard owner Sotiris Emmanouil had allegedly misrepresented the deliberations of the U.S. Maritime Administration regarding pledged guarantees.

Council To Have Say On High Point Project

loop to Quincy Hospital.

Other conditions require the developer to address dust, noise, insect and rodent control, radon and solid waste issues.

Originally, the developer had proposed building 1,641 at 193-323 Quarry St.

Although the public hearing segment regarding the P.U.D. special permit for the project is closed, the councillors will accept reports from the public works commissioner, the health commissioner, the city engineer, the director of traffic and parking and the director of inspectional services as well as the city's environmental consultants, Weston and Sampson.

Public Works Commissioner David Colton said he is waiting for some material to be submitted to him by Congress Group Ventures' consultants. He set a Friday deadline to receive the material.

Both Councillors Patrick McDermott of Ward 3 and Michael D'Amico of Ward 4 noted that many residents are concerned about the proposed development.

Last month, several spoke out about their concerns.

"My concerns generally remain the same — traffic, the environment and density," McDermott said.

"On the other side of my concerns is the fact about what happens next. I have walked myself through several scenarios.

"We are dealing with a tough situation for the city," he continued. "We may be teetering on the point where we have reached the brink of development.

"Do we say yes to the development? Is it the best package the city can hope for from this or any other developer?

"If a no vote were to come down, there is a plethora of possibilities," McDermott said.

"Some of the alternatives are buying the property and zoning it as open space. If it were that easy, we would have done it. There are 75 acres there, now valued probably around $15 million."

Congress Group Ventures bought the property for about $8.5 million and has invested a lot of money in it, he said.

"If the city were to take the land by eminent domain, we would have to pay just compensation. What's the reasonable value of the property? It's a gray area. It would be at least what they paid, plus the value, had he been able to develop it.

"But the city cannot afford to buy it."

McDermott said there had been several public hearings on the proposal, and no one wants to see something negative constructed there that affects the quality of life, such as traffic.

Because the land is zoned as a P.U.D., it is open to a wide variety of types of development. Residential probably is the best use, he said, but some have suggested an office park or a strip mall. "That would be really negative and would cause a large traffic problem.

A buildout of 400 single-family homes would end up as a real problem for the school system to accommodate the additional number of students who would move in, he added.

"Our traffic problem in Quincy is due to commercial development. We are pushing our limits when it comes to commercial development. We are trying to negotiate with the state for an additional ramp from Route 93 into Crown Colony," McDermott added.

"Depending on the size, the number one issue [regarding High Point] is traffic," said Councillor-at-large Paul Harold. "Other issues include sewerage, water pressure, the impact to the schools and the cleanup [of the former landfill] itself.

"We are monitoring the situation, and we've hired our own consultant to review the studies by Haley and Aldrich," the environmental engineers hired by the proponents," Harold said.

This is an attractive site for rental housing, with rents expected to be about $1,800 a month, said Harold. The development of the luxury apartments will include a mix of one- and two-bedroom units.

"The question is: Is this project too big for the site," Harold stated.

"Jack Gillon [the traffic engineer] will carry a lot of weight," said D'Amico. "My number one concern is the traffic and the effect on all the intersections close to High Point.

"We have very serious concerns whether the infrastructure can handle the traffic projected 10 years from now," he said.

He said the council asked the engineer to study the different intersection of Willard, Stedman and Quarry streets not in the initial study and take into consideration the effect on all of the side roads off Quarry Street to avoid cut-through traffic.

"The larger issue is what can we do to avoid cut-through on Quarry Street," D'Amico said. "There have been accidents at Quarry Street and Furnace Brook Parkway, even with the traffic signals," he said.

- Viewing of four ice sculptures created by Boston area master ice sculptor Alfred George from Brookline Ice Co.
 - Chain saw art by artist Ken Dudley. He will create wood sculptures using only chain saws.
 - Appearances by "President Teddy Roosevelt" and "President Abraham Lincoln."
 - Man-made snow mountain (weather permitting). The Blue Hills ski company has loaned the city a snow making machine.

Event organizers expect enough snow in Quincy Center to hold a snow board demonstration. Snow making operations will begin at noon Monday.

- A walk-through colonial soldiers camp and Civil War camp.
- Live music performances by Watson Reid and Americana performing traditional American folk music and Made in the Shade performing New Orleans jazz music.

Watson Reid and Americana will perform in the United First Parish Church Sanctuary between 2:30 and 3:30 p.m. Reid and Americana have been featured performers at First Night and the Summer Arts in the Parks series.

Made in the Shade Dixieland Band will perform in the City Hall Council Chambers between noon and 1 p.m. Having completed a 10-country tour of Europe and numerous festivals throughout New England, they have been named Boston Magazine's "Best Dixieland Band."

Also in the City Council Chamber, "Theodore Roosevelt," one of our greatest presidents, takes his place with Washington, Jefferson, Roosevelt and Lincoln on Mt. Rushmore. His "Mind, Body and Spirit" program will be held from 2:30 to 3:45 p.m. Roosevelt was also a cowboy, soldier, natu-

Neighborhood Meeting On Stop & Shop Expansion

City Council President Peter Kolson, who represents Ward 1, has scheduled a neighborhood meeting about Stop and Shop's plans to renovate its present site on Southern Artery and expand slightly.

The meeting will be held at 7 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 11, on the lower level at Town Brook House. Representatives from Stop and Shop will present their plans and the Quincy traffic engineer will be available to answer questions.

Stop and Shop plans to add a small section of to the back of the store and incorporate two presently vacant stores into its complex. The stand-alone bank will move inside the Stop and Shop building, and a tree-lined sidewalk will be installed.

Kolson said he would like to see pedestrian conditions on Brackett Street improved, adding that no significant additional traffic or any interruption to the present traffic flow is expected.

Construction Hits $58 Million Mark Mild Winter Building Boom

By MARILYN JACKSON

Punxsutawney Phil just may be right when he failed to see his shadow last week, indicating that spring is just around the corner.

"It seems like spring is here," said contractor Tom Place who was applying for a building permit Tuesday to construct a new home in Houghs Neck where he owns Bayswater Marine.

"The last time it snowed, I didn't pick up the phone" to plow for the city, he said sheepishly. "I'm in winter denial."

Activity in the building department is brisk, said Walter White, director of inspection services.

"Because of the weather, construction hasn't slowed. The strong economy drives most of it, and because of the good weather there has been no reason to slow down," he said.

As of the end of January, 17 permits for single-family homes had been issued since July 1, but permits for residential alterations totaled 598.

Permits issued for the first seven months of the year totaled 799 compared to 784 for the same period last year.

Related Story On Page 22

But the total value of those permits is nearly double — $58 million — compared to the total value of $30 million for the same period last year.

That means receipts for the various building permits totals $789,370 to date. In January alone, receipts totaled $299,236.

Commercial construction accounts for much of that increase — $12.187 million, including the $11.5 million office building at 4 Battery Park and the $3 million in permits for the office building at 2300 Crown Colony Drive and the Mass. Cooperative Bank on Quincy Avenue.

Permits for the condominium development on Victory Road totaled $1.44 million, while another 11-unit development on Village Drive was valued at $780,000.

"The ground really isn't frozen that much," said White. "Everyone is working right through the winter. There's no snow, no real cold weather."

"We've been fortunate with the weather," said Tom

McPhee Named To New School Post

Ken McPhee, long-time head football coach and Dean of Discipline at North Quincy High School has been named to a new school post.

School Supt. Eugene Creedon confirmed Tuesday he had appointed McPhee as Coordinator of Security and Transportation and that McPhee has assumed his new duties. The appointment was effective Feb. 4.

It apparently will bring McPhee's football coaching career to an end after 18 years at the helm of North Quincy during which his teams won 92 games.

"The job does not allow coaching," Creedon told The Sun. "After school hours are critical in the job."

Creedon said there were eight applicants for the job which salarywise ranks with that of assistant high school principals, somewhere around $60,000.

A screening committee narrowed the field to three finalists. The other two were Michael Draicchio, physical education teacher at Sterling Middle School and Joseph Kintigos, youth liaison for the school department with the community.

McPhee told The Sun: "This is a new challenge for me and I am looking forward to it."

He apparently, however, had hoped he might continue to coach for one more year with only eight wins shy of the magic 100 mark.

McPhee in his new job will have some duties similar to that of John (Butch) Mahoney who retired as Social Health Coordinator in January after 27 years.

"But this is drastically a different job," said Creedon. "Butch had police powers. A lot of his work became police work. We are not police officers, we are teachers."

Creedon said if there was a problem at the school where a police officer was needed, McPhee would call for one.

Creedon said McPhee will be doing some of the work Mahoney did but would also have additional duties.

McPhee will have under him five security guards,

Face $313,700 In Penalties OSHA Cites 3 Contractors In Scaffolding Deaths

Three contractors have been cited by the Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) for alleged violations in connection with last August's scaffolding collapse at 77 Adams Place, Quincy Center, that killed two young Irish workers.

The men, Shane Patrick McGettigan, 21, and Ronan Stewart, 23, had been in the United States for only a few weeks before the tragic Aug. 11 accident occurred. The pair, who were repairing and waterproofing brickwork outside the sixth floor of the building, fell nearly 80 feet to their death when the scaffolding buckled and were buried in rubble.

Brenda Gordon, OSHA's area director in Braintree, said the agency is proposing penalties totaling $313,700 against the three contractors:

Diversified Contracting Inc. Of Braintree, GW Construction Company of Brighton and Metropolitan Scaffold Services Inc. Of Mendon.

Gordon said that Diversified and GW Construction allegedly committed willful violations of OSHA safety standards, the most severe of OSHA's violation categories.

"Our investigation concluded that the primary cause of the collapse was the overloading of the scaffold with brick, debris and excess scaffold planking," Gordon said.

"Both Diversified and GW are experienced in using scaffolding for masonry work. The safe working load of the scaffold was clearly labeled on the scaffold frames by the manufacturer."

Metropolitan Scaffold Services, the company responsible for the original erection of the scaffold, was cited for two alleged "serious" violations.

The proposed penalties are:

Diversified Contracting, $230,600; GW Construction, $77,100 and Metropolitan Scaffold, $6,000.

Both Diversified Contracting and GW Construction were cited for four alleged willful violations: loading a tubular welded frame scaffold beyond its manufacturer's rated capacity; directing the alteration of the scaffold by untrained and inexperienced employees; allowing demolition material of bricks and mortar to accumulate on the scaffold platform, and failing to train employees working on the scaffold.

Both firms also were cited for an alleged serious violation for failing to have a competent person inspect the scaffold for visible defects prior to the work shift.

Metropolitan Scaffold also was cited for two alleged serious violations for failing to ensure that the scaffold was supported on level and sufficiently rigid footings to keep the structure from settling and erecting a tubular welded frame scaffold 19 frames high with cross bracing missing from a base section.

OSHA defines a willful violation as one committed with an intentional disregard of or plain indifference to OSHA regulations and a serious violation as one in which there is substantial probability that death or serious physical harm could result and the employer knew or should have known of the danger.

All three companies have 15 working days to pay the fines or participate in an informal conference with the OSHA area director or appeal to the independent Occupational Safety and Health Review Commission.

QUINCY RESIDENT George Murphy, right, captain of the Boston Emergency Medical Services, joins State Sen. Michael Morrissey (D-Quincy) at a recent conference announcing the filing of an amendment to the "Good Samaritan Law" to include coverage for people trained to use an Automatic External Defibrillator (AED). The proposed legislation is supported by the American Heart Association (AHA) and its New England affiliate; the American Red Cross, and Boston Emergency Medical Services.

$1.5 Million For Town Brook Project Included In Federal FY2000 Budget

President Clinton's proposed Fiscal Year 2000 budget includes $1.5 million for the Town Brook flood protection project, announces Cong. William Delahunt.

The funding would help complete the third and final stage of the Town Brook flood protection budget. Funds would help continue reconstruction of the Quincy Dam, located in Braintree, which began in 1992.

The House of Representatives will begin the appropriation process regarding the FY2000 budget. As the House approves appropriate tions bills, they will be sent to the Senate for approval, and then on to the President.

Fiscal Year 2000 begins Oct. 1.

WORK IT OUT: EXERCISING WITH ASTHMA

If you think working out and asthma don't mix, guess again. Doctors know that exercise helps prevent many major diseases, and it is beneficial to the asthmatic patient. When you're fit, your lungs needn't work as hard to move air. However, some judicious preplanning may be wise. Talk to your doctor about your medications; you may find that using a short-acting beta agonist like albuterol about 15 to 30 minutes before exercise to dilate your bronchial tubes helps. If this doesn't work, your doctor may recommend cromolyn or nedocromil instead of, or in conjunction with, albuterol prior to your workout. Some athletes who engage in longer periods of exercise may get better control by using salmeterol, a longer-acting bronchodilator. Asthma is a disease that requires the engaged attention of the patient and doctor to achieve optimum ease for the patient. At AFFILIATED MEDICAL GROUPS, located at 700 Congress St., Quincy, we listen to your concerns. We are affiliated with Quincy and South Shore Hospitals. Please call us at 617-472-2550; office hours by appointment.

P.S. Also exercise good judgement: Give yourself a break from your workout routine when you have any viral infections.

A Young-At-Heart Wedding

It's going to be a romantic Valentine wedding for Nancy Randall and Warren Kirkland Saturday.

"We're as excited as a couple of kids," says Nancy. She's 75. He's 84.

A young-at-heart couple who hardly look or act their age.

They met at the Beechwood Community Life Center in Squantum where they have been active since the early 1980s as volunteers and Senior Olympians.

Warren, a retired engineer who lives in Wollaston, served on the board at Beechwood for 15 years and captains the Senior Olympics volleyball team.

Nancy, who also plays volleyball, says proudly: "With Warren as captain we beat Mayor Sheets and his celebrity team last year and we expect to do it again this May."

A South Weymouth resident, she is a retired health care professional who served in the South Shore Hospital Pathology Department and later was an office manager in a dental office. She helped start Beechwood's popular lunch program and leads Beechwood's "Walk of Ages" walking club.

Nancy and Warren became friends through their activities at Beechwood and after the deaths of their spouses, the friendship blossomed into love.

"We just seemed to hit it off," says Nancy.

Her husband, Robert, to whom he was married 48 years, and Warren's wife, Pearl, to whom she was wed 58 years, died within days of one another in November, 1997.

The two couples had been friends and Nancy and Warren supported and comforted one another in their grief. And, with the help of friends purchased two memorial park benches at Beechwood. Plaques were placed on the benches dedicating them in memory of Robert Randall and Pearl Kirkland.

Warren proposed to Nancy last Nov. 30—a year later.

On bended knee?

"No," laughs Nancy, "on both knees. He had a speech all prepared but when it came time to give it, he forgot it and got right to the point: will you marry me?"

And, what did she say?

"I said yes, just like that. I know a good man when I see one and a good one is hard to find. I wasn't about to let him get away."

In between a three-mile walk and a volleyball game they announced their engagement to their friends at Beechwood in December.

And were toasted by them at a champagne party.

Nancy says they picked Feb. 13, the day before Valentine's Day for the wedding, "because it's such a romantic time of the year."

"I just hope we don't have a blizzard," she says. "All the arrangements have been made. Too late to back out now."

The wedding will be at 2 p.m. Saturday at Central Baptist Church on Washington St., Quincy Center. Rev. Don Strong, a founder of the Beechwood Center and a long-time friend of the couple, will do the honors.

It started out to be a very small wedding but the guest list has grown to more than 100, including, in addition to family and other friends, the Senior Olympics volleyball team, the seniors walkers club, and the Beechwood staff.

"At Beechwood we are just one big happy family," says Nancy.

She says the wedding will be a little different than the customary one.

"We're not going to have the traditional wedding march. A lot of people are getting away from that. We are going to have an air by Handel."

YOUNG-AT-HEART couple, Nancy Randall and Warren Kirkland will be married Saturday at Central Baptist Church. (Quincy Sun Photo/Robert Noble)

She says their first time marriages were very happy ones and the second time around should be even better because "between the two of us we have 106 years experience."

Nancy has three sons, Paul of Weymouth, Alan of Loveland, Ohio and Robert, Jr. of Rocklin, Calif. Warren has two daughters, Karren Cummings of Hamilton and Janet Loring of North Falmouth.

Paul will give his mother away and with Warren's granddaughter, Karren Meyer of Fame, Vt., will be an official witness for the wedding ceremony.

Alan Randall, and his wife, Carolyn, are coming on from Ohio. Carolyn and Warren's granddaughter, Julie Cummings, will sing at the ceremony.

Robert Randall, Jr. is unable to come across country because of business commitments but gives his full blessing.

When his mother told him she was going to marry Warren, his reaction: "Go for it!"

Nancy and Warren will leave Monday on a 10-day wedding trip to the Hawaiian Islands of Maui and Kauai.

So, they will be married on Saturday and leave for Hawaii on Monday.

What are there plans for Sunday, Valentine's Day? "Oh," says Nancy, "we will be celebrating our wedding. And laughs, "Someone said they were going to get us a hotel room."

Warren adds: "We're going to do some packing."

"They make a wonderful couple," says Sharron Beals, executive director of the Beechwood Center. "Theirs is a remarkable story of friendship, love and sharing the future together."

And they are looking forward to a long future together.

Nancy notes they will only get to two of the Hawaiian Islands this trip.

"But we'll be going back to see the other ones," she says.

They both encourage seniors to participate in Beechwood's new social and recreational "Starting Over" program designed for mature adults after major changes in their lives such as retirement, death, divorce, relocation, etc.

And at 75 and 84, and with their positive outlook on life Nancy and Warren are the perfect models for "starting over."

The Ship Building Sheds at the Great Yard, Quincy Point, Mass.

THIS IS AN UNUSUAL early postcard view of the Fore River Shipyard in Quincy Point. This picture was taken from Quincy Avenue where the pasture in the foreground was still used for cows to graze. The overhead structure called a shed on the postcard is still an integral part of the yard. Hoists and cranes located at the top of the shed provided overhead support for the assembly of ships. This shipyard postcard and many others like it were printed in Germany before WWI and may have inadvertently provided the Germans with intelligence about our Navy.

Dr. Harold Goodman Aiding Victims In Honduras

Dr. Harold Goodman, a Quincy othopedic surgeon, left Wednesday for a 10-day trip to Honduras where he will be part of a medical relief team sponsored by CapeCARES to provide medical assistance to the victims of Hurricane Mitch. In the past 10 years, the CapeCARES group has treated more than 53,000 people for various medical, dental, and optometry problems in Honduras.

More than two months after Hurricane Mitch struck, little has improved in Honduras. Power and phone lines are still lying on the ground. There is no drinkable water. Many are sick with diarrhea and fevers of unknown origin.

Honduras, which is approximately the size of Ohio, has a population of 6,000,000 and is one of the poorest countries in the western hemisphere. There are only about 900 physicians in Honduras and only one dentist per 26,000 people.

Dr. Goodman was asked to be part of the team of doctors and nurses because of his past participation in similar relief efforts. In the past, he has served as a physician volunteer in Vietnam, Pakistan, St. Lucia, Bosnia, and Guatemala.

Historic Quincy Prints At Quincy Hospital

Prints of "Historic Quincy are being offered for sale through the Quincy Hospital Health & Education Foundation and proceeds benefit the hospital.

"Historic Quincy: is an original watercolor lithograph by local artist Bill Beyer. Each lithograph is individually signed and numbered by the artist. The painting depicts an array of historic sights in Quincy, such as the USS Salem, Granite Railway, the Adams birthplace and mansion and many more familiar landmarks. A copy of the framed print is available to view in the Gift Shop located in the main lobby of the hospital.

Prints are available at a cost of $35 unframed; $125 framed. The framed version is available in a choice of two different frames and mats. Proceeds from the sale of prints help to enhance health care services at Quincy Hospital, as the hospital continues to serve the communities south of Boston.

What kind of role model is this for young people? "Never, never, never 'kiss and tell' even if under oath!"

Naval Base Future Assured

By PAUL HAROLD

The peacetime future of the Squantum Naval Base was assured this week with the announcement by the Navy that the air station would remain open.

The air station would be one of 12 bases around the country to be used for training Navy and Marine flyers and ground personnel. The training would consist of 48 drill periods to insure that the air reserve pilots logged at least 100 flying hours per year.

TAXPAYERS' ASSOCIATION CALLS FOR HEARING ON HOUSING COMMISSION

The Quincy Taxpayers' Association (QTA) in a letter to City Council President Christian Burkard called for a public hearing on Councillor David Crowley's plan to create a permanent federal housing authority.

The QTA referred to subsidized housing as "substandard" housing and labeled the plan as revolutionary. In their letter to Burkard, the QTA asked, "who would live there, what taxes if any would they pay?" The letter went on to say that the plan would entail so many ramifications, such as zoning that the council order should not pass until both sides were heard.

Five Honored As Elderpreneurs Of The Year

Five Quincy residents were recently honored as 1998 South Shore Elderpreneurs at a breakfast ceremony by the South Shore Chamber of Commerce at Lombardo's in Randolph.

Twenty business and community leaders were nominated for the award, which celebrates the contributions, vitality, innovations and insights of the 55-plus community. Now in its fourth year, more than 100 energetic and creative South Shore seniors have been honored as Elderpreneurs.

Stephen J. Allen of North Quincy was recognized in the "Business Under 50 Employees" category. In 1995, at the age of 70, Allen joined East Coast Petroleum of North Quincy, assuming responsibility for the company's public affairs. Allen, who has also dedicated 13 years of pro-bona public relations service to the Massachusetts Vietnamese community, had his nomination supported by letters of commendation from Cong. Joseph Moakley, state Senate President Thomas Birmingham and Boston Mayor Thomas Menino.

Three residents were honored as Elderpreneur "Wavemakers." They are: Harold Crowley, Jr., Matt Mullen and John Noonan. Sister Joanne Westwater, also of Quincy, received special recognition honors.

Crowley, 61, who retired after 34 years in the Quincy school system, was asked in 1995 by Mayor James Sheets to direct the Kids'

Voting USA Program in the city. Crowley developed and implemented a prize-winning curriculum that uses an interactive approach to teach young people about the voting process.

Mullen, 78, served 33 years as a Quincy firefighter. Now a secular Franciscan associated with St. Leonard's in the North End, he volunteers his time at the Francis House kitchen as a Eucharistic minister at Boston Medical Center.

Noonan, 77, is one of the first volunteers to produce a cable television show in Quincy. Seventeen years after that first broadcast, Noonan hosts and co-produces the award-winning "Senior Beat." He also serves as president of the South Shore Coordinating Transportation, Inc., which provides free transportation to seniors living in Quincy.

Sister Westwater, 68, began a private counseling practice for families and adolescents at age 55, 22 years after being accepted into the Sisters of the Good Shepherd. In response to the increasing number of clients who could not pay, she established Maria Droste Services in Quincy Square, offering counseling to the needs of families and individuals who are experiencing difficulties at home, at work, in school or in personal relationships.

"These Elderpreneurs are men and women who shift our views about aging and the value of seniors in the community," said Noreen Carey-Neville, owner of an insurance and investment business in Weymouth who has managed and directed the program.

Beechwood and Bernazzani Schools Receive Cultural Grants

Two Quincy Schools, Beechwood Knoll and Bernazzani, have received Massachusetts Cultural Council grants.

Announcement was made by Senator Michael Morrissey and State Reps. Stephen Tobin and Bruce Ayers. The grants are part of the 1993 Education Reform Act, which includes the arts as one of seven core subjects to be taught in Massachusetts Schools.

The grants will fund event and residency programs from January to June, 1999.

"The grant enables our children and teachers to participate in creative, hands-on learning situations with artists who have years of experience in school settings," said Morrissey.

Beechwood Knoll Elementary School received a grant of $800. Children will work with visual artist Heidi Schork to research, design, and paint a mural depicting the local salt marsh.

"The location of Beechwood Knoll School makes this the perfect project for students to understand the beauty of nature and respect for the environment," Ayers said.

The Charles A. Bernazzani school received a $3,460 grant for the residency of dancer Nikki Hu and musician Guy Van Duser.

"This program will help expand the arts to the children in an audio, visual, and physical fashion," said Tobin.

The artists will work with teachers and students in grades three through five to explore movement as a learning and teaching tool.

Chocolate Chip Cookies

With today's recipe for chocolate chip cookies, there is a story that goes with it which was received on the internet.

Once upon a time, according to my friend Alma, someone requested the recipe for cookies after purchasing them at a famous department store. When the waitress said the price was two fifty, the women assumed it was $2.50. However, when she received her credit card bill, it read $250. The store would not refund the money so she decided to print the recipe so that every cookie lover in the country would see it. So here it is.

Chocolate Chip Cookies

- 1 cup butter
- 2 cups flour
- 1 tsp. baking soda
- 1 cup sugar

- 12 ounces chocolate chips
- 1 cup brown sugar
- 2 1/2 cups blended oatmeal (crushed finely)
- 1/2 tsp. salt
- 4 ounce Hershey bar (grated)
- 2 eggs
- 1 tsp. baking powder
- 1 cup chopped nuts (your choice)
- 1 tsp. vanilla

Cream butter and both sugars. Add eggs and vanilla, mix together with flour, oatmeal, baking powder and soda. Add chocolate chips, Hershey bar, and nuts.. Roll into balls and place two inches apart on a cookie sheet. Bake for 14 to 15 minutes at 375. Makes about 50 cookies.

Science Focus At Library During School Vacation

"I Didn't Know That!" is a week long celebration of science to be held at the Thomas Crane Public Library during School Vacation Week, Feb. 16-20.

Parents and children are invited to stop by any branch to try out a table top science experiment, answer the daily science puzzler, or identify the mystery scientist.

The world of electricity

SARAH SALERNO

with Sarah Salerno will be featured Friday, Feb. 19, at the Adams Shore Branch, 519 Sea St.

The program, for children ages five and older, begins at 3 p.m. and last approximately one hour.

This is an opportunity to learn about atoms, electrons, circuits, and conductors with this interactive science program.

Ayers Participates In Education Conference

Rep. Bruce Ayers recently attended a legislative conference sponsored by the state Department of Education designed to brief state officials on education planning for the next several years.

New members of the legislature worked with education officials and selected teachers to review education policies and to compare the status of public schools in their communities. Attendees also discussed potential steps to improve the education system once the state's six-year education reform plan is fully implemented next year.

Among the topics discussed was Massachusetts Comprehensive Assessment System (MCAS).

"I learned about lot of interesting things about the new student test," Ayers said. "The department has developed a comprehensive curriculum framework for core subjects like English, math and science and has made each school department responsible for teaching this framework to students.

"These tests will let us know how effectively each school teaches our children what they need to learn in order to become successful adults," Ayers said.

The freshman legislator noted the MCAS results will give the Department of Education an indication which school systems are underperforming so that specialists can be assigned to work directly at troubled schools.

"The MCAS tests will give education reform some teeth by allowing the state to monitor substandard schools and assume control of any system that cannot achieve the high standards that students deserve," Ayers said.

The briefing also featured presentations from several senior staff members at the department and included a discussion of plans to allow communities more flexibility in the system of bilingual education.

"Many communities have unique needs for teaching its students who do not speak English as their first language," Ayers said. "The need for educating recent Quincy immigrants is certainly different than what is needed in Chelsea.

"I think we can do a better job locally and will support legislation to give that authority to our superintendent of schools."

Additional information was provided about plans to preserve the generous standard of assistance provided to learning disabled students while reducing the number of students enrolled in special education programs. Legislators were also updated on early childhood education programs, basic adult education, school budgets, state financial assistance, technology in the classroom and current legal issues facing schools.

Tutors Needed For Literacy Volunteers

Literacy Volunteers of America-Quincy at the Thomas Crane Public Library needs volunteer tutors for one-on-one instruction to adults in basic reading and writing. Anyone interested should attend an orientation session Tuesday, Jan. 19 or Tuesday, Feb. 23 from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. at the Adams-Shore Library, 519 Sea St..

Literacy Volunteers of America-Quincy is a non-profit educational organization which offers free tutoring to adults in basic reading and writing through a regional network of trained volunteers.

New Automated Library System At Quincy College

Students returning to Quincy College this Spring semester are being greeted by a brand new automated library system.

The Voyager library management software system has been installed over the past 12 months. The old card catalog is gone. All access to the collection is now via computer terminals.

The college also, through the voyager system, converted from the Dewey Decimal to the Library of Congress cataloging system.

It is a computerized replacement for the "card catalog" that allow students and faculty to access the Anselmo and Russell libraries database of books, journals, videos, photographs and almost everything else held in the libraries. It features point and click technology within a Windows environment and takes advantage of the flexible of the World Wide Web. With Voyager, users can tap into a wealth of information of anything, from anyplace.

The system was provided with a $180,000 gift from College Courses, Inc., a 501C3 organization, which operates the College's bookstore.

John Yazwinski To Receive AIDS Housing Corporation Award

JOHN YAZWINSKI

John Yazwinski, housing programs director for Quincy Interfaith Sheltering Coalition, will receive an AIDS Housing Corporation Award at its annual meeting Thursday, Feb. 18 from 4:30 to 7:30 p.m. at Old South Church, Boston.

AHC's main activities involve providing housing development assistance to client agencies to access available funding sources; establishing working relationships with appropriate service providers; creating collaborative development and management plans; ensuring consumer input in program design and establishing systems that will ensure the smooth operation of the housing program.

AHC works with organizations and public officials through all phases of development and program implementation. Following the implementation of these new programs, and with existing programs, AHC provides stabilization and management services.

Yazwinski has distinguished himself as a tireless housing advocate in his brief tenure at Father Bill's Place. Dedicated to those who have become homeless, particularly for reasons related to HIV/AIDS, he has offered housing assistance, search, and placement for retained to provide a variety of supports for those with HIV/AIDS.

Additionally, program services have expanded throughout the South Shore from Quincy to Plymouth as an outreach housing specialist from Fr. Bill's Place has been placed in Plymouth to ensure comprehensive services are available throughout the area.

Yazwinski co-chairs the Quincy/South Shore AIDS Consortium along with Daurice Cox from Bay State Community Services. Together they work under the sponsorship of Quincy Visiting Nurses Association to coordinate the work of the many local agencies who extend themselves on behalf of those living with HIV/AIDS.

Friends and co-workers described Yazwinski as a "mover and shaker," "totally dedicated," "the consummate housing advocate," "informed as no one else" and "compassionate."

A 1996 graduate of Bentley College with a business degree in marketing, Yazwinski began his career at QISC/Father Bill's Place in June of 1996. A native of Maine, he lives in Norwood.

over 129 households in the past 18 months.

His initial foray into the field began as a student in the Bentley Service Learning Project co-sponsored by Father Bill's Place. This partnership was responsible for the creation of Project Connect, a voice-mail system for those who are homeless and seeking employment, of which Yazwinski was instrumental. Largely because of his success in this endeavor, he was offered full-time employment at Father Bill's.

Yazwinski has shown his creativity and initiative in a variety of ways. Under his leadership funds have been garnered to provide rental subsidies from HUD and additional staff has been

CAR COLORS
While such basic colors as black, white, and red remain perennial favorites among car buyers, more fashionable hues are subject to evolutionary change. Dark green was hardly seen on vehicles as this decade began and now has emerged as the hottest color of the '90s. In fact, 17.5% of all models of 1997 cars were either medium or dark green, followed by white (17%), beige (14.4%), black (8%), and medium red (7.4%). The most popular color choice of 1997 for trucks, minivans, and sport utility vehicles was white (23.2%), followed by medium or dark green (18.5%), black (11.2%), bright red (7.6%), and medium red (7.5%). What do carmakers predict will be the new hot color? Dark blue.

John Cain Candidate For Ward 3 City Councillor

John Cain of South Central Ave., Wollaston, announces his candidacy for the Ward 3 City Council seat.

Cain, who has a small computer products, sales and service business in Wollaston.

Cain, who at age 53 is making his first bid for elective office, said:

"I want to participate more directly in the local decisions that affect us now and in the future by representing Ward 3 on the City Council."

"Ward 3 residents should know about plans that affect Ward 3 and Quincy as a whole, when they are at an early enough stage for them to respond and provide input and opinions."

Cain said Ward 3 needs a community center for the children, senior citizens and community activities.

He said as councillor he would be visible, accessible and would speak up for the residents of Ward 3.

"Community and economic growth, public safety, education, senior citizens security and continued recreational activities and programs for our children and teenagers are what I believe in," he said. "I will work to make Quincy a better place for young and old, residents and businesses."

Cain said he will campaign door-to-door to meet residents and find out what interests and concerns are important to them.

Cain, a native of New Rochelle, N.Y., and a former Boston resident, has lived in Quincy 15 years. He is married to the former Kathleen O'Hanley, whose family has been here 50 years.

They are parents of three children: Ian, 16, a junior at Boston College High School who attended Central Middle School; Erin, 10, a fifth grader and Liam, 5, a kindergarten at the Wollaston School.

Cain has a masters degree of education with emphasis in human resource management from Cambridge College in Cambridge. He is a member of the U.S. Postal Advisory Council for Quincy and the Quincy Rotary Club.

Registration For Kindergarten At Public Schools March 9

Registration for kindergarten for the school year 1999-2000 will be held Tuesday, March 9 from 9 to 11:30 a.m. and 12:30 to 2:30 p.m. at all public elementary schools in Quincy for children who will be five years of age in 1999.

Parents must present a birth certificate, passport/visa at the time of registration and evidence of immunizations. New Department of Public Health kindergarten entrance immunization requirements are effective, September, 1999:

*5 doses of DPT, unless 4th dose given after 4th birthday.

*4 doses of Polio, unless 3rd dose given after 4th birthday

*2 doses of MMR, with 1st given after 1st birthday

*3 doses of Hep B, if born after January 1, 1992

*1 dose of Varicella (chickenpox) or doctor documented case of chickenpox.

A recent entrance physical examination is mandated by the state for all students entering school, and preferably should be presented at registration or at least before the start of school in September. In addition, evidence of previous screening for lead poisoning is required for all kindergarten entrants.

Children who will be six years of age on or before Dec. 31, 1999 and who have not attended public kindergarten may be registered for grade one on the same day.

Parents of children living in the Lincoln-Hancock, Clifford H. Marshall, and Snug Harbor School districts may receive information at kindergarten registration concerning opportunities for preschool-early childhood education.

City Receives $40,000 Grant For Soccer Fields

Quincy Park Department has been awarded a $40,000 grant from the United States Soccer Foundation for constructing soccer fields.

The grant money will be used to offset the costs of the construction of two new soccer fields on Quarry St. in West Quincy. The money will be combined with an allocation of city funds proposed by Mayor James Sheets and passed by the City Council last year.

Construction of the new fields, located next to the Quincy Elk's Lodge, has already begun. The fields should be ready for play this fall.

The two new fields will bring the total amount of soccer fields in the city of Quincy to five. Two additional fields will be built as part of the Quarry Hills Golf Course and Recreational Complex.

"The city of Quincy is making great strides in the effort to meet the growing demands of our young soccer players. We have more than doubled our soccer-only facilities in the past three years. With the support of Mayor Sheets and the City Council, we are now able to provide ample opportunities for our city's children to play the game of soccer," said Thomas Koch, Executive Director of the Park, Forest, and Cemetery Departments.

A large portion of the construction will be performed with Park Department personnel and equipment, saving the City thousands of dollars, Koch said. In addition to the grant monies, the city has received donated fill and equipment to help further offset the cost of the project.

"This project will transform a barren property of mostly scrub vegetation into a vibrant active recreational facility for the youth of Quincy. Through the combination of grant money and talented City personnel, we can maximize our efforts and accomplish this goal," added Koch.

Koch also announced that a portion of the eight-acre parcel will feature walking paths, shade trees, and park benches to capitalize on the beautiful views offered by the southwestern portion of the property.

"I recognize that not everyone enjoys active recreation. The Park Department had made an effort to incorporate the needs of everyone into the planning of our facilities. In an effort to respect the needs of those who enjoy passive recreation, we will offer an area for people to take a peaceful stroll, sit and enjoy the views, and simply relax," he added.

The United States Soccer Federation Foundation is a non-profit organization dedicated to promoting the game of soccer for America's Youth. The organization was founded when the World Cup was played in the United States in 1994. A portion of the revenue that was generated from the World Cup is used to fund the Foundation's grant program.

Lions Club, Quincy Access TV Initiate 'Talking Bulletin Board'

Quincy Access TV and the Quincy Lions Club have begun a joint venture called the "Talking Bulletin Board."

Volunteers from the Lions have committed to reading the community news and event bulletins that air over Quincy Access TV Channel 3 for the blind and visually impaired. Would Help Communities Obtain Land For Parks

Mariano Open Space Bill Has Strong Support

Legislation filed by State Rep. Ronald Mariano of Quincy to help Norfolk County communities purchase open space for new park and recreational facilities, has won strong support at national, county, and city levels.

Eric O'Brien, chairman of the National Recreation and Park Association, Thomas Koch, executive director of the Quincy Park, Forestry, and Cemetery Departments and City Recreation Director Barry Welch met with Mariano here along with park, recreation, and conservation officials throughout Norfolk County to rally support for the legislation.

The legislation would create a special Open Space, Park, and Recreation Fund in Norfolk County communities. The fund would be specifically used by the municipality for the purchase of open space/conservation land and for the construction and/or renovation of park and recreational facilities.

The legislation would divert a portion of the deed excise tax monies collected by the County's Registrar of Deeds office. Currently, 50% of the deed excise tax money that is collected is allocated to the state's general fund. That 50 percent would be diverted to the Open Space, Park, and Recreation Fund in the city or town in which it was generated.

"Without creating any new taxes, we have located a funding source that will allow communities in Norfolk County the ability to consistently preserve open space and maintain park and recreational facilities. This is a landmark of legislation that will improve the quality of life in the communities of Norfolk County for generations to come," said Mariano.

The legislation was originally drafted by the Norfolk County Advisory Board composed of members from each Norfolk County community.

"The value of open space in a city with Quincy's density cannot be understated," said Koch. "Once these precious lands are developed, they are lost forever. We must attempt to provide future generations a better quality of life by preserving our open space."

Koch is Quincy's representative on the Norfolk County Advisory Board.

Last year, Norfolk County allocated $8 million dollars to the state's general fund through deed excise tax revenue. It is estimated that the city of Quincy would receive approximately $500,000 annually for the Open Space, Park, and Recreation Fund through this legislation.

The legislation will allow cities and towns to develop long-term planning strategies and solutions to protect open space and park land. Rather than protecting open space in a piecemeal fashion, municipalities will now be able to make significant purchase of open space and preserve the character of their communities," said Mariano.

"More than 100 years ago, Charles Francis Adams III and Henry Faxon made provisions so that future generations of Quincy residents could enjoy open space and park land within the boundaries of this city. Merrymount Park and Faxon Park are now vital to the quality of life for

BACKING OPEN SPACE -- State Rep. Ronald Mariano, Quincy Park, Forestry and Cemetery Executive Director Thomas Koch, Recreation Director Barry Welch, and Eric O'Brien, chairman of the National Recreation and Park

Association with park, recreation and conservation officials from throughout Norfolk County at a recent meeting in Quincy to rally support for open space preservation legislation filed by Mariano.

Quincy residents. This legislation can have as big an impact on the future of this city as the benevolence of Adams and Faxon," added Koch.

Park, recreation, and conservation officials gathered at the recent meeting at the Koch Family Park and Recreation Complex in Quincy. The meeting was hosted by the Quincy Park

Department to provide information and rally support for the legislation.

O'Brien, supporting the legislation, said:

"It is a constant challenge for cities and towns to develop viable strategies and sources for protecting open space and park land.

This legislation would provide the necessary revenue source that would allow the communities to achieve conservation goals that call Mariano's office at (617)722-2220 or the Quincy Park Department at 617-376-1251.

YOUR ACHILLES HEEL?

The Achilles heel is named for a mythological figure who was invulnerable except for one unprotected spot on his heel where, ultimately, he was mortally wounded. In women, the Achilles tendon, the band that attaches the calf muscle to the heel bone, is just such a vulnerable spot. Achilles tendinitis, inflammation of this tendon, is not an uncommon occurrence among women who frequently wear high heels. To avoid this, if possible, alternate between heels and flat shoes. The tendon may actually become shortened from wearing only high heels, leading to considerable discomfort or pain when walking either barefoot or in flat shoes. For minor tendinitis, rest, ice and an-

Carole Biagini Graduate Of Realtor Institute

Carole Biagini, manager of Daniel J. Flynn & Co. Residential Real Estate, recently had conferred upon her the designation of Graduate, Realtor Institute (GRI), by Massachusetts Association of Realtors President James Doherty.

The GRI designation signifies 90 hours of advanced in-class real estate education. Realtors who have passed the GRI examinations are recognized as having attained one of the highest professional levels in residential real estate.

The Realtor Institute is a program of the Massachusetts Association of Realtors and meets the standards set for such programs by the National Association of Realtors. The program enables Realtors to better service their clients and customers through education and training in real estate.

"Carole's achievements give us an edge in a very competitive residential real estate market. Thanks to her hard work, we will be able to better service our customers," said Flynn & Co. President Paul Talkowski.

Property Location Important To Value

Don't assume that just because potential buyers are thrilled with the look and layout of your home they automatically think the same about the area in which your house is located.

Specific property location is very important to homeowners in the 90's, due to the growth of rapid transit and the boom of various shopping malls and facilities. But this is where it can get confusing.

You see, homes are more desirable if they are close to good school districts and shopping centers but not too close or their value goes down. Let's clear this up a bit.

If your home is located within a desirable school and school district, its value may increase. However, if your house is located directly across the street from school, the noise of the setting may cause you home's value to decrease.

The same applies to homeowners who love to shop. If your home is easily accessible to the new mall a few blocks away or the supermarket a few miles down the street, your location may be considered ideal. But if you can see shopping carts or the mall parking from your bedroom window, this is considered to close to appealing neighborhood features.

There are ideal locations that hold higher values than others within subdivisions as well. Homes resting in a cul-de-sac tend to be quieter and more private than homes resting on a corner, thus demanding a higher value.

As you can see, location plays a significant role in determining the value of your home.

Jason Nuss Receives Chamber Ambassador Award

Daniel J. Flynn and Co. Senior Vice President Jason Nuss was recently named Ambassador of the Year by the South Shore Chamber of Commerce.

The award was conferred in recognition of Nuss' success in attracting new members to the Chamber of Commerce. American Automobile Association (AAA) Director of Branch Operation James Conley presented the award during a Chamber breakfast held at Lombardo's in Randolph. Nuss will serve as this year's Vice Chairman of the Ambassador Group, a subcommittee of the Chamber of Commerce that assists in attracting new members and maintaining relationships with existing members of the Chamber of Commerce.

"We are very happy for Jay, both in being named Ambassador of the Year and in assuming the vice chair position for the group," said Daniel J. Flynn and Co. President Paul Talkowski. "The success of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce has been built upon the hard work of Jay and people like him. Something Special For Your Valentine!

Glittering Gifts To Delight Loved Ones

(NAPS)—Valentine's Day has long been a holiday with glittering possibilities—and a special time for glittering gifts of fine jewelry.

Throughout the ages, precious metals and sparkling stones, which are often millions of years old, have been used to spell love—as well as eternity, devotion and fidelity. In the late 18th century, when jewelry designers were more secretive, they communicated love messages in acrostic jewelry, in which the first initials of the gems spelled out a message.

For example, "Regard" (ruby, emerald, garnet, amethyst, ruby, diamond) and "Dear" (diamond, emerald, amethyst and ruby).

Modern jewelry designers often hide less cryptic love messages within their creations, such as a simple "I love you" or personalizing a piece with a lover's name, wedding date or birthday of a child.

Hearts, cupids and red gemstones, such as rubies or red garnets, are traditional favorites. "The ancients attributed many mystical characteristics to gemstones, particularly rubies," says Lynn Ramsey, president of the Fine jewelry sends secret messages of love, such as in Craig Drake's 18K white and rose gold ring.

Jewelry Information Center. "It was said rubies bestowed good fortune and even marital happiness on the wearer."

Pearls were worn by Venus, the goddess of love. She is depicted wearing one white pearl and one black pearl to represent the light and dark sides of passion.

Diamonds have been associated with lasting love from ancient times. To the Greeks they symbolized teardrops from the gods. To the Romans, they came from falling stars that tipped the arrows of Eros, the god of love.

No wonder diamonds are one of the most desired Valentine's Day gems. Approximately 12 percent of all couples get engaged on Valentine's Day, and 75 percent of them seal it with a diamond.

While precious metals and gemstones provide a link of love to the past, they are also a way to mark the coming millennium. By some calculations, this is the last Valentine's Day in this millennium. A gift of fine jewelry, engraved with a special message and the date, is a fitting way to commemorate this historic moment—and with good care, it is a gift that could last through the next millennium.

Candy Hearts

(NAPS)—Giving candy to a loved one for Valentine's Day is a centuries-old tradition. In fact, delectable treats can be a delicious way to find a "sweet spot" in the heart of one's true love.

One tasty tradition even helps the tongue-tied pass along sweet sentiments, with heart. Sweethearts' Conversation Hearts, the small candy hearts with sayings printed on them, have been a Valentine favorite since 1902.

Now some of those heart-shaped "sweet nothings" have a modern spin. New sayings, such as "You Rock," "As If" and "Let's Do Lunch" have been added for 1999.

These candy catch phrases are the responsibility of Walter Marshall, the "King of Hearts" for the New England Confectionery Company (NECCO), which produces the Conversation Hearts.

"People have a genuine interest in the heart sayings and look forward to each year's new introductions," said Marshall. "Some old-school romantics have been slow to embrace the new high-tech sayings like 'Fax Me,' but on the whole, our fans welcome the updates."

Conversation Hearts now have more than 100 "sweet" sayings. New additions include, "I Wonder," "1-800 CUPID," "Love Me Tender," "My Way," "I Got U Babe," "Let It Be" and "Walk On By."

"The sayings were not changed for many years," said Marshall, "but we started updating them early in the 1990s, and we've had a tremendous response from customers to some of the new ones we've added."

The company's rich traditions, including a recipe that has not changed since the candy heart's inception, have led to continued success.

Stop Smoking, Lose Weight

(NAPS)—Doctors point out that being overweight and smoking can not only kill you, but before you die, continuing to smoke and not exercising can cut down on the enjoyment of your life.

That is a big reason for the growing interest in programs that help smokers quit and the overweight trim down. One of the most popular of these are the Romane Seminars on smoking cessation and weight loss. Vance Romane—a noted leader in health education and a certified master hypnotherapist—is the author of the mind power book, The Wellness Journey, which teaches readers how to use self-hypnosis to improve their "self-esteem" and just about every other facet of their lives.

Romane has used hypnosis to help others change their thinking for more than 35 years. His seminars have taught thousands of people to control smoking, weight and stress. He has helped as many as 1500 people stop smoking in one night and has sold out public seminars with up to 1000 people turned away. Here are some of his basic theories.

To control smoking, remember that craving lasts no more than three minutes. Cut down on caffeine and drink more water to flush nicotine from your body. Walk briskly for half an hour a day. You'll be more positive, burn up stress and calories and develop more energy and endurance.

Romane believes there are only two ways to lose weight: less calories/more exercise. Begin your day with exercise before breakfast and you'll burn up the most calories with the least effort. Eat a healthy breakfast of all the food groups. It will give you energy for the day and you can burn it off throughout the day.

Romane is touring Canada during January, February and March on a ten-week tour with his smoking cessation and weight loss seminars.

"In my travels," says Romane, who plans to tour the United States later this year, "I've seen parents burning their money by buying cartons of cigarettes while the baby in their arms has holes in the shoes."

"And too many people are now obese because they're eating junk food," he adds.

For more information on tour dates, and where to purchase Romane's books and tapes, call 1-800-665-4656 or visit his Web site at www.vanceromane.com.

Hancock Park Adult Day Health Center Meets Individual Needs

Although adult day care centers aren't a novelty, many community members seem to foster a misunderstanding of what adult health care centers are really all about.

In Quincy, the elderly population is estimated to be close to 19,000. Chances are, a good percentage of this population still live at home either on their own or with caregivers. The challenges arise when exhausted and busy caregivers and families leave their loved one at home alone for the day without any social interaction. So what is the alternative for older adults who need care and supervision during daytime hours?

An adult day health center.

The Hancock Park Adult Day Health Center, 164 Parkway, Quincy, offers a program that includes a variety of health, social and support services in a protective setting during daytime hours. This community-based service is designed to meet the individual needs of functionally compromised adults. If you're the caregiver, the burden of leaving a loved one at home while you're at work is relieved. And if you are the older adult left alone during the day, the Hancock Park Adult Day Health Center is an alternative to your solitude. As one member commented, "Life can get boring if we don't spend time doing things."

Located in a bright new building across the street from the Social Security office, members of Hancock Park's Adult Day Health Center begin their program at 9 a.m. with their peers and new friends. The events of the day are designed to keep minds and bodies sharp with crossword puzzles, Wheel of Fortune games, poetry writing, acrylic painting classes, Tai Chi, exercise programs, sing-a-longs, and multi-denomination religious services. And at 3 p.m. (or arranged extended hours until 6 p.m.) when the day is over, members leave with a renewed sense of "belonging," and of being a part of the community.

Daily, members enjoy a continental breakfast, a full-course dinner with choice of two entrees, and an afternoon snack. Once a month, members look forward to a van trip and special entertainment. When holidays are celebrated throughout the year, family members gain support as they join the fun at special holiday lunches.

Should families have concerns about their loved one's health, a registered nurse is on staff to manage the medical needs of the members. When desired, members can also enjoy the personal care program, taking advantage of tender loving care and assistance with a whirlpool bath or a shower, and even the services of a hairdresser or barber. And if transportation is a challenge, Hancock Park coordinates safe and dependable transportation services.

The Adult Day Health Center at Hancock Park is a comfortable, secure place where older adults can enjoy good company, a full schedule of activities, a nutritious meal, and receive the necessary assistance and individual personal care routines. As part of Norwell-based Welch Healthcare and Retirement Group, the Center is committed to improving each members' quality of life.

It is part of Hancock Park Rehabilitation and Nursing Center, a 142-bed skilled rehabilitation and nursing center, a 142-bed skilled rehabilitation and nursing center that also provides sub-acute care, specialized Alzheimer's programs, and Allerton House Assisted Living residences.

WHAT ABOUT THAT PAIN IN THE NECK?

We've all heard the expression, "You give me a pain in the neck," meaning that stress can affect us in a painful way, especially if there is weakness in one's neck.

The neck is the most delicate part of the spine and the most easily injured. It is comprised of seven separate bones that are loosely connected together by ligaments and muscles. The structure of the neck allows for great mobility, but also predisposes it to injury. Poor posture, occupation, falling asleep in a chair or on the couch, car accidents, falls, twists and strain take their toll on the neck (cervical spine).

The part of the nervous system housed within the bones of the neck is an extension of the brain. Displacements or misalignments of the neck bones may cause pressure on the adjacent spinal nerves commonly referred to as "pinched nerves." Some of the symptoms seen most often with pinched nerves in the neck are: headaches, sinusitis, dizziness, neck pain, shoulder pain, and pain, numbness and or tingling into the arm, hand or fingers.

One should always consult a chiropractor after a motor vehicle accident, fall or strain, even if you do not think you are hurt.

If you have any questions or would like to make an appointment please call Dr. Mark Jaehnig, a lifelong Quincy resident, at Quincy Chiropractic Office, 110 Billings Road, N. Quincy, 773-4400.

DID YOU KNOW...

There are two types of "secondhand" smoke which are dangerous to the non-smoker. Mainstream smoke and sidestream smoke.

Mainstream smoke - the smoke the smoker inhales through the cigarette and then exhales.

Sidestream smoke - even more dangerous, is the smoke which goes directly in the air from the burning tobacco.

Studies show that there are several cancer-causing substances, as well as more tar and nicotine, in sidestream smoke as compared to mainstream smoke.

In addition, carbon monoxide can be two to fifteen times higher in sidestream smoke.

Quincy Wrestlers Pin North, 46-6

The Quincy High School wrestling team, which has suffered through a 3-23 season thus far, gained a measure of pride last Wednesday at the Munroe McLean gymnasium as they used six pins to defeat rival North Quincy (3-15-1) by a score of 46-6.

North Quincy jumped out quickly at 103 pounds as Charlie Acton pinned freshman Bill Reid in the second period. After that it was all Quincy as junior Jaime Veira (110), sophomore Dan Dorsey (119) and senior Captain Jimmy Tam (125) recorded quick pins. Impressive sophomore George Bush (130) won a convincing victory, 11-2, over North Quincy's Rick Loughmiller. Junior Tony Davy (135) and freshman Scott Kelley (140) then recorded first period pins to secure the team win.

The match of the evening was at 171 pounds as sophomore John Alves won a hard fought match over Gary McKenzie by a 7-4 score. Junior Mike Turner (189) won an equally close match over North Quincy's Dean Zoia, 5-3.

Junior Adam Hunt (heavyweight) pinned North's Dan McDonough to account for the final tally.

Quincy has dominated the rivalry as they picked up their seventh consecutive victory.

Over the weekend, Quincy picked up its third victory of the season defeating Dedham, 40-22. The win was sandwiched between losses to powerhouses Marshfield and Whitman-Hanson.

Quincy's Dan Dorsey was a triple winner, all on first period pins. Bill Reid, Jim Tan and junior Ismail Aydugan were double winners for the Presidents. Freshman Chris Kerr picked up his first varsity pin in the loss to Marshfield.

Quincy hosted Randolph Tuesday night and then heads to the Division 1 South Sectionals to be held at Braintree High School Friday and Saturday. The top six wrestlers in each weight class will advance to the state tournament held at Springfield Cathedral next week.

JOSEPH SHADDUCK, (right) CLU, CHFC, president of Shadduck Financial Group, was recently recognized by the Curry College Athletic Department as the recipient of the O'Connor Football Alumnus of the Year Award. At an awards banquet, former New England Patriot Steve Nelson, Curry College's athletic director and head football coach, presented Shadduck with the award. "The award is given each year to an alum who has demonstrated the greatest amount of support to the college's football program," Nelson said. "Joe's continued dedication to Curry College has helped put the football program back on the winning track."

Raiders Pull Out Win Over Whalers

By CHARLES ROSS

The North Quincy High hockey team continues its assault on reaching the post season playoffs with a 6-5 win over New Bedford in a non-league game.

Senior captain Paul Markarian had a hat trick, his second of the season. Ryan Barrett had a pair of goals and freshman winger Joe Fitzpatrick had the other goal.

North Coach Bob Doyle and his team are fighting for every point, which will help get them to play in the post season. Every game at this point comes down to being like a playoff game to get a win or tie and qualify for the tournament.

RED RAIDERS NOTES: Senior captain Paul Markarian has been the leading scorer in the Old Colony League all season and is the eighth leading scorer in Eastern High School hockey.

Going into this week, Markarian had 18 goals and 27 assists for a 45-point total. He's averaging 2.75 goals a game on the season.

Presidents Bow To First-Place Clippers

Quincy knew it had a tough game on its hands as the Old Colony league leading Falmouth Clippers came to the Quincy Youth Arena last Wednesday to play the Presidents.

Falmouth was unbeaten in league play and remained so with a 5-2 win over Quincy.

Senior Joe Vallatini and senior defenseman Mike Sullivan were the goal scorers for Quincy in the game.

The loss put a crimp in Quincy's efforts to get enough points in regular season play in order to

North Golfers Honored For Academic Excellence

The 1998 North Quincy High School golf team, under the direction of coach Rick Hutchins, was recently awarded the Gold Award by the MIAA.

The award is presented to teams which athletes uphold a 3.0 to 4.0 grade point average.

As well as being excellent students, the team (7-7) qualified for states, with Mike Welch placing fourth. Welch was also named an Old Colony League All-Star and was awarded the League's Sportsmanship Award. Welch is also a Boston Globe and Boston Herald All-Scholastic.

Matt Yohe was also named to the Old Colony League All-Star team.

When asked about the team's performance last fall, Coach Hutchins said, "They (team) were very competitive. We have a very small program, compared to other teams in the league that have close to 100 athletes. We could have been 12-2, for we lost five games by only three to five points, which is not much in this sport."

Quincy Girls Win Overtime Thriller

BASKETBALL

The First Ladies of the Quincy High School girls' basketball team came up with a heartstopping win last Friday as they avenged an earlier season loss and defeated Plymouth South 62-54 in overtime at home.

Heather Schatzel poured in 13 second-half points to help key the win. Catlin Nichol had 14 points, 8 rebounds and 9 steals in the game for Quincy.

The game was tied at 50 at the end of regulation and the First Lady defense held the Panthers to only 4 points in OT while scoring 12.

Earlier this year, Quincy had lost to Plymouth South by 15 points. Coach Bob Noble was thrilled with the victory, the second for Quincy this year.

"The girls all played a great game and deserved this win. We end the season with BR and at North Quincy and I hope that we can put a string of victories together to end the season on a high note," said coach Noble.

North Quincy Girls Lose Heartbreaker

It was one of those games where you play well on offense by scoring 56 points, which in many cases is enough to win.

But when you turn the ball over 30 times in the game, chances are not good that you will come out a winner.

The North Quincy girls' basketball team came out on the short end of a 60-56 loss last Friday at Barnstable.

Junior Jill Nicholson had 28 points in the loss.

Lauren Sleeth and Kristin Bowes each added 9 points in the loss. Bowes also played well in other areas of the game with 8 assists, 14 rebounds and 9 steals.

Coach Doug MacFarlane called this "the worst game we played this year with the 30 turnovers." He knew that the great efforts of the girls in scoring and rebounding were wasted by the turnovers.

The Lady Red Raiders will close out the season with home games with Plymouth South (this past Tuesday) and Friday night against the First Ladies of Quincy.

"North would like to improve on their 5-11 seasons mark with a couple of wins to end the 1999 season."

Defense Difference In Shedevels' Victory

The St. Joseph Shedevels basketball team traveled to Needham and came from behind to defeat the first-place team 26-25.

Behind by 7 with five minutes to go, the Shedevels played a great full-court deny defense shutting the St. Joseph's Needham girls' team down. Katie Carew and Jennifer Skayne were awesome on defense.

On the other side of the court, Colleen Young led the scorers with 12 points. Jaclyn Brogna and Meghan Chagnon each added 7 points.

With this win, the Shedevels are in contention for post season play with a 6-2 league record. The Shedevels host St. Catherine's next Wednesday for their final home game of the season.

Raiders Come Up Short

By CHARLES ROSS

For coach Ted Stevenson and the North Quincy boys' basketball team last week saw them play two of the top Old Colony league teams and while giving it their all, coming up on the short end of both games.

On Tuesday, the Red Raiders dropped a 71-56 contest at Bridgewater-Raynham.

For North, Phil McGillicuddy had a good game and Frank McNamara did a great job

BOYS' BASKETBALL

defensively as he held B-R's Kyle Quimby, the leading scorer in the OCL with a 23 point per game average, to only 11 points.

Last Friday Barnstable came up from the Cape and dealt the Red Raiders a 75-64 loss. Matt McCann hit for 21 points in the game, Frank McNamara had 13 and Mike Keddy 10 points in the loss.

North come into the final week of the season at 3-15 with a game this past Tuesday night at Plymouth South and the finale of the year at home against Quincy who they defeated earlier this year.

Coach Stevenson said he would like to end the season strong. "These kids have played hard and deserve as many wins as possible," Stevenson said.

Quincy Boys Drop Pair

This was not a week that the Quincy High boys' basketball team will remember as the season winds down as they dropped two games over the week.

Last Tuesday, the Presidents came up short against the second place team in the Old Colony league Falmouth by a 59-50 score.

Junior Dan Kelley led the Presidents' attack with 10 points in the game.

Last Friday, Quincy saw Junior Dan Kelley put in a season high 31 points, but it was not enough as Quincy came up short against Plymouth South, 82-71.

Quincy is at 3-13 overall this season and would like to end the regular season on a high note. This Friday Quincy will travel to North Quincy to try and avenge a loss to the Red Raiders earlier this season.

By CHARLES ROSS

Freshmen Raiders Rise Once, Fall Twice

Two league losses sandwiched a non-league win for the North Quincy freshmen boys' basketball team in recent action. The young Raiders' record now stands at 9-9 for the season, 5-7 in Old Colony League play.

North Quincy never seemed to find the rhythm in its Tuesday visit to Bridgewater-Raynham.

Hoping to continue the pattern of avenging losses in the first meeting, North opened aggressively. John O'Connell and Adam O'Hara scored North's points out of the low post as the Raiders led 12-11 with less than six minutes played in the first half.

The Trojans repeatedly hurt the Raider defense with backdoor baseline cuts and offensive rebounding. B-Ran off 19 unanswered points to dominate the first half, 36-16. Full court pressure by the home team, forced 20 turnovers by North. That combined with 7/17 shooting from the free throw line was more than the Raiders could handle, as B-R rolled to a 56-41 victory.

Wayne Moynihan scored 8 points for the Raiders to go with O'Connell's 11 and O'Hara's 7. O'Hara also had 8 rebounds for the game. Sean Ginty's and Jackie Liuzzo's hustle were bright spots for North Quincy.

Closer than it should have been characterizes North Quincy's 59-57 victory over Archbishop Williams on Wednesday. Sean Ginty scored the first six Raider points as North Quincy grabbed the early lead. The home team Bishops kept the game close through much of the first half, until Dave Rochon's two free throws, two steals by Mark Maher and a John O'Connell block fueled an 8-2 run. North extended the lead to 12, 31-19 before finishing the first half up seven, 33-26.

Eight points by O'Connell and Maher pushed North out to a 15-point lead in the opening minutes of the second half. The Bishops wouldn't quit, however, and pulled back to within 10, 53-43 with six and half minutes remaining. James Hawko's lay-up off an inbound pass broke a 6-0 Archies run and it seemed North would cruise home until sloppy ball handling allowed the Bishops to pull within two with 12.7 seconds on the clock. North dodged a bullet as the home team saw a buzzer-beating three-pointer bounce off the rim.

Sean Ginty led Raider scores with 12 points in the 59-57 win. Steve Pizzi had 6 points. Maher, Hawko, Eric Stanton and Charlie Vidoli all scored four points for North. Quincy natives Mark Chella, Pat Duff and Tom Buckley worked hard, on both ends of the court, to keep the game close for Archbishop Williams.

In the first game, visiting Barnstable, North Quincy had come up three points short. Friday, with the home court advantage and a much improved defensive concept, the Raiders hoped to pay the visiting Red Raiders back. Not to be the case, as Barnstable opened fast and took the home team out of the game early. North couldn't stop the visitors as Barnstable rolled to a 36-20 half-time lead.

Bert Vivatyukan's five points were as good as it got for North in the first half. Twice within the second half, North pulled to win 12 but could come no closer. Leo Ahern's 3-point shot with 20 seconds remaining made the final 68-56, Barnstable. John O'Connell had 19 points for the Raider to go with Mike Haine's 10.

North Swim Team Bows To Middleboro

The North Quincy High School boys' swim team recently had an exciting meet against Middleboro High School.

The boys swam many great races. Unfortunately, North lost the meet by a final score, 54-82.

John Mercurio finished first in the 50 free-style. John was also part of a relay team that consisted of Devin O'Brien, Brendan Griffin and Pat McGovern that finished second in both the 200 medley relay and the 200 freestyle relay.

Another team that included Christian Oster, Dave Birmingham, Pat McGovern and Mike Mangano took first place in the 400 freestyle relay. The team looks forward to swimming in their league championships, the Pilgrim Conference, on Friday, Feb. 12, at the Lincoln-Hancock pool.

Quincy Sends 2 Runners To State Track Meet

The Massachusetts State Track Meet this Saturday will be held at the Reggie Lewis Center in Boston and two Quincy High track stars have qualified to participate.

Junior Russell Mullen, who runs the 600 meters, won 7 of 8 league meets this year. His best time was 1:27 this season.

Also representing Quincy at this Saturday's state meet will be John Sorenson, who will participate in the mile run.

To qualify for the state meet Mullen had to win the Old Colony League 600-meter run. He came away with the win and qualified, avenging the only loss that he suffered during the regular season.

Quincy High Track coach Scott King said he was pleased with the strong work effort that his junior team captain turned in all season.

"His workouts paid off as he is a great worker and a very dedicated athlete."

Mullen was also a member of the football team at Quincy and has been participating in the high jump competition during the winter meets.

North Girls Take Sixth In OCL Championship

North Quincy High School placed several athletes, but illness put several out of the running as the team could only muster sixth place in the Old Colony League championship track meet at the Reggie Lewis Center.

Natalie Caron, back only a day after the flu, failed to place in the 1000. She was one of the favorites.

"There was nothing we could do," said Coach Geoff Hennessy. "We did the best we could. We did manage to qualify several new athletes for the state meet so we have 10 kids going to states."

North's top performer was Kellyrose O'Brien with a second place finish in the 600 meters (time 1:43.03).

Other results:

Shot-put: Lisa DellaCroce 29'51/4" (6th place).

2-mile: Lynda Wilson 12:36.98 (3rd); Christine Marre 12:48.95 (4th); and Sarah Houghton 12:59.59 (6th).

4 x 400 Relay: Kellie Johnston, Colleen Lahar, Natalie Caron, O'Brien 4:26.99 6th.

North totaled 26 points in the competition.

The team will next compete in the Class A championships at the Reggie Lewis Center on Friday, Feb. 12. The following athletes will compete:

Kellie Johnston (55 meters), Colleen Lahar (300 meters), Kellyrose O'Brien and Genevieve O'Brien (600 meters), Natalie Caron (1000 meters), Linda Nguyen and Sarah Houghton (mile), and Lynda Wilson and Christine Marre (2 miles).

North will also compete in the 4 x 400 meter relay team with Johnston, Lahar, Caron and Kellyrose O'Brien. O'Brien, Wilson and the Relay all look to advance to the allstates on Feb. 20, also at the Reggie.

On Monday, Feb. 25 North competes in the MSTCA team pentathlon where each team enters one athlete in each of the five events normally used in the individual pentathlon. Entered for North are Charlene Cote (55 meter hurdles), Kellie Johnston (longjump), Samantha Chaisson (highjump), Lisa DellaCroce (shotput) and Kellyrose O'Brien (800 meters).

Squirt A Falcons Notch Two Wins

Quincy Youth Hockey Squirt A "Falcons" posted two victories in recent action, a 4-2 win over Hyde Park and a 6-2 victory over Belmont.

In a balanced attack the Falcons overpowered Hyde Park at Boston University's Walter Brown Arena. Glen Gibbons scored in the second period assisted by Jonathan Conso. Mike Giordani scored next with an assist from his brother, Matt and Mike MacPherson.

The Falcons kept up their attack and Craig Calley put one in the net with an assist from Mike McKeon. The final Quincy goal was scored by Brendan Mulcahy assisted by Matt Giordani.

Steve Bythrow was a big factor in keeping the Hyde Park attack off balance with his consistent backchecking.

The defense played a solid game controlling in front of their own net, and frustrating the attackers by clearing the puck out of the Quincy zone.

Matt Connors was outstanding in net for the Falcons, turning away shot after shot.

The Falcons swooped down on Belmont 6-2 combining offensive power and defensive intensity. Falcons scoring was started by Craig Calley in the first period. He was assisted by Mike MacPherson. Matt Giordani scored the only second period goal assisted by MacPherson.

The Falcons exploded in the third period with Steve Bythrow scoring, assisted by Mike McKeon. Glen Gibbons scored and another assist went to McKeon. McKeon was on fire, and scored the next two goals. The first was assisted by Glen Gibbons and Steve Bythrow, the second assisted by Dan Poggi.

The backchecking of the Quincy forwards, Conso, Rooney and Tobin was outstanding. The "blue liners" on defense, Pat Devlin, Paul Fasoli, Mike MacPherson and Dan Poggi all played a solid game.

The goaltending tandem of Matt Connors and Frankie Sorrento was strong throughout the game.

Education Extension Offering February Vacation Program

The Education Extension, a school age childcare program servicing Quincy children ages 5-12 (special needs up to age 16), is offering an all-day February vacation program.

The Education Extension Vacation Program operation hours are between 6:45 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. The program is closed Feb. 15, Presidents' Day.

Daily activities include physical education, arts and crafts, science, theatre and new games. In addition to its regular schedule, the program plans a field trip to the USS Salem, charades, Pictionary and basketball tournaments as well as a talent show, pajama party and bring your own banana Sundae party.

Program cost is $30 per day. The Education Extension accepts Community Care for Kids vouchers and offers discounts for families enrolling more than one child.

The program's philosophy fosters children's self-esteem, sportsmanship, creativity, cultural enrichment, socialization, decision-making skills and individual choice.

Quincy Kiwanis Sponsoring Youth Hockey Tournament

The Kiwanis Club of Quincy will sponsor its 26th annual Youth Hockey Tournament beginning Monday, Feb. 15 at the Quincy Youth Arena, 60 Murphy Memorial Dr. (off Sea St.)

The "A" tournament will feature 32 teams competing in four divisions: mites, pee wees, squirts and bantams. Teams from the South Shore, Connecticut, Rhode Island, Maine and California are scheduled to participate in the week-long tournament which will culminate with semi-final and championship rounds on Saturday and Sunday, Feb. 20 and 21. Quincy will field four teams in the competition, one in each division.

Other nearby communities with participating teams include Braintree, Weymouth, Canton, Walpole, South Boston and Dorchester.

The tournament serves as one of the major fundraisers for the Quincy Kiwanis Club which this year is celebrating its 75th anniversary. Since its inception the tournament has raised more than $206,000. Funds have been used to benefit underprivileged children as well as scholarships, camps, ships and the Kiwanis Pediatric Trauma Institute in Boston.

This year's tournament will also feature a prize drawing. Prizes include an autographed Boston Bruins stick, an autographed shirt and a weekend stay at the Braintree Sheraton.

And, for the second year in a row, a coaches' game will be held at the arena as part of the tournament. The coaches' game is scheduled for Friday, Feb. 19 at 7:50 p.m.

A program book with team rosters, photographs and a tournament schedule will be available at the door.

The tournament is a club-wide effort with many members assisting in one form or another. Kiwanians Michelle Stenberg and Tony Agnitti are serving as the tournament's co-chairmen.

PRESERVING THE PAST, workers from the National Park's Cultural Resource Center in Lowell are replacing the clapboards, windows frames and sashes at the John Quincy Adams birthplace on Franklin Street under a $60,000 contract to save it from the ravages of damp weather.

Mild Weather Allows Outside Restoration At Adams Birthplace

By MARILYN JACKSON

Winter's mild weather has allowed restoration work to begin at the John Quincy Adams birthplace on Franklin Street.

"It's helped tremendously," said Eugene Gabriel, the facility manager of the Adams National Park. "It's given us a jump on [necessary work] that has been lingering for quite a while."

"Rainstorms, heavy snows and cold just create an environment for deterioration," added Marianne Peak, the National Park Service superintendent in Quincy. "Fortunately, we were able to acquire funding for the project and are working with preservation specialists at the NPS Building and Conservation Center in Lowell."

Estimated cost of the work is $60,000, said Peak.

"I was getting quite nervous about" getting the work done, continued Gabriel. "And, having the building shrunk-wrapped like that in blue vinyl just didn't fit right with the neighborhood."

Because the Adamses' birthplaces are unheated, "they are victimized by weather and dampness. We continue to maintain the structure, ensuring it doesn't rot and deteriorate. And we keep a check on the windows, sills, beams and structure." The dirt cellar contributes to the moisture, she added.

Gabriel said the restoration project calls for replacing the clapboards in their original configuration as well as the frames, the window frames and sashes.

That means the restoration work at the John Quincy Adams birthplace will reflect its history. The oldest section of the saltbox is believed to have been constructed prior to the mid-1660s.

"Through research we learned that residents were taxed on the number of panes of glass," said Gabriel, and learned that the windows actually were 12 over 12. The previous windows were nine over six, he said.

The window replacements will reflect the earlier style, he said. "The John Quincy Adams birthplace seems to be most fragile," Peak said.

"It's the earlier one and needs some structural work," Gabriel said. "We'll have to go in and replace some of the front sills, and one of the pieces of the summer beam that cuts across the center of the house" needs to be replaced.

He said the work is expected to be completed within six weeks.

"One of the things we are looking at is that the buildings are not heated right now."

"Although these homes were not heated in colonial days, they did burn 15 to 20 cords of wood a year, so at that time, they did have a little different kind of climate control."

"We're looking for an innovative way to have some heat in the building without it being seen," said

Peak.

According to a National Park Service report, John Adams' father purchased this house in 1744, and John Adams, who had been born in an adjacent house, inherited the John Quincy Adams birthplace in 1761.

John Adams set up his law office in the southeast corner of the first floor, and moved into the house with his wife, Abigail Smith Adams, in 1764. John Quincy Adams was born in the northeast room in 1767, and 20 years later, John Adams moved away but retained ownership.

In 1803 John Quincy Adams purchased the property, which by then was part of a 91-acre farm. He and his wife, Louisa Catherine, used the birthplace as a summer home for about three years.

When the sixth President of the United States died in 1848, Charles Francis Adams inherited the property, and he leased the birthplace to tenants. When Charles Francis Adams died, the ownership of both birthplaces was transferred to the Adams Real Estate Trust and tenants leased this birthplace until 1896.

The Quincy Historical Society undertook restoration of the John Quincy Adams birthplace and used the home as its headquarters. The society did more work on the house in 1923. By 1940, the trust conveyed the birthplaces to the city of Quincy, and the historical society managed the John Quincy Adams birthplace, which was conveyed by the city to the National Park Service in 1979.

The exterior of the structure was restored between 1979 and 1982, and the interior was restored to reflect the time period of John Quincy Adams' occupancy.

Board Denies Tedeschi Beer-Wine License

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Amidst a crowd of opponents at City Hall speaking against the granting of a beer and wine license for Tedeschi's Food Shop in Squantum, the License Board Tuesday voted unanimously to deny the license.

The motion to deny was made by Police Chief Thomas Frane, who cited public safety and has "no public need or common good," and seconded by Health Commissioner Jane Gallahue, who called parts of Squantum a "haven for kids." She added the license is "not in the best interest of the community."

Answering the opponents who said owner Mark Shanahan, after appearing before the board last year and denied, promised he would not reapply. However, the owner told the board that the application of the license was "for survival."

He said with the recent closing of Dollar Saver Liquors on Quincy Shore Drive, that Charlie's Mini Mart near the area, who have a beer and wine license have recently expanded their space for the storing of more beer and wine.

The Dollar Saver Liquors closed in December to make way for a CVS chain which purchased the property for a pharmacy.

Shanahan told the board that because of that store's closing and the expansion of Charlie's Mini Mart, all of this will "take business away from me."

While the board listened to both sides of the issue, the bantering back and forth between Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers, a staunch opponent and Atty. Louis Cassis representing Shanahan seemed endless until Chairman Joseph Shea asked City Solicitor Steve McGrath to intervene. McGrath said all that was necessary was that Shanahan was receiving a fair hearing, and that all other requests to speak were up to Shea.

After hearing opponents speak of traffic, parking, youth drinking, Cassis reminded the board that other liquor licenses in the City of Quincy are on main roads, such as on Hancock St. Washington St., Newport Ave., and Southern Artery. He said "Squantum is not a dry city."

Cassis questioned whether Squantum is better than any other parts of the city, which are granted liquor licenses. He added it's the old cliché, "not in my backyard."

"We're special, we can go and buy our liquor someplace else."

Saying he was "victimized" by Ayers and the neighborhood meetings in which Ayers allowed opponents to speak, but when it came time for the proponents to speak, there was hissing and booing making it impossible for them to be heard. He said he felt he was "set up."

Although Cassis presented a petition with more than 380 names in favor, Ayers said he had about 300 opposing the license, C

Ayers read letters of opposition from Mayor James Sheets, Councillors at Large Paul Harold, Tim Cahill, Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson, the pastor of Star of the Sea Church, and Eileen Feeney, principal of North Quincy High School.

Also speaking in opposition was John "Butch" Mahoney, former social and health coordinator for the Quincy Public Schools who said 85 percent of crimes are caused by alcohol and drug related problems.

Although opponents stressed that Squantum is a "pristine" place to live, they nonetheless acknowledged that there has always been an element of "kids hanging out in different areas including Squaw Rock."

Commenting that "we're not at our quota" for giving out beer and wine license in the city, chairman Joseph Shea said the owner may appeal to the Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission which will review it in a timely fashion.

Just before the meeting began, Shea announced that all License Board meetings will be televised.

The License Board will meet Feb. 16.

Mild Winter Triggers City Building Boom

(Cont'd from page 1)

Koch, executive director of city's park department.

"There has been no frost in the ground, and except for a week here and there, there has been little snow," he said.

As a result, the DelPrete Company of Rockland, hired last fall to plant 600 trees throughout the city, has planted about half of them. Koch noted that this was the biggest tree purchasing contract; the previous year the city bought 425 trees, he said.

"We are replacing some trees that had been removed and others are going in where needed," Koch said. "Some requests come from the general public or from a city councillor or from planning."

Most of the trees are Norwegian maple, green ash or Cleveland pears.

He said the Norwegian Shantung hybrid is a cross between a Norway maple and a sugar maple, with not as broad a leaf but with terrific fall color.

The green patmore ash, evident along Furnace Parkway near the Southeast Expressway, is noted for its tight crown and global shape with long pointy leaves that turn yellow. The Cleveland pear is a flowering tree which does not bear fruit.

All of these trees are salt-tolerant and fare well in an urban environment, he said. Koch said with the mild winter, the department is getting a lot of its regular tree trimming and removal work done now too. At Merrymount Park, crews have been clearing away underbrush and brambles and opening up trails in the park. At the 52-acre Faxon Park, the workers are clearing away underbrush, and at the Mountclair Bog along Hobart Street, which is mostly wetland, the men have been removing fallen trees. He said the city at one time maintained a tree nursery there.

"In the good weather, we don't have time to do this work," Koch said. Instead, the crews are marking fields and cutting grass.

"There's always something to do, but if there was two feet of snow, we wouldn't be able to do this work, and we never catch up on tree maintenance," he added.

Despite the mild winter, Public Works Commissioner David Colton said the city probably has spent about $400,000 for sanding and salting and snow removal.

Most of the $300,000 in the snow removal budget is used to buy salt and sand, he said.

"We've had to go out salt and sand a couple of times, like last Saturday which was a little bit icy," he said. By the next day, however, the ice had melted and the ground was bare again.

SCOTT DEWARE

*A Thought
For The Week*

Abraham Lincoln delivered his Gettysburg Address Nov. 19, 1863. Lesser known is the article below which he enjoins love of liberty and reverence of the nation's laws.

Let every American, every lover of liberty, every well-wisher to his posterity, swear by the blood of the Revolution, never to violate in the least particular, the laws of the country, and never tolerate their violation by others. As the patriots of '76 did to the support of the Declaration of Independence, so to the support of the Constitution and laws let every American pledge his life, his property and his sacred honor. Let every man remember that to violate the law is to trample on the blood of his father, and to tear the charter of his children's liberty.

Let reverence for the laws be breathed by every American mother to the lisping babe that prattles on her lap. Let it be taught in the schools, in seminaries and in colleges. Let it be written in primers, spelling-books and in almanacs. Let it be preached from the pulpit, proclaimed in legislative halls, and be enforced in courts of justice; and in short, let it become the political religion of the nation. And let the old and the young, the rich and the poor, the grave and the gay of all sexes and tongues and colors and conditions, sacrifice unceasingly upon its altars.

Your Social Security

Employers' Info On Internet

By LAURIE ZASTROW

Employers often find it difficult to answer their employees' questions about Social Security. That job just got easier. A special kit of information, Social Security: What Employers and Employees Need to Know, is now available on Social Security's Internet website at <http://www.ssa.gov/employers>.

The information, which is intended to help both employers and employees understand Social Security and its benefits, can be printed from the website in text and graphics or text-only format. The informational material is divided into two sections—one for employers and one for employees—and consists of 11 one or two-page factsheets on specific subjects.

One factsheet gives employers tips on correctly reporting employees' names and earnings so they get Social Security credit for their earnings. Another factsheet explains to employers how they are providing a valuable employee benefit by matching employees' Social Security taxes. And still another factsheet reminds employees that Social Security is more than retirement and provides information on Social Security's valuable disability and survivors insurance protection.

Employers are encouraged to reproduce any and all of the material and distribute it to their employees. The material also can be used in a company publication or posted on worksite bulletin boards. Employers that don't have access to the Internet can call 1-800-772-1213 to order a single copy of this information kit.

(Laurie Zastrow is Social Security manager in Quincy.)

Your Horoscope

by Natasha

ARIES (March 20 to April 19) You'll be making some new acquaintances this week. A party may materialize out of the blue. One tie is either un dependable or somewhat temperamental. Still, the accent is on fun.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) This is a time of important new insights for you, yet you may feel somewhat ambivalent about some immediate tasks which require your close attention.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You just don't want to be tied down now. Still, you must find a way to do your own thing without upsetting the lives and schedules of those around you.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) There's a chance you'll come up with new chances to increase income, but at the same time, there's a likelihood of extra expenses. Some shop for electronic gadgetry.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) This is a time of scintillating thought and new plans. However, it's not the best time for getting these ideas across to others. A better course is to bide your time.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Unexpected company could drop by this week or something may disrupt your usual routine at home. It's not the best time to make things happen for you in your career.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) An impromptu entertainment or a chance encounter thrills you this week. However, remember your other commitments. Don't let people down or keep them waiting.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) It seems if obstacles crop up that interfere with the completion of one project, your best bet is to tackle something else. It's still a time of accomplishment.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Keep a flexible schedule now. A close tie is liable to do the unexpected or in a freedom-loving mood. Know how to keep yourself constructively occupied.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) It seems the accent should be on saving now rather than spending. However, despite your good intentions, there may be some unexpected expenditures which crop up.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Those who travel may meet with the unexpected. Give yourself enough time to get where you're going. Listen to your own heart and don't solicit so much outside opinion.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Unexpected developments in business may necessitate a change in other plans for now. Try, though, to give as much attention possible to the needs of family.

Good News And Bad For City Water, Sewer Users

The Massachusetts Water Resources Authority advisory board has begun deliberating a proposed $437.6 million budget for fiscal year 2000, just as the Department of Revenue announced distribution of more than $52 million for water and sewer rate relief for the current year.

Quincy's share from the Commonwealth Sewer Rate Relief Fund totals $1,895,672, according to state Rep. Ron Mariano, vice chairman of the legislature's MWRA Legislative Caucus. This year's funding represents a 6.6 percent increase from last year's grant.

"As we continue to provide water and sewer rate relief, securing direct state assistance will be critical to this cause," Mariano said. "I am pleased to see the fruits of our labor pay dividends for homeowners and businesses within the MWRA district."

He said the caucus is seeking $53.914 million in rate relief for the fiscal year 2000.

The fund was created six years ago to help combat rising water and sewer rates which were a result of the nearly $4 billion Boston Harbor cleanup project.

"Skyrocketing water and sewer rates not only impede on Quincy's economic development but also place an excessive burden on its homeowners," Mariano continued. "Exploring every and all possible ways of providing water and sewer rate relief will always be one of my top priorities."

The new MWRA budget projects a 7.3 percent increase in annual water and sewer charges, according to Barbara Gottschalk, MWRA chief financial officer, but for Quincy, the assessments are expected to increase overall by 9 percent.

At this time the MWRA assessment for wastewater treatment for Quincy is projected to be $12,451,774, a 17.6 percent increase from this year while the assessment for water is projected to total $3,998,189, a 6.5 percent increase.

But the advisory board is likely to pare down the budget during deliberations in the coming months, MWRA executive director Douglas MacDonald said.

"This is the seventh annual budget I have recommended...and probably the toughest. The projects we have been required to build are now hitting full construction on the drinking water side of the system as well as continuing on the wastewater system."

"Everyone is pleased to see a cleaner Boston Harbor and vastly improved drinking water quality, but ratepayers bear new construction costs as well as the added expense of operating and maintaining new facilities," MacDonald said.

Almost half of the proposed budget — $257 million — is for principal and interest on the short- and long-term bonds the MWRA has issued to finance construction of facilities required to comply with federal environmental laws as well as to make necessary repairs and improvements to regional water and sewer systems.

Last year Quincy's assessments were $3,400,913 for water and $11,694,771 for sewer services.

LICENSE BOARD BRIEFS

The License Board took the following action at Tuesday's meeting.

• Granted a one day liquor license to Sacred Heart Parish, 386 Hancock St. to use at their annual dance April 10 from 7:30 p.m. to midnight.

• Granted a common victualer license to Waleed Al-Shurafa, owner of Lil Peach, 495 Washington St.

• Granted permission to Sicard Corp., doing business as Richard's Wine & Liquors, 301

Quincy Ave. to pledge their liquor license to Richard's Wines & Liquors, Inc. New Owners are Richard Sicard and Joseph Lombardi.

• Continued a hearing from Roma Cafe, 405 Hancock St. for a common victualer and Lord's Day license pending a neighborhood meeting. It was the former Bean Routine.

• Allowed a change of club managers from Quincy Yacht Club, 1310 Sea St., from James Ryan to Francis Bertoni.

• Granted a Motor II

License to Robert S. Abraham, owner of Bob's Automotive Service, 52 Hilda St., pending approval from the Zoning Board of Appeals.

• Continued a hearing from Wheelhouse Diner, 453 Hancock St. to remain open 24 hours a day Friday and Saturday. Chairman Joseph Shea said the request might be cancelled or postponed.

Special Team Focusing On Smelt Population

Recommendations from marine fishery experts and environmentalists for smelt restoration and preservation have been incorporated into the plans for the Town Brook Flood Control and Braintree Dam Projects.

As a result of those recommendations, Quincy Public Works Commissioner David A. Colton, authorized Quincy's participation in hosting a Smelt Preservation Team, in an effort to help restore and encourage smelt spawning.

The team, established in late fall of 1998, has representatives from the Quincy Department of Public Works, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, the MDC and fisheries experts from the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and the federal government. The team has the full support of the city council, including Councillor Stephen Durkin who has worked closely with the area residents.

The team is in part responsible for ensuring smelt spawning by monitoring Town Brook for debris and flow management. As a result of the first on-site meeting, numerous items of debris and small trees were removed from Town Brook. In an effort to help with flow levels in Town Brook, work has been done at the Centre Street conduit and further improvements are scheduled at the site during the first week in February. According to state officials, the creation of the team is an important step to ensure preservation of the smelt population and the completion of the Town Brook Flood Control Project.

Cocoa House Saturday At Union Congregational

On Saturday, Feb. 13, Union Congregational Church, 136 Rawson Rd., Wollaston, will present its fourth edition of Captain Jack's Cocoa House.

The program, featuring Bible Stories, crafts and music, is held at Union Congregational Church monthly from 9 a.m. to 12 p.m., and aims to provide area children with a fun Saturday morning alternative to sleeping in and watching television.

Each month features a different Bible theme and application.

Union's Captain Jack, also known as Rev. John Swanson, Pastor, along with his crew "Colorado Mountain Martha", also known as Rev. Martha Swanson, "Alley Cat Alice", also known as Ms. Alice Libby, "Cocoa King" Rev. John Adams, and others developed the program as an outgrowth of the Interchurch Council Vacation Bible School.

The program is not limited to Protestant children and attracted a broad mix of children from the community and beyond at its January meeting where Michelle Lydon of St. Ann's Parish led crafts and Marjorie and Lisa DiSalvio of Randolph Congregational Church provided snacks.

For more information on Captain Jack's Cocoa House, call the Captain or the church office at 479-6661.

McCauley Wants 2-Year Limit On Council President

Councillor-at-large Francis X. McCauley has introduced a rules change which would restore the two consecutive years' limitation for the office of council president.

Two years ago the rule was changed to allow for two two-year terms for council president.

The present rule is not in accordance with the statute which requires that the council president be elected annually, said McCauley.

The two-year limitation would provide "the opportunity for more councillors to wield the president's gavel," he said.

Marguerite Barry Nominee For Sun 'Citizen of the Year Award'

The name of Marguerite Barry, of Larry Place, was among the nominees for the Quincy Sun "Citizen of the Year Award."

Her name was inadvertently omitted from the list of nominees published in the Sun Jan. 28.

She was nominated by a neighbor, Mary Jo Dion, who said she was devoted to the neighborhood and was like an adopted mother to all the neighbors.

Quincy businessman and civic leader Bob Curry was selected as the recipient of the Citizen of the Year Award for 1998.

City Council Briefs

The City Council took the following action last week:

• Accepted a new state law which grants cost-of-living adjustments to non-contributory retirees.

Auditor Robert Foy said approximately 50 individuals were affected and totaled approximately $12,000. Previous state legislation had overlooked this group of individuals, he said.

• Rescinded a sum of $16,882 from a bond issued jointly with the state for a $1.1 million construction project to abate pollution in North Quincy. The council had authorized $300,000 as its share of the work in August 1997, but the bond was not sold until last December. Council action cleared the city's books, said Foy.

• Approved parking restrictions requested by Councillor Stephen Durkin. One was for no parking on both sides of Presidents Lane in front of No. 6 and No. 14 Presidents Lane. The other was for a two-hour limit on the east side of City Street from Wentworth Avenue for 100 feet south.

• Agreed to install a stop sign on West Elm Avenue at Stanton Street.

• Asked that a handicapped parking sign in front of Sacred Heart Church be returned, now that partial construction of the sidewalks there has been completed.

• Noted that a portable handicapped access ramp is available for public meetings. Presently, the ramp is set up at the United First Parish Church and was in operation in time for First Night, according to Councillor Bruce Ayers.

At a previous council meeting, the councillors took the following action:

• Appropriated $30,000 from free cash to apply to the fire department's capital outlay for air tanks.

• Authorized Boston Gas to install a gas main tie-in on Broad Street for a new customer and Eastern Nazarene College to string fiber optic cable between East Elm Avenue and its satellite campus on Old Colony Avenue.

Michael Morris Deputy Director Of County Community Corrections

program.

Prior to becoming a Field Officer for the state, Morris worked as a Corrections Officer at the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office. Morris also worked with juvenile offenders at the Old Colony YMCA Boy's Shelter.

With this background, Morris has worked with every kind of inmate - from state to juvenile defender - in his career of corrections. Bellotti said that this kind of experience would prove invaluable in the burgeoning field of community corrections.

"Mike Morris has the kind of hands-on experience that you look for in this kind of position," Bellotti said. "His background and expertise will help us move forward in the right direction in community corrections."

Morris will work closely with Rich Power, director of Community Corrections. The department manages the Alternative Centers in Dedham and Braintree as well as the new Community Corrections Center in Quincy, which will open late this year. The program also administers the community service and work release programs as well as the bracelet program.

"I'm looking forward to working with Rich and the Sheriff in making our Community Corrections department not only a model for the state but for the country," Morris said.

Morris, a lifelong Quincy resident, is a graduate of Fitchburg State College and Boston College High School. He is currently a candidate for a master's degree in public administration at Suffolk University in Boston.

Preschool Screening For Children With Special Needs

Consistent with the Special Education Act, Chapter 766, the Quincy Public Schools will conduct a screening for three and four year-old children in order to identify those children who have a substantial special need.

If possible, parents are requested to bring a copy of the most recent physical examination and any other information relevant to determining whether their child has a special educational need. If necessary, children will participate in a follow-up TEAM evaluation.

Parents who wish to participate with their child in the screening should call:

Mrs. Kathleen Bakis, Preschool Team Chairperson, Snug Harbor Community School, 333 Palmer St., Quincy, MA 02169. Preschool telephone number: 617-984-8951.

INVITATION TO BID

CITY OF QUINCY, MASSACHUSETTS DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC WORKS

INVITATION TO BID

The Department of Public Works for the City of Quincy, Massachusetts will receive sealed bids for NORTH QUINCY BUSINESS DISTRICT IMPROVEMENTS: PHASE II - CIVIL WORKS until 10:00 AM local time on Thursday, March 4, 1999, at the offices of the Commissioner of Public Works, 55 Sea Street, Quincy, MA 02169, at which time and place all bids will be publicly opened and read aloud.

The work under this contract consists of selective cold planing the existing pavement along Hancock Street, between Billings Road and East Squantum Street, installation of new pavement, brick feature strip, adjustment of utility appurtenances, storm drainage, installation of trees and minor landscaping, installation of decorative traffic signal and pedestrian signal poles and wire loop detectors; installation of street signage and pavement markings.

All work shall be performed in accordance with the Massachusetts Highway Department's Standard Specifications for Highways and Bridges (1988 edition) and Construction Standards (1977 edition), all as last revised, unless specified or directed otherwise.

All work under this contract shall be completed in 90 calendar days.

A non-refundable fee of $75.00 by company or certified check (or money order) is required for each set of Contract Documents. Bidders requesting Contract Documents by mail shall pay an additional non-refundable amount of $15.00 per set to cover shipping and handling costs. All checks shall be made payable to the City of Quincy. The Contract Documents may be obtained during the business hours from 8:00 AM to 3:30 PM at the Offices of the Commissioner of Public Works, Engineering Division, 55 Sea Street, Quincy, MA 02169 on or after February 10, 1999.

Each bid shall be accompanied by a bid security in the amount of five percent (5%) of the total value of the bid in the form described in the Instructions to Bidders. The Successful Bidder shall be required to furnish a one hundred percent (100%) Construction Performance Bond and a one hundred percent (100%) Payment and Materials Bond from a surety company acceptable to the City. The bidding and award of this contract shall be in full compliance with Massachusetts General Law, Chapter 30, Section 39M, as last revised.

No bidder may withdraw the bid within 60 calendar days after the actual date of the opening of the bids.

All Federal/State and City of Quincy regulations in relation to Minimum Wage Rates, Minority Business Enterprise, Women Business Enterprise, Minority Work Force, Equal Employment Opportunity and Employment of Quincy Residents must be complied with.

The project goals in these areas shall be as given below:

1. The Contractor shall maintain on the project a not less than ten percent (10%) ratio of minority employee hours to total hours in each job category.
2. A minimum of ten percent (10%) MBE participation and five percent (5%) WBE participation by state-certified MBEs and WBEs will be required and maintained on this project. The bidder shall submit completed MBE/WBE forms with the bid.
3. Compliance with the City of Quincy's Ordinance No. 532 requiring Contractors working on City-supported construction projects to hire a certain percentage of Quincy Residents is mandatory.
4. The Contractor shall pay state minimum wage rates, as mandated by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts Department of Labor and Industries, Issued in the most current "Wage Decisions." A copy of wage rates is included in the project manual.
5. The Contractor shall comply with City Ordinance Chapter 12.28 and City Council Order No. 97-102 with regard to apprenticeship training. No contractor shall be awarded this contract unless he has a bona fide apprenticeship training program in place. A copy of the Council Order is included in the project manual for reference.

Failure to comply with these requirements may render the bid non-responsive, and thus ineligible for further consideration. No waiver for any portion of these provisions will be granted. The City reserves the right to waive an informality in or to reject any or all bids if deemed in the best interest of the city. The City does not condone submission of unbalanced bids. Such bids may be summarily rejected.

Freemasons Offer Child Identification Program Monday

Massachusetts Freemasons will conduct the most thorough and comprehensive child identification program in the world Monday at the Quincy Masonic Building, 1170 Hancock St., from 9a.m. to 3p.m.

Local Masons will conduct the program where children will be videotaped, fingerprinted, and have a toothprint impression taken.

The toothprint impression is a relatively new means of identification, developed as an additive safety to fingerprint identification. Children are asked to bite down on a wafer, making a permanent, archivable record of their teeth.

All materials, including the child's videotaped interview, fingerprints, and toothprints are given to parents. No copies will be kept on file by the Masons or the Police Department.

To date, more than 30,000 children have participated in Child Identification Programs sponsored by Freemasons.

In the event of a major storm, the program will be rescheduled to Saturday, Feb. 20.

'Talking, Listening' Series For Parents At Hospital

Quincy Hospital invites parents to "When You're Tired of Yelling: Talking, Listening and Problem Solving in the Family," a four part Family first series on Thursdays, April 8, 15, 29 and May 6.

The program will be held from 7:30:30 to 9 p.m. at the hospital, 114 Whitwell St. in Conference Room D. Cost is $100 for the entire series.

The series, created by child development specialist at Wheelock College, will help parents learn better ways to say what they mean, hear the real messages of their children and other loved ones, and resolve conflicts constructively.

Advance registration is required. To register, call Families First at (617) 868-7687.

three at Quincy High School and two at North Quincy.

He will deal with drugs, drinking, smoking, and behavior problems.

He will oversee that there is proper supervision and security at athletic games, dances, and other school events.

McPhee will also supervise security and safety on school buses that take students to schools and athletes to games.

"There's a lot to it," said Creedon. "Ken will be busy."

McPhee has been in the Quincy public school system 28 years. Eighteen of those years were as head coach, and 10 as assistant. He has been Dean of Discipline.

From 1972 to 1980 he was a physical education teacher in the middle schools.

McPhee's most outstanding year as coach was 1992 when North had a perfect 10-0 regular season record and climaxed that with a 14-9 win over Arlington in the Super Bowl for the Division 1B championship.

City Gives Open Space High Priority

By MARILYN JACKSON

When the land off Quarry Street was in tax title more than two years ago, the city thought it would acquire one of the largest pieces of undeveloped land for open space.

In fact, the city had filed an application with the state Department of Environmental Management and had secured a $100,000 grant to acquire the 20 acres, once known as North Commons, said Thomas

Koch, executive director of the park, forestry and cemetery department.

At that time, the land was assessed at $1.8 million, and the city had received a couple of appraisals which set the value of the land at less than $1 million, he said.

The land had just gone into tax title owing $700,000, he said.

"We honestly thought the park department would end up with the property, especially considering the history of the property and the number of attempts to develop the property that had failed.

"But $100,000 was not a lot of money," he continued. "We had asked for $500,000."

Then, Congress Group Ventures bought the property for more than $7 million, Koch said.

"No permit has been issued yet," Koch said, "and if it doesn't happen, we'll

Must Find $70,000

Funds Badly Needed To Keep First Parish Open To Tourists

By MARILYN JACKSON

One of Quincy's most revered historic sites won't be able to open for tourists on Patriot's Day unless the community comes up with some funds.

"We're in dire straits," the Rev. Sheldon Bennett, minister of the United First Parish Church, Unitarian, said this week as dozens of folks paraded through the church on Presidents' Day.

He estimates that the church needs $70,000 for this year and next just to run the visitors' program between April 19 and Nov. 10. Although the National Park Service provides a guide for the facility seven days a week during the season, additional costs such as providing building security and staffing, lighting and heat take a wallop out of the church's budget.

In addition, the church is facing extraordinary costs in repairing the wooden roof trusses which support the slate roof and the stunning interior plaster dome ceiling.

Those costs are expected to total some $620,000, said Bennett.

To date, the Massachusetts Historical Society, through its Massachusetts Preservation Projects Fund, has provided $235,000 in matching grants to replace the roof, copper gutters and downspouts and shore up the trusses with specially fabricated steel supports.

Bennett said he expected a contract for the steel fabrication to be awarded at the end of the month and a general contractor chosen shortly afterward.

The church parishioners, who number 179, have pledged $50,000, and the church has secured a $350,000 line of credit from Citizens Bank so that the emergency repairs could begin immediately. Scaffolding and a steel deck 17 feet above the floor have been installed, in preparation of the work.

The church to date has spent close to $70,000 for the temporary emergency shoring and $20,000 for related engineering work and now is paying an $8,000-a-month rental fee for the scaffolding.

In an effort to meet these extraordinary financial needs, the church will announce within the next few weeks the creation of the Church of the Presidents Fund.

As a tax-exempt, non-profit entity, the fund will be used not only to help pay

Presidents Day 'Poll'

'Lincoln,' 'Roosevelt' And Bill Clinton

Quincy's third annual celebration of the Presidents Day winter festival was not without some serious reflection.

As part of the activities, a man portraying Abraham Lincoln read the Gettysburg Address who was followed by a President Theodore Roosevelt who detailed his life in the White House.

Asked about what they thought about the presidency today, each was thoughtful.

"In some ways, what's happening is appropriate. The office is diminishing, but the manner in which it is being diminished is offensive," said Mark Leighton who, dressed in a gray morning coat, black pants and a top hat and a fake beard, was playing the role of the 16th President for fun.

"I'm indulging myself," he said. Leighton, artistic director for First Night, is also a classical guitarist and instructor at

Sal Giarratani Won't Run For Ward 6 Seat

Sal Giarratani has decided not to seek the Ward 6 City Council seat.

Giarratani, 50, said he was "tempted to run" since vacancies in ward seats happen so rarely but at this time in his life he did not wish to run for the seat to be vacated by Bruce Ayers, now a state representative.

Giarratani, who ran for school committee in 1995 said "the idea of running again for public office crossed my mind. Many people told me they like my common sense approach to politics and my sense of humor."

Giarratani is a police

SAL GIARRATANI
sergeant for the state Department of Mental Health in the Metro Boston Area. He serves on the board of directors of the Atlantic Neighborhood Association and is a political journalist for a number of Greater Boston weekly newspapers. Two years ago, he was the host of a political talkshow on a community radio station in Allston.

Giarratani said, "I close the door on public office this year. Hopefully, the door will open again in the future, but as for now, this decision is the right decision for me."

Giarratani said he will remain active in the community. "There are too many issues out there needing to be addressed. I will continue my active involvement in Quincy and Ward 6."

South Shore Cooperative Plans South Quincy Branch

South Shore Cooperative Bank, founded in 1890, has plans to move into Quincy on Franklin Street.

It would be the bank's first branch; its headquarters are located at 195 Washington St., Weymouth Landing.

"Our bank is growing," said bank president and CEO John J. O'Brien Jr.

"We have existing customers in Quincy, the city is growing, and it is a vibrant place to do business."

"We have a lot of opportunity to provide service there, and there are lots of people for whom we can provide those services,"

O'Brien said.

The bank has $74 million in assets, he added.

Representatives of the bank will appear before the zoning board of appeals March 2 to obtain approval to raze the existing building at 28-34 Franklin St., South Quincy, opposite De-laney's Pub, and construct a new building. According to the bank's application, the building would be about 64 feet by 45 feet.

At 70 Quincy Ave., the Massachusetts Cooperative Bank is building a new branch, and the Quincy Municipal Credit Union has plans to move into the Shaw's Supermarket building at 100 Quincy Ave. when the store vacates the premises and renovations are completed.

All this economic activity prompted Councillor-at-Large Francis X. McCauley at a recent council meeting to quip that this section of Quincy "will rival Zurich, Switzerland, as the banking capital of the world."

Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymond will hold a community meeting about the bank's proposal at 7 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 25, at the Roche Bros. Supermarket's community room.

Gillon Speaker At Concourse Meeting Feb. 25

The Citizen's Advisory Committee (CAC) for the Quincy Center Concourse will meet Feb. 25 in the second floor conference room, City Hall annex, 1305 Hancock St.

Speaker will be John Gillon, director of traffic and parking for Quincy. All CAC meetings are open to the public.

The CAC is now in its sixth year in planning and making recommendations for the proposed roadway linking Burgin Parkway with McGrath Highway and the Southern Artery.

Phase one, the bridge over the MBTA and commuter rail tracks, has been put out for bids,

QHA Director Urges Improved Housing Cooperation

Quincy Housing Authority Director Jack Mather urged Quincy residents to work together as a community for new and improved housing during a recent appearance at Beechwood on the Bay.

Meeting with seniors throughout the city, Mather reviewed how government has responded to various housing needs throughout American history.

In post World War II, he explained, there was a real need to provide affordable and comfortable housing for American veterans. Then, in the 1960s Americans waged the war on poverty.

"It was a spiritual awakening," Mather said. "We realized that Constitutional rights and the nation's wealth were designed to be enjoyed by all, not just the privileged."

Later, housing for seniors became a focus and in 1973, housing for the disabled.

"Neighborhood" is a key theme for Mather. "My grandfather taught me a great deal about the values of neighborhood and community," he said. "He lost his store during the Depression because he tried to assist his neighbors. They weren't just customers—they were his neighbors."

"When people feel an identity with those with whom they live and have a sense of pride and commitment, then they are more likely to do all they can to ensure safety, security and quality of life for themselves and those around them," he said.

Quincy Housing Authority is currently focusing on Germantown, where Mather expects to work on additional housing for mixed income persons and new ways of generating revenue for the QHA.

"A major focus of the Quincy Housing Authority is freedom of choice," Mather said. "When people are given choices—such as affordable home ownership—then other goals are more easily attained: independence, productivity/employment, commitment to community."

"When the tide rises, every boat floats," quoted visionary Mather.

If all goes as Mather plans, Quincy residents may soon be seeing a "higher tide."

GOT MILK? OR HAS IT GOT YOU?

Infrequently, a baby is born without the ability to make lactase, the enzyme that digests the milk sugar, lactose, but most often it is later in life that lactose intolerance becomes a problem.

Usually this deficiency manifests itself by causing discomfort (bloating, flatulence, and diarrhea) after eating milk products. If you suspect this problem, your physician can perform a lactose tolerance test, which involves fasting and then drinking a liquid containing lactose. Blood samples are then drawn at intervals to measure your blood glucose levels. If the glucose level doesn't rise, it is indicative of a deficiency in lactase. Depending on the severity of intolerance, treatment involves avoiding or reducing intake of milk and milk by-products.

Sometimes this problem can show up in children, and it is not always easily diagnosed. An established connection with a primary care physician means that you have someone to call on with such questions. At AFFILIATED MEDICAL GROUPS, located at 700 Congress St., Quincy, we listen to your concerns. We are affiliated with Quincy and South Shore Hospitals. Please call us at 617-472-2500; office hours by appointment.

P.S. Thirty to fifty million Americans are lactose intolerant. Interestingly, this condition is known to be more prevalent among certain ethnic groups than others.

Amelia's Restaurant Sold

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

After 14 years as owner of Amelia's at Marina Bay, Richard Barrett has sold the popular restaurant.

The License Board at Tuesday's meeting granted the transfer of the common victualer-all alcoholic and cabaret licence held by Barrett to Carmello Locurto, Joseph Pizzaferrri and Philip Napolitano.

Restaurant manager Greg Soutter will remain in the same position.

License Board Chairman Joseph Shea lauded the Barrett family for their many years at Marina Bay while Barrett said it was a "pleasure to do business in the city."

Det. Lt. Robert M. Perchard, liquor inspector and License Board Agent said Amelia's had a "great record" with no problems through the years.

Barrett was also former owner of the old tent at Marina Bay and the Edmund Fitzgerald ship where patrons could enjoy lunch or dinner on the water.

He is present owner of Barrett's on Boston Harbor and the Abington Ale House in Abington.

Barrett said he is also in the process of opening a new restaurant on Route 1 in Foxboro.

When asked why he sold Amelia's Barrett said the three men approached him with the proposal to purchase it, and said "it took us about 20 minutes to make up our mind."

According to Locurto, the name will not be changed, but he wasn't sure about the menu.

The transfer will go to the Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission. (ABCC) for approval.

Last Pharmacy Liquor License Cancelled by Board

After more than 40 years, the last all alcoholic license held by a pharmacy was cancelled at Tuesday's License Board meeting.

Samoset Pharmacy, 215 Samoset Ave. in Merry-mount was purchased last year by CVS and officially opened last summer.

According to chairman

Joseph Shea, former owner Norman I. Nisenbaum, who stayed with CVS until the fall, had a year to try to sell or transfer the license, and failed to renew the license last month.

Shea said no other pharmacy wanted it as it had to remain as a pharmacy license.

Shea told the board that Nisenbaum was out of town, but that he had written him a letter saluting him for his years in Quincy. Shea called him a "great guy, a fixture in Merrymount for 40 years."

Human Rights Commission Meeting Feb. 23

The Quincy Human Rights Commission will meet Tuesday, Feb. 23 at 5 p.m. in the second floor conference room, City Hall.

All are invited and welcome to attend. Items on the agenda include: An evaluation of the Martin Luther King, Jr.

breakfast, goals for the year, conference of commissions and a report from Jonathan Yip, Equal Opportunity Officer.

Quincy Public Schools Preschool Screenings

Quincy Public Schools will hold screenings for openings in the following preschool programs during March:

Title One Integrated Programs:

- Della Chiesa Early Childhood Center, 984-8777.

- Snug Harbor Community School, 984-8951.

- Clifford Marshall Elementary School, 984-8721.

For the above programs children must reside in these districts to be eligible.

Preschool and Extended

Day Care programs:

- Wollaston Elementary School, 984-8605.

- Parker Elementary School, 984-8710.

- City-Wide Preschool Lottery:

- Snug Harbor Community School, 984-8951.

Children must turn three or four years old by December, 1999. To have a child screened for a program parents must call no later than March 17, 1999.

SPONGY BRAKES

If a vehicle's brake pedal feels spongy, and if the brake pedal gets substantially higher after repeated pumping, it is likely that there is air in the hydraulic system. To remove the air, the system must be bled. On rarer occasions, a spongy brake pedal may be caused by brake fluid vapor lock, a condition that occurs when there is localized boiling of the brake fluid. This can result from continued forceful braking, combined with moisture in the brake fluid. Moisture, which can lower the boiling point of brake fluid, eventually may make its way into the system because brake fluid is hygroscopic (it attracts and absorbs water). When it does, the brake fluid must be replaced. Don't hesitate to ask any questions about your brakes or anything else related to your car when you bring it into LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO for servicing. We have modern test equipment, the right parts and the best ASE Certified service technicians available in the area. We also use the AllData CD-ROM based system for the very latest in maintenance and service bulletins for all makes of cars. Let's get acquainted at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (781-843-1550). Sunoco and most major credit cards honored. We are "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer." Count on us for propane for grills, motor homes, and converted vehicles.

HINT: Brake-fluid leakage is dangerous because it can lead to a loss of braking power. Instead of adding fluid, have the leak repaired.

Is It Over, Really?

Well, the ordeal is over.

Or, is it, really?

William Jefferson Clinton has been acquitted of perjury and obstruction of justice articles of impeachment by the Senate.

The Republican House managers who presented the case against the president not only couldn't come close to the two-thirds vote (67) needed for conviction, they couldn't even get a simple majority vote.

While Democrats stood united behind Clinton, 10 Republicans joined them on the 55-45 perjury vote and five Republicans defected on the 50-50 tie vote—one shy of a majority.

The Republicans who crossed over may have been voting their consciences as they say. Or, worried about the opinion polls, covering their tails for Election Year 2000.

So, it's being chalked up by some as a big win for Clinton and the Democrats. And a big loss for Ken Starr and the Republicans.

More importantly, did the country win or lose?

Clinton is a winner from a legal standpoint. But not so from a moral standpoint.

Democrats who stood by him did so despite strong feelings about his behavior with Monica Lewinsky, and a year of lying to everyone about it. They called his conduct "reprehensible," "disgraceful," "unacceptable," etc. etc.

And to which Senator Bob Kerrey, the highly respected Democrat from Nebraska, after voting to acquit Clinton, was heard to say: "What a jerk this guy is."

That's the president of the United States they are talking about. Members of his own party.

Maybe if they felt that strongly about Clinton, they should have taken a walk down to the White House and tried to talk him into resigning for the good of the party and the country.

Al Gore would have taken over and the country spared the pain and agony of an impeachment trial.

Clinton would be remembered in history more as a political martyr, who stepped down for his country, than for the scandal itself.

The economy would probably have stayed its present robust course. No one man creates the economy and no man is indispensable.

Opinion polls indicate that most Americans agree with the acquittal vote.

One shows that 64 percent of the public favored acquittal while 34 percent thought Clinton should have been convicted.

But with a population of nearly 265 million in this country, don't fluff off that 34 percent. It adds up to nearly 90 million people who think the president is guilty.

Clinton's behavior hasn't gone unnoticed by the young people. A survey taken in December for the magazine Junior Scholastic showed that 60 percent of young readers wanted Clinton removed from office.

And Newsweek reports that in Vandalia, Ill. where Clinton was cheered by a crowd of 10,000 at a rally in 1992, there is now a different feeling about him.

A sixth grade teacher, according to Newsweek, said that whenever Clinton's name is mentioned in class, "they laugh and show disrespect. But that has more to do with Clinton himself. If I mention any other president, or the presidency itself, they don't giggle."

And speaking of opinion polls and surveys, I wonder what the results would be if the parents of America were asked: "Would you like to have your son grow up to be just like Bill Clinton?"

Clinton will now get to finish his second term. And when he does leave the White House, what will be his legacy?

Will he be ranked as a good president during whose watch the economy rose to new heights and unemployment dropped to new lows?

The value of the dollar bill apparently outweighs that of moral values and character.

Or will he be remembered for splitting legal hairs as to such things as what the little word "is" means and for jabbing his finger in American's face and emphatically declaring: "I did not have sexual relations with that woman—Miss Lewinsky?"

He's more likely to be remembered for diminishing the presidency than as an inspiration for future presidents or a role model for America's youth.

But the trial is over—finally.

Hopefully, Clinton and the Republican dominated Congress can bury the hatchet and not in one another.

Hopefully they can forget the anger between them and work together on the issues that need to be faced and have been on the back burner.

And that there won't be revenge on either side to get in the way.

That may be asking for a lot.

But anything is possible—maybe even in Washington.

Good and loyal employees are essential to a growing business. Seminar participants will learn if their business offers a motivating environment; how to motivate employees; what makes incentives effective; and at least one incentive to use in your own business.

Zaia and his firm specialize in developing human resource systems to improve performance for growing companies. With more than 15 years of human resources and business background, he has put into practice efficient recruiting systems, creative compensation strategies, innovative training and team building programs, performance improvement systems, and employee communication processes.

Pre-registration for the workshop is required.

Cost is $10 for Quincy 2000 members; $20 for non-members. Fee includes coffee and bagels.

To pre-register, call Quincy 2000 at (617) 847-1454. Registration will be confirmed upon receipt of payment. Workshop enrollment is limited to 20.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS OLD POSTCARD shows the Abigail Adams Cairn on the summit of Penn's Hill in South Quincy. From here Abigail Adams and her eight year old son John Quincy watched the burning of Charlestown during the battle of Bunker Hill in 1776. The Adams Chapter of the Daughter of the American Revolution erected the Cairn in 1896. This cairn is not just a pile of any old rocks. The cornerstone is a polished block of Quincy granite cut from an original sleeper of America's first railway that was built to carry granite from Quincy for the monument at Bunker Hill. Various patriotic societies of the time and other individuals contributed stones prized for their association with the Revolution. Included are stones from the Lexington and Concord battlefields, Dorchester Heights, the home of Abigail in Weymouth and from Salem, Hill and other historical sites in the area. The Cairn is off Franklin St. near Almquists Florist Shop.

Quincy Can't Build A Moat Around Itself

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

As a North Quincy resident, I have watched and listened carefully to all the aspects of the controversy surrounding the Highpoint development on Quarry St. proposed by Dean Stratouly, President and CEO of Congress Group Ventures.

I don't live in the Hospital Hill area or along Quarry St. I do, however, understand the concerns of nearby neighbors to development of a former landfill/toxic dump site. Issues of traffic, water flow, and pollution are real. Things will change for the immediate neighborhood, but change isn't always something to be solely feared.

The South Shore Region is growing. Development issues sometimes cause some growing pain. However, Quincy on the verge of the 21st century is not Mayberry USA. Folks are coming here to live. Others like Stratouly see the future and want to be part of it.

Congress Group Ventures and the City Council have been talking with each other and changes in the original scope of the project have been mitigated downward. The city's Planning Board with two members absent voted "Yes" to grant a special permit for the proposed development. Stratouly has been meeting with both city officials and abutters to mitigate problem areas. The proposal will again be debated by the city council on March 2 at Quincy High School. The City Council must make their decision by March 8.

Congress Group Ventures has already lowered the number of units in this project due in part to both pressure from the abutting neighborhood and the city council. Dean Stratouly is in business to make money and build high quality housing units. He has a good record. He is no fly-by-night developer. He is taking a piece of real estate not used and turning it into housing options.

Quincy is prime real estate today because so many people see Quincy as a good place to call home. Quincy can't build a moat around itself. People will come and Quincy has little choice but to grow into the next century. The old and the new must find a way to co-exist. Stratouly will clean up soiled ground and offer good apartments to people who want them.

People have a right to be concerned over the change Highpoint will bring but, working with the developer, they surely can find a way to bridge the gulf between them.

I think there is little wiggle room to further decrease the number of units planned for the development which still would allow the developer a healthy profit. Thirty years ago, there was no red line, no State Street South, and no Marina Bay. Both North Quincy and Quincy as a whole have survived and prospered from such changes in that status quo. West Quincy, Quarry St., and Hospital Hill will survive Highpoint. Someday we may look back at this time and wonder about all the fuss.

Bottom line, though, Quincy residents must always keep their eyes open and never be afraid to stand up and speak out to protect those quality of life issues. We should always be ready to defend those things we believe in, but we must also stay open to hear the other side.

No one said progress was easy or without risks but we can't avoid the future, we must learn to master it for our own benefit, for our families, and for our city.

Governor's Mansion Here Proposed

By PAUL HAROLD

The legislature was scheduled to hear a bill sponsored by Rep. Della Chiesa that would have the state buy an Adams St. mansion as the residence for the governor.

The property in question was owned by Frank Foy. Its previous owner was former mayor Perley Barbour.

LABOR UNION JOINS CALL FOR NEW BRIDGE

The Quincy Central Labor Union joined with the Quincy Shipbuilding Committee in calling for the construction of a new Fore River Bridge. Both groups wanted a wider span to accommodate the larger ships that would be built in the future. The announcement was made by Secretary-Treasurer William McNeill.

On the drawing board were plans for the new federal interstate highway, named in Shawmut Trail, that would extend Route 3 to the coastal towns along the South Shore through North Braintree and Quincy, crossing the Fore River near the site of the existing bridge.

MORE ARMY UNITS AT SQUANTUM PARK

The Army sounded out the city on its plan to build a 16-unit housing project for military personnel at Squantum Park. It would be similar to the Squantum Gardens project that was built under the Wherry Act.

Currently the 18-acre site was owned by the city of Boston. For the construction to go ahead the land would have to be re-zoned from residence A to residence B. The issue of tax payments to the city was resolved this week when the state Supreme Court ruled that Quincy could not collect taxes from Squantum Gardens.

City Manager Edward Lewis was expected to "run the idea" by the city council at the beginning of next week.

Scrabble Tournament To Benefit Literacy March 18

Thomas Crane Public Library and literacy partner Altrusa International of Quincy will hold a Scrabble Tournament to raise funds for literacy and celebrate Scrabble's 50th anniversary.

The tournament will be held Thursday, March 18 from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. at the new Clifford Marshall Elementary School. The event will feature refreshments, games, prizes and surprises. Proceeds will benefit the Literacy Program at the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Corporations willing to sponsor a Scrabble Team or Scrabble players should call Diane McCrackin at 472-4755 or Elaine Kline at 376-1314.

Housed within the main branch in Quincy Square, the Crane Library literacy program delivers services at many sites throughout the South Shore including public libraries, churches, a correctional facility, and a batter women's shelter. Volunteers have provided free tutoring to adults in basic reading and writing since 1986, and serve adults whose reading levels fall within non-reader to about the sixth grade range.

LVA-Quincy, a full affiliate of the national network of Literacy Volunteers, is one of 12 LVA programs statewide. Altrusa International of Quincy is an international association of business executives and professionals who volunteer their energies and expertise in projects dedicated to community betterment.

Assistance is given to projects emphasizing literacy through the Altrusa International Foundation, Inc. The connection between Altrusa and the library has been long standing. Altrusa members have donated funds, equipment and materials to the literacy project; assisted at library fund raisers; and volunteered as program tutors.

SMOKING AND YOUR FEET

Complications from peripheral vascular disease are among the most common reasons patients present to the Podiatrist's office. These complaints can include persistent pain in the feet and calves, slow healing of wounds and infections that do not heal. Left untreated these wounds and infections can lead to amputations.

There is ample evidence, as documented by the Centers for Disease Control that tobacco use may be one of the most important contributing factors in the development of peripheral vascular disease (PVD).

It is important to diagnose PVD early by both physical examination and often diagnostic tests done in a vascular laboratory. Often times a Vascular Surgeon will perform surgery if necessary.

If you are a smoker and are experiencing pain like what was described above, consult a qualified podiatrist.

If you are suffering from these or any other foot related complaints, call us at 773-4300. We are located at 1261 Furnace Brook Parkway, Suite #18, Quincy, and are affiliated with Carney, Quincy and South Shore Hospitals.

Pat Toland To Be Remembered March 16

A remembrance reception honoring the late Patricia Toland will be held Tuesday, March 16 from 6 to 9 p.m. at the Quincy Neighborhood Club, 27 Glendale Rd.

The event is being planned by the Friends of Pat Toland.

Mrs. Toland served on the school committee, city council and was assistant city clerk at the time of her death in September, 1994.

Proceeds from the reception will be used for a gift to the new Children's Room of the Thomas Crane Public Library in her name.

PAT TOLAND

The Four Seasons Hotel in Boston, is offering a Friday and Saturday night stay and Sunday brunch at the Ajournd 'Hui as a drawing prize.

The Pro-Dixie Jazz Band directed by Dr. Sumner Hirschberg will play at the reception.

Tickets for the reception or for the Four Seasons prize may be obtained by calling Gloria Noble at 617-472-5613 or Alicia Coletti at 617-773-4235.

Quincy Partnership To Host St. Patrick's Day Luncheon

The Quincy Partnership announces tickets are available for its third annual St. Patrick's Day Luncheon and Roast to be held Wednesday, March 17 from 11:45 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Quincy Lodge of Elks on Quarry St.

The luncheon will feature a traditional St. Patrick's Day feast of corned beef, cabbage, and other vegetables. The entertainment will include Irish music and a surprise guest entertainer as well as laughs from amateur comedians/politicians.

Tickets cost $30 and can be obtained by contacting Joe Shea (376-1131), Bob Galligan (328-1500), or Tom Koch (376-1251). Event organizers encourage anyone interested in purchasing tickets to do so soon due to the limited amount of space.

"The St. Patrick's Day luncheon is always one of the most enjoyable events of the year," said Quincy Partnership Chairman Ed Keohane. "Everybody is fair game for a joke or two, but it's all in good fun and everyone has a great time."

The event is a fundraiser for the Partnership's most recent endeavor: to bring a decorative water fountain to serve as the centerpiece of a proposed formal garden at Merrymount Park. Their goal is to raise $100,000 for the project through a series of fundraising events.

Plans for a decorative water fountain in a formal garden at Merrymount Park were originally developed by famous landscape architect Frederick Law Olmstead and his associates. The Partnership's assistance will help Quincy realize the century-old plans of park benefactor Charles Francis Adams II and his good friend Olmstead.

In the past the Quincy Partnership has raised money for various projects, including the handsome "Welcome to Quincy" signs located at many of the city's entrances; up-lighting for many of Quincy's historic buildings; and the Abigail Adams statue in Quincy Center.

"The Quincy Partnership brings together business and civic leaders for the mutual goal of improving the great city of Quincy. I hope that we can continue to do our part to help make Quincy a great place to live, work, or raise a family," added Keohane.

Stenberg, Donlon Silver Haired Legislators

Sabina Kavanagh Stenberg and John Donlon, both of Quincy, have been re-elected as Silver Haired legislators.

Stenberg is senator from the Norfolk-Plymouth District and Donlon representative from Norfolk District 2.

A resident of 80 Clay St., Wollaston, Stenberg served three years as Silver Haired representative.

She is former chairwoman of the Quincy Council on Aging and was vice president of the Retired Seniors Volunteer Program for two years.

A former Wollaston businesswoman, she is past president of the Tobin Towers Tenant Association and was president and long-time member of the Cerebral Palsy of the South Shore Board of Directors.

She will be graduating in June from the University of Massachusetts/Boston with a BA in Human Services.

Donlon, who lives on Shirley St., West Quincy, is a combat veteran of World War II and has served a number of years on the Silver Haired Legislature. He is a frequent speaker at school assemblies.

He is presently an active member of the committee planning the World War II Memorial to be placed in Merrymount Park.

Raymondi Calls Community Policing Meeting Feb. 22

Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi will hold a meeting on community policing in Quincy Point at 7 p.m. Monday, Feb. 22 in the city council chambers.

Community policing officers James D'Entremont, Ralph Radzevich and Christine Kraunelis, who have been assigned to Quincy Point, will be introduced.

In addition, Raymondi has invited school superintendent Eugene Creedon and public works commissioner David Colton to provide an update on the progress of the Point Webster Middle School, which is scheduled to open in September.

Plans for improvements of Quincy Point streets and sidewalks will be outlined at this meeting, he said.

Raymondi also has scheduled a community policing meeting at 7 p.m. Feb. 23 at the Fore River Clubhouse.

He said a proposal to open a microbrewery at 723 Washington St., the site of the former Sabatino's restaurant, and a request for a beer-and-wine license at Mandarin King Restaurant at 656 also will be discussed. The owners of the microbrewery must apply for a beer-and-wine license as well.

Also, Raymondi will provide an update on Point Pub, which had been denied a liquor license by the city's licensing board.

He has scheduled a third community meeting, regarding the opening of South Shore Cooperative Bank, at 7 p.m. Feb. 25 at Roche Bros. Supermarkets community room.

D'Amico urged residents to attend this last forum before the city council votes on the project, scheduled at 7 p.m. Tuesday, March 2, at the Quincy High School auditorium. For those who cannot attend, he asked residents to call his city council office at 376-1341 to register their opinion.

Highpoint Development Open Forum Feb. 23

An open forum on the proposed Highpoint Development will be held at 7 p.m. Tuesday, Feb. 23, at the Ward 4 Community Center, 100 Brooks Ave.

"For well over a year now we have debated the pros and cons of the proposed massive land development on Quarry Street," said Ward 4 Councillor Michael D'Amico.

"The Highpoint proposal started at over 1,600 units and has been scaled back to its current number of 1,100 units, for which the planning board gave its support on Jan. 13...

"I have many unanswered questions and concerns regarding the impact such a project will have on our community," which will last for years to come.

D'Amico urged residents to attend this last forum before the city council votes on the project, scheduled at 7 p.m. Tuesday, March 2, at the Quincy High School auditorium. For those who cannot attend, he asked residents to call his city council office at 376-1341 to register their opinion.

Planning Department To Present Technical Assistance Workshop

NEW SPORT, NEW INJURIES

Snowboarding, a winter sport still in its infancy compared to other snow sports, has gained a large and growing number of enthusiasts. The sport has caught on with such a passion that most ski areas now reserve special places exclusively for snowboards. Alas, with this popular new sport comes a new threat: snowboarder's ankle, a painful condition that manifests itself in the area just below the ankle bone. This condition is speculated to affect one in five beginners. The footwear of choice in this sport is a soft-shelled boot that allows a greater range of motion for the ankle than the rigid ski boot that allows no lateral motion; the soft boot, however, offers little protection for the ankle.

Athletically inclined or not, no one can afford to play games with foot injuries, fractures, diseases and disorders. Podiatric problems demand the attention of a professional. Don't let foot problems keep you on the sidelines. Consult with us instead at 110 W. Squantum St., North Quincy. We offer treatment of specific problems, as well as preventive care to keep you on your feet. Please call 617-472-3466 for an appointment.

P.S. Thirty percent of all snowboard injuries involve wrists and forearms; please wear wrist braces!

After Inspecting North Quincy Projects Ayers, Colton See Flood Relief, Wastewater Improvements Soon

Ward 6 City Councillor Bruce Ayers and Public Works Commissioner David Colton recently toured four ongoing public works projects in North Quincy and announced that flooding relief and an improved wastewater management system would soon be evident along Wollaston Beach and adjacent side streets.

Ayers serves as chairman of the City Council Public Works Committee and has worked with Colton to design and implement a comprehensive program of infrastructure improvements for this neighborhood. Completion of the projects will alleviate a flooding and poor drainage problem that has plagued the area for over 30 years, they said.

Ayers and Colton reviewed the progress made on the $1 million Hollis Ave. flooding relief project. Construction has been ongoing for several months and is on schedule to be completed by the end of the month. When the work is finished, residents will finally notice an improvement in drainage and reduction in the buildup of standing water and incidents of flooding.

New, high-powered underground pumps have been installed that will redirect water to a safe drainage area when flooding would otherwise begin. The Department of Public Works has also replaced aging sewer and water pipes and will resurface the roadway and sidewalks as part of the project.

"I want to commend the residents for working with me to set this goal and for the tremendous patience and cooperation they displayed throughout the process of making this a reality," said Ayers. "This project has been one of my top priorities and I want to thank Mayor Sheets for sharing my desire to provide this much-needed relief to those who have waited so long for a resolution."

Colton noted that solving the problem was a cooperative effort between Ayers, Sheet and the Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency who were able to identify and secure funding through an emergency grant and funding available in the city's sewer rehabilitation account.

Ayers and Colton also reviewed the Appleton and Webster Street area where a similar, but much smaller, flooding relief project is scheduled to begin within the next six weeks. This project will correct water buildup and overflow affecting the property and houses located on these streets.

"This corrective work will help to ensure that residents no longer need to continually worry about the possibility of their yard or house flooding," Ayers said.

The project will cost approximately $50,000 and Ayers has already received a funding commitment to cover the cost.

Two separate projects have been underway since the fall that should improve recreational opportunities at Wollaston Beach and in Quincy Bay during the summer season, Ayers and Colton said.

The largest of the two projects is the renovation of the Squantum Pumping Station and the replacement of sewer lines along the beach that move wastewater to the Merrymount Pumping Station. The new sewer lines are part of a system upgrade being conducted by the Massachusetts

Water Resources Authority.

It is designed to increase capacity and eliminate the combined wastewater/sewer overflow pipes that have chronically released bacteria and contaminants directly into Quincy Bay. This project combined with the decommissioning of the Nut Island Sewage Treatment Plant should mean more summer days for swimming a cleaner Wollaston Beach. Ayers and Colton remind residents that much more needs to be done to restore the beach to its former glory and that both will continue to pursue additional initiatives that will help to make this a reality.

The channel depth and access to the Wollaston and Squantum Yacht Clubs, under a program funded jointly by the Department of Environmental Management and the City of Quincy. Boaters should no longer face the problem of being unable to enter or leave the bay, said Ayers.

"Wollaston Beach and Quincy Bay are great city assets and should be upgraded to their fullest potential so that area residents can enjoy the many recreational activities we have to offer, Ayers said.

"Finishing this much-needed dredging will showcase the vibrant summer activities we are famous for and will preserve the important Coast Guard Safety Station established at the Yacht Club."

Residents with questions on these or other public works projects can call Ayers at 472-9877 or the Dept. of Public Works at 376-1959.

Condo Sales Also Up

Record Single Family Home Sales In State, South Shore

Single family home sales in the state in 1998 set a record for the third consecutive year, reports the Massachusetts Association of Realtors (MAR).

Low mortgage rates, a healthy regional economy and favorable changes to the state's capital gains tax laws were created by the MAR.

Sales of detached single-family homes increased 7.2 percent in 1998 with 49,456 units sold compared to 46,141 in 1997.

Condominium sales rose 17.6 percent, from 9,966 a year ago to 11,720 in 1998.

The combined total of 61,176 detached homes and condominium sales in 1998 sets a new all-time high for residential sales in the state.

That exceeds the 1997 single-family home sales total of 56,107 by nine percent and tops the 49,729 units sold in 1996 by 23 percent.

By comparison, the highest sales total in the 1980's was 49,625 in 1987.

Sales in the Quincy-South Shore area were up along with those in the state.

Single family home sales in the South Shore area were 3,380, an increase of 10.1 percent compared with the 3,070 in 1997.

The average selling price in the South Shore was up by 10 percent with the average selling price $221,502 compared with $201,375 in 1997.

Condo sales were up and selling prices down in the South Shore. There were 366 condominium sales in 1998 compared to 317 the year before -- up 15.5 percent.

Average selling price South Shore condos in 1998 was $121,670, down 3.9 percent from $126,629 in 1997.

"For homebuyers and sellers, it doesn't get any better than this," said MAR president James C. Dougherty. "A large segment of the population has been able to benefit from the rise in income and job growth over the past few years, and that has pushed consumer confidence and purchasing power way up. When you combine the current prosperity and optimism with historically low mortgage rates and controlled price appreciation it makes for an exceptional market, like the one we're experiencing now," he observed.

Regionally, in the detached single-family home market, double digit sales growth occurred in five of seven areas of the state last year. The strongest activity was observed in Worcester County (Central) and the Cape Cod and islands region, where sales increased 20-30 percent over 1997 levels. Healthy sales gains of 10-15 percent also occurred in the Southeast, South Shore and West regions in 1998.

The only region to report a decline in sales was greater Boston, but that decrease is due primarily to a change in reporting practices for the jurisdiction, according to the Realtors report.

With single-family sales having risen during all four quarters this past year, the current period of housing market expansion has grown to 14 consecutive quarters, and there's little to suggest activity will slow dramatically in the new year, Dougherty asserted. "We've seen record sales in nearly every region of the state this past year, and even if those levels are not sustained in '99, they reflect an economy that's still growing," he said. In fact, the tight labor market has recently led to an increase in the number of persons relocating to Massachusetts, and that too is helpful to drive housing demand, he noted.

Other factors that have stimulated the housing market include changes in the state's capital gains tax laws that allow increased exemptions ($500,000 for married couples/$250,000 for singles) on the sale of one's primary residence, and a shortage in the rental housing stock, especially in Eastern Massachusetts, which has led to a sharp escalation in rent prices.

One trouble spot continues to plague the market though, an insufficient inventory to meet buyer demand. The number of single-family listings is down four percent since December, 1997, to a dangerously low 6.6 months worth of supply.

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

Chiropractic: Safe, Effective Health Care

By ROBERT J. CLARK
Clark Chiropractic

Over the years chiropractors have experienced tremendous success in helping patients with all kinds of health problems.

For the most part the public thinks of chiropractors as doctors who relieve back and neck pain. They often do not understand how chiropractic can help with their overall well being by correcting spinal misalignments which if left uncorrected can adversely affect a person's health. As Hippocrates wrote, "look well into the spine for the cause of disease."

ROBERT CLARK

Most people don't realize the implications of spinal misalignments (or subluxations) have on their total health. A simple definition of subluxation is a misalignment of the spinal column that irritates a nerve. This subluxation, an often painless spinal distortion, can irritate or damage your spinal nerves, interfere with your body-brain connection and affect your spine, nerves, discs, muscles, organs, and overall health.

The spine, spinal cord and nervous system are all vital links of the mind-body connection. Keeping this connection free from subluxations (spinal misalignment) is vital for good health. Chiropractors understand the importance of this link in relation to the whole person. A question many people ask is, "why didn't my medical doctor diagnose a subluxation?" and the reason is their expertise is in the use of drugs and surgery, not in the diagnosis and care of subluxations.

Your spinal column or "backbone" is made up of 24 vertebrae: seven in your neck (cervical spine), 12 in your midback (thoracic spine), and 5 in your lower back (lumbar spine). Your spinal cord, made of billions of nerves, lies inside your spinal column, protected on all sides by bone. Your spinal cord's nerves branch out through the openings between your vertebrae and connect to your internal organs, joints, ligaments, tendons, and other body parts. Interference with this connection (subluxation) affects every aspect well being.

Spinal misalignments (subluxations) can occur from everyday occurrences such as slips, falls, poor posture, repetitive motion, stress, work injuries, car accidents and sports injuries. Headaches, pain the back/neck/shoulders/legs/hi ps, knees and overall joints, numbness/burning/tingling, are just a few of the symptoms that may result when subluxations go undetected and uncorrected.

Using physical examination, x-rays if necessary, adjustments and other health regimens/procedures if needed, doctors of chiropractic specialize in the detection and correction of subluxations, restoring the lines of communication within your body and improving your overall body function, healing potential, and well-being.

If you are sick, you go to the chiropractor to strengthen your natural healing ability. When you are feeling well, you go to improve and maintain your health status. Health is only possible when all systems of the body are functioning properly. Chiropractic offers safe and effective health care without drugs or surgery and focuses on the total health of the patient by helping the body heal itself.

The basic philosophy of chiropractic has held up over the years under consistent scientific and clinical scrutiny. The field of chiropractic welcomes new and continued valid research on the types of treatment doctors of chiropractic provide. Education, collaborative and open communication between all health care professionals is essential for continuing to improve the health status of each of our patients.

Kelley's 19 Paces Quincy Past North

By CHARLES ROSS

Last month, North Quincy boys' basketball team defeated Quincy on their home court by a single point 59-58.

The rematch last Friday night at North had all the feeling of a real grudge match. The Presidents took a 5-1 lead and led most of the way in what was a nailbiter for both teams as Quincy won 52-49.

Junior guard Dan Kelley was the star for Quincy with 19 points. He also hit 4 key foul shots with under a minute to go in the game to keep the Red Raiders at bay. Quincy did a much better job from the field and foul line and rebounding.

Still, North stayed within striking distance through the game. With under 2 minutes to go, the Presidents were ahead 48-46 after North's Frank McNamara had hit a 3-point shot. A scramble ensued for the ball, which was, ruled a jump ball.

The possession arrow was pointing to Quincy and they kept the ball. Kelley was fouled and hit 2 foul shots with 19 seconds to go giving Quincy a 50-46 lead.

McNamara hit the 3-pointer with 10 seconds to go closing the score to 50-49. Quincy inbounded the ball, Kelley was fouled and hit both shots to make it 52-49.

The Red Raiders tried a desperation 3 pointer at the buzzer that missed its mark giving Quincy the 52-49 win.

Quincy Coach John Franceschini had praise for his 4 seniors on the team and the role of the entire team who made a contribution to the win.

Asked what it was like to beat North in their gym, Franceschini said that the history of the rivalry has had he and North Ted Stevenson winning on each other's home court.

"In a way, it's nice to have each team win a game as the seniors for both schools each have a memory of a win."

In the loss Coach Ted Stevenson praised his whole team and especially team Captain Frank McNamara who hit for 15 including the key 3 pointer.

"We did not do it at the line and it hurt us."

THE PRESIDENTS' Dan Kelly (33) pulls up for a jumper against North Quincy. Quincy won the season series at one game apiece.

Coach Stevenson told the team after the game, "You have to come every game to play as we played 8 teams rated in the top 20 this year including our league games."

"Remember, you underclassmen," Stevenson continued, "What it was like to beat Quincy, now remember what it is like to lose to Quincy."

Both coaches played this year with many underclassmen, so they both look to improve next year.

North finished the year at 3-17. Quincy will be hosting their own tourney this week, so they have 2 more games to play on the season. They stand currently at 4-14 on the year.

Basketball notes: The low ceiling at North claimed another ball as Quincy senior guard Jir Munchback tried to make a court long shot to end the first half. His heave lodge in between the ceiling and one of the gym's partitions.

Girls' Coach Doug MacFarlane was able to rescue the trapped ball with a long pole. The judges gave Munchback perfect 6.0 scores for hustle, except for the judgment from Russia who only gave him a 5.4.

Bowes Leads North Over Quincy, 51-33

For Quincy High School girls' basketball team, the task was a tough one. Go into the North Quincy High gym without your leading scorer and win the game.

With Coleen Nichol out ill, the First Ladies fought hard and led in the early stages of the game 5-2 and 7-5 only to see North Quincy come up with 22 unanswered points and a 51-33 victory over Quincy in the final game of the year for both schools.

The Red Raiders were led by senior guard Kristin Bowes who scored 16, had 8 rebounds and 7 steals in the game. Junior guard Jill Nicholson added 11 points for the winners.

For Quincy, they were led by Katlyn McLaughlin's 11 points. Heather Schatzel added 9 for the First Ladies.

Following the game, North Head Coach Doug MacFarlane praised his team for "putting it together very well, especially the seniors."

MacFarlane was asked how he motivated the North girls when they had a 20-point lead at halftime.

"I reminded the girls that Quincy trailed Plymouth South last week at halftime by 15 points and they came back to win the game in overtime. We had to play just as hard in the second half as we did in the first."

Looking back on the season, MacFarlane pointed out that of the team's 11 losses, 7 of them were less than 10 points.

"If we had pulled some of those out we would have made the tournament," MacFarlane added.

Quincy Coach Bob Noble was disappointed in his team's inability to hit from the field early that gave North the big lead.

"I'm very pleased with the way our girls played as they tried all the way to the end."

While disappointed with the season's record, Noble was pleased with the progress made during the season by his young squad.

"I expect that with the experience gained this year, we will have a pretty good team coming back for next year," Noble said.

Both coaches stressed that each player must be committed to off-season conditioning on an individual basis. By that, taking hundreds of shots and working on their individual games so that come next fall, their work will come together as a team and make both Quincy's contenders for the Old Colony league title and the playoffs in year 2000.

Seniors for both teams were honored before the game as they were introduced by North announcer Chris "Dexter" Dolan. Players from each team received a nice round of applause from the crowd.

At the game was former Quincy High football coach and Hall of Famer Jack Raymer, there to watch is daughter Kelley play for Quincy. Jack said he has accepted an assistant coaching position for football at Stonehill College in Easton.

Raymer, who most recently was an assistant coach at UMass/Boston, will coach the linebackers.

The new head coach at Stonehill is Rich Beale, a native of Hingham. He had been an assistant coach at Tufts before becoming head coach at Stonehill.

ASHLEY MURPHY of North Quincy puts up a shot as Quincy's Kelley Raymer (20) helps defend. North prevailed, 51-33.

Raymer will remain a teacher in the Quincy Public Schools. It's good to have Jack Raymer back in the ranks of coaches.

No City Champ In Hockey As Teams Tie

By CHARLES ROSS

Every sport for the most part has a winner and loser. In Quincy, the winner between North and Quincy is called the City Champion.

In boys' basketball, each team won a game. In hockey, the two teams were hoping for something wonderful that they could land the City Champs 1999 on to, but rather they came away with two ties for their efforts.

Last Saturday, it was a 3-3 standoff in a game that was quite similar to the game the teams had played in January.

Old Colony League leading scorer Paul Makarian scored first for North. Quincy came back in the second period to take the lead as Sean Haidul and Didier Alther scored.

In period number 3 Mike Sullivan tied the game at 2 for North. Then early in the third period Scot Matson scored to give the Residents a 3-2 lead.

That lead would stand until 1:24 to go in the game as Freshman Joe Fitzpatrick scored to tie the game at 3.

A great game as both teams played hard from the start. Quincy and North will take this week off as the post season tourney selections and pairings will be announced this weekend. Quincy is at 10-4-6, while North is at 9-6-4.

North Freshmen Win 2; Finish Season 11-9 Overall

The North Quincy freshmen boys' basketball team ended its season with a pair of OCL victories to give the young Raiders an 11-9 record, 7-7 in OCL games.

First-year coach Scott Madden's team finished the season with a 4-7 record. Tough at home, they lost only two, while winning 7.

Dan Duggan's 3-point shot put NQ up early, visiting Plymouth South. Mark Maher and Sean Ginty keyed the Raider full-court press, with two quick steals which enabled North to open a 9-2 lead in the first four minutes. Dennis Thomson's two free throws broke an 8-0 Panther run as the Raiders re-took the lead, 11-0 with 7:05 remaining in the first half.

Things got ugly for the Raiders over the next couple of minutes, as turnovers and missed lay-ups contributed to an 11-0 Plymouth run. Dave Rochon's 16-footer from the right side broke a three a half minute scoreless streak for the Raiders. North put on a 11-2 run of its own, to take a 24-23 half-time lead.

The Panthers opened up a 35-31 lead early in the second half. Bert Vivatukan intercepted an errant Plymouth pass and threw a 3-quarter court strike to John O'Connell who laid the ball in, bringing the Raiders back within 2, 37-35, with 5:41 left to play. On the next possession, O'Connell's three point play put the Raiders ahead for good, 38-37. Mark Maher found Adam O'Hara cutting to the baseline. O'Hara was fouled as he made the lay-up. His free throw put the Raiders up four, 47-43, with 2:42 to go.

Tight defense, including an O'Connell block forced the home team to try and foul their way back into the game. Maher was 6 for 6 from the stripe to keep the Raiders on top. North completed its season sweep over Plymouth South, 57-49.

O'Connell had 19 points. Mark Maher had 10 points, including a perfect 8 for 8 from the line. Adam O'Hara and Dave Rochon chipped in 6 and 5 points respectively.

Against Quincy, North sought to avenge an earlier loss to the Residents. On their home court, North came out aggressively at both ends of the court. Mark Maher's floor length in-bound pass broke the Residents' press to give North an early 8-4 lead. Dave Rochon scooped up a Mike Haines block and found John O'Connell breaking away. A Rochon steal and pass to Sean Ginty gave North a 12-4 lead with less than five minutes gone in the first half.

Poor defensive rebounding by the Raiders gave the visiting Residents multiple offensive chances over the next few minutes, as Quincy took the lead, 14-12. Matt Donovan's two free throws gave North the lead again, 24-23 with 32 seconds left in the half. Mark Maher stole the ball on Quincy's next possession. His running eight-footer as time expired gave North a 26-23 half-time lead.

Matt Donovan's 3 pointer in the opening seconds ignited a 20-8 run to open the second half. Two free throws by Adam O'Hara pushed the NQ lead to 40-26 with less than five minutes off the clock. Dave Rochon's drive in the lane pushed the Raider lead to 15 at the 8:36 mark. Complacency and turnovers set in for the Raiders over the next four minutes, as Quincy refused to quit. The Residents pulled to within one, 52-51, with more than four minutes remaining.

Two John O'Connell hoops put North back up by five with two minutes to go. A Mark Maher blocked shot and a Mike Haines steal kept the Residents off the board over the last minute. North Quincy went 1-for-5 at the line the last minute of the game, but held on, 60-55.

In their last game as freshmen, O'Connell had 19 points, Matt Donovan 8 and Mark Maher 6. Dave Rochon had an outstanding game, scoring and running the offense, finishing with 11 points.

Kylie Mansfield Sets Fontbonne Track Record

Kylie Mansfield, a Quincy resident and freshman at Fontbonne Academy, broke a school track record in the mile and improved her own personal best.

Mansfield posted a 5.28 at the recent Class B, State Championship at the Reggie Lewis Center to break the school indoor track record and make a fifth place finish in the championship. She also improved her personal best of 5.48 by 20 seconds.

The win qualified her to move on to the All State Meet, where she will compete with the top high school track stars in the state.

Mansfield attributes her success to hard work, teamwork, and the advice of coach Bruce Richardson.

Coach Richardson called Mansfield a good listener and hard worker.

Born and raised in Quincy, Kylie Mansfield is the daughter of Steve and Marie Mansfield of 450 Dickens St.

KYLIE MANSFIELD, a Quincy resident and Fontbonne Academy Freshman, stands with coach Bruce Richardson. Mansfield recently broke a school track record and qualified for the All State Meet.

Beat Goes On For North Girls' Track

The beat goes on for North Quincy's girls' track team.

At last Friday's Class A state meet, Kellyrose O'Brien and Lynda Wilson both advanced to the All-State championship to be held at the Reggie Lewis Center Saturday. Straight across the board, every one of the 10 girls who competed turned in season-best performances.

"We just didn't want this meet to end," said Coach Geoff Hennessy. "Every girl had her best meet of the year. What a great way to go out."

In the first event, senior Captain Kellie Johnston ran 7.93 in the 55 meter, a season best to finish 17th out of a 60-girl field. In the 600 meter Kellyrose O'Brien placed fourth, establishing a new school record of 1:40.59 breaking the old mark of 1:41.14 set at last year's All-State by Jasmine Gonzalez. All four girls battled down the home stretch with less than one second separately them.

In the 4x800 relay all four girls ran their fastest legs of the year. Natalie Caron (2:37.9), Linda Nguyen (2:36.7), Genevieve O'Brien (2:39.5) and Sarah Houghton (2:47.8) combined for a 10:41.9, 10th overall in the 14-team field.

The race of the night was Lynda Wilson in the two-mile. The longstriding junior made a move after a conservative first 400 meters to hook-up with the lead pack. They went through the mile in 5:46. Wilson then confounded all critics with a brilliant last lap sprint to secure second place in 11:43.96, her best ever indoors or out, beating Falmouth's standout Caitlin Driscoll.

"Wilson didn't make the OCL All-Star team this winter, but she beat both girls, who did (in the 2-mile)," Hennessy said.

The final event, the 4x400 had more drama. Kellie Johnston (64.1) put North in the lead in heat #2. Colleen Lahar continued to hold onto first with a 66.2 Natalie Caron turned in a 67.9 but a tentative hand-off to Kellyrose O'Brien put North in third. O'Brien (61.2) ran desperately to regain the lead, but was held off by Chelmsford's talented Caitlin Kliek, a two-time track champion and perhaps the best swimmer in Eastern Mass. Had North won their heat, they would have placed 5th qualifying for All-State. Their time was 4:20.43, their best indoors in 11 years.

Quincy's Cohen Qualifies For State Shot-Put Event

The Quincy High School girls' indoor track team has made great strides this season because of one person in particular.

Junior Samantha Cohen, one of three shot-putters for Quincy, is the only female to make the Mass. Indoor State Championships. Cohen threw the shot 30'4" at the OCL meet to qualify.

"SAC has been working hard all season to get where she is now. She's there everyday at practice-rain or snow-to prepare. That's what makes a real athlete," said Head Coach Robin Welinsky. "Nothing will stand in her way."

Cohen proved herself again at the state meet. "She got herself there," said Welinsky. "I just gave her the training regime, but it was Samantha's hard work that took her to the state level."

"Samantha has continuously worked hard. Her throws increase each time, sometimes by inches, sometimes by a foot," her coach explained. "As a junior, Samantha has the potential to have the same goal for next year."

"All an athlete has to have is a little heart and soul in what they're doing and they can accomplish anything," Welinsky added.

Quincy Squirts, Bantams Win Kiwanis Openers

26th Annual Hockey Tournament Continues All Week At Youth Arena

Two local teams posted opening round victories as the 26th annual Quincy Kiwanis Youth Hockey Tournament got underway Monday at Quincy Youth Arena, 60 Murphy Memorial Dr.

Quincy Squirt "A's" doubled up the Mohawks 6-3 while the Quincy Bantam "A's" coasted past Needham, 8-2.

The tournament, which features "A" competition in four divisions, Mites, Squirts, Pee Wees and Bantams, continues this week at the arena. The semifinals and championship rounds will be held Saturday and Sunday.

Teams from throughout the Greater Boston-South Shore area, New England and as far away as California are participating in the tournament which serves as a major fundraiser for the Quincy Kiwanis Club. Proceeds benefit club charities including scholarships and camperships, underprivileged and needy children and the Kiwanis Pediatric Trauma Institute in Boston.

In squirt competition, Quincy's Craig Calley and Mike Giordani each scored twice to power the locals past the Mohawks. Quincy's Steve Bythrow started the scoring with a goal at 11:08 of the first period. Assisting were Glen Gibbons and Mike McKeon.

The Mohawks struck back 30 seconds later with a goal by Ryan Gormley. The visitors took the lead six minutes later as Anthony Calabrese lit the lamp.

Quincy tied the game at 2 in the second period as Calley notched the first of his two goals. That was the only goal in the period.

In the third period, Giordani put Quincy ahead 3-2 with a goal assisted by Mike McKeon and Steve Bythrow. The lead was short-lived as the Mohawks evened the game at 3-3 less than a minute later with a goal by Josh Franklin.

That's when the Quincy Squirts went to work. The locals snapped in three goals in about a five minute span to claim the opener.

Quincy owned the rest of the period and snapped in three goals in a five-minute span to post the victory. Mike McKeon scored on assists by Pat Devlin and Mike McPherson. Calley scored his second goal a minute and a half later. Mike McKeon assisted. Giordani closed out the scoring with just under 2 minutes to play. McKeon also assisted on that goal.

In other squirt action, Riverside, Calif. edged King Philip of Walpole, 5-4.

In Bantam competition, Quincy pinned an 8-2 loss on Needham. Jordan Virtue lead the offense with a hat trick and an assist.

Quincy jumped out to a 3-0 first period lead. Bill McKeon scored first assisted by Virtue. John Ryan put Quincy up 2-0 with a goal assisted by Brian Lewis. The locals opened up a 3-0 lead with a goal by Kevin Pattern assisted by David Germain.

Quincy increased its lead to 4-0 in the second period as Jordan Virtue scored his second goal assisted by Bill McKeon. Needham got on the board four minutes later on a goal by T.J. Byrnes unassisted.

Needham would get no closer as Quincy outscored the visitors 4-1 in the final period to post the 8-2 win. Jordan scored his second goal early in the period assisted by Matt Conso. Conso padded the lead with his own goal a minute later. Brian Lewis had an assist.

David Germain put the game out of reach with a goal assisted by Tom Hughes.

Needham scored with about 5 minutes left but Jordan struck again to complete his hat trick and round out the offense.

The mite competition also got underway Monday but did not involve any local teams. Two games were played: Charlestown doubled up Weymouth, 8-4, and South Boston cruised by Braintree, 6-2.

The remaining schedule of games featuring local teams:

Quincy Mites versus Dorchester, Thursday at 3:10 p.m.; and Quincy Mites versus Lewiston, ME Friday at 9:20 a.m.

Quincy Pee Wees versus Braintree Wednesday night at 7:50 p.m.; and Quincy Pee Wees versus Middlesex, Conn. Friday at 3:10 p.m.

Quincy Squirts versus Newton Thursday at 12:50 p.m.

Quincy Bantams versus South Coast Sabers (California) Wednesday at 12:50 p.m.; and Quincy Bantams versus Lewiston, ME Friday at 4:20 p.m.

Semi-final games are scheduled for Saturday at 7:50 and 9 p.m. for pee wees; and Sunday at 7 and 8:10 a.m. for squirts and 9:20 and 10:30 a.m. for mites.

The championship games are set for Sunday at noon for bantams, 1:30 p.m. for squirts; 3:10 p.m. for pee wees and 4:30 p.m. for mites.

There are no semi-final games for bantams since there are only four teams competing in that division.

For more information on other games scheduled, call 479-8371.

SCOTT DEWARE

A Thought For The Week

Many biographers of Washington say that he was the most deeply religious President who has ever served our nation. In his state papers and private correspondence, references to the Deity appear scores of times (maybe hundreds of times!). Every one of his crucial addresses or state papers was sprinkled with references to God.

For instance, his official proclamation of October 3, 1789, establishing our first national Thanksgiving Day contained 14 direct references to God. Even after that agonizing ordeal at Valley Forge, General Washington ordered his Army to observe a day of thanksgiving to God! He rebuked his officers and men for use of profanity. He commended their attendance at Church on Sundays. He prayed every morning and evening. He was seen on his knees in his library with the Bible open before him. Many prayers survive which are written in his hand.

One Washington biographer went so far as to say: "Washington WAS the Revolution!" Beyond a doubt, it was his miraculous, indomitable, never-quailing religious faith in God which sustained Washington the General, and Washington the President...

How fortunate we are, as a nation, to have had George Washington as our first President.

Your Horoscope

by Natasha

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You seem to be quite involved in other people's lives now. There may not be as much time for family this week as you would prefer. Make a schedule and stick to it.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You're not exactly in the mood to be left alone, but then again you may not be too keen about this week's social possibilities. One friend is a pain in the neck.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Put aside any plans of getting a lot of work accomplished this week. There will be just too many demands on your time elsewhere. Keep stress to a minimum and relax.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) There's no point in stating a criticism and then withdrawing into yourself. Keep the lines of communication open and give others the benefit of the doubt.

LEO (July 23 to Aug. 22) It may be a small issue that arises in connection with money. Try not to let yourself get unduly upset. Keep things in perspective. Clamp a tight lid on credit.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Strain could exist between an in-law and a family member this week. Home demands still press on you and may delay plans for travel. Not everyone agrees with you at the moment.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Some work developments from last week are still on your mind, but it's best now to devote your time and energy to non-material concerns. Don't be critical of others.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) There seems to be a lot of loose ends to tackle now and you may not have as much time for socializing as you'd like to have. A friend seems somewhat superficial over the weekend.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A partner's self-preoccupation could leave you feeling left out in the cold this week. Too much concern about little things could frazzle your nerves. Seek relaxing pursuits over the weekend.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Your offhanded manner could be so casual that others are left with the impression you don't care. Keep a safeguard on credit.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) There's a need to watch expenditures now. A little bit here, a little bit there, and before you know it, you may have spent quite a sum. Meet close ties halfway this weekend.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) This is just not the time to get your thoughts across to others. Misunderstandings could easily arise over both career and financial concerns. A friend too is fickle.

'Lincoln,' 'Roosevelt' And Bill Clinton

House of Representatives is offensive. These things always balance, and this too shall pass."

Ted Zalewski, an actor, teacher and author from Cambridge who has been portraying President Theodore Roosevelt for several years, will return to the White House April 5 to give a similar performance.

If President Theodore Roosevelt were alive today, said Zalewski, "he would be very disappointed."

Zalewski was in complete character, from the top hat, wire-rimmed glasses, formal coat and tuxedo trousers, who entered the City Hall chambers to the strains of "Hail to the Chief" and the audience rose from their seats.

"He saw the presidency as a moral force for the betterment of America, and he created the bully pulpit," said Zalewski of the 26th President.

"He would be angry to see the president place himself above the interest of all Americans." In fact, he added, Roosevelt would be disappointed at all the politicians "who take mushy positions on everything except when standing for election."

During Zalewski's characterization of Roosevelt, he interjected humorous anecdotes of the president's life in detailing the man and his character. Children and adults alike listened in rapt attention.

Roosevelt confessed he never went to school, but he had tutors and studied French, German, Greek and Latin at home. He said he never got along with math and was a terrible speller.

He told how he had collected woodchucks, snakes and lizards and was fond of singing birds. His love of nature led him to establish five national parks and preserve more than 235 million acres of parkland, plus the Grand Canyon during his Presidency.

Zalewski also related the tale of how the teddy bear came to be, asking 9-year-old Erin Pelton, a fourth grader at the Squantum School, to hold a brown fuzzy bear.

In 1902 when Roosevelt went down South to settle a border dispute between Louisiana and Mississippi, he found time to go bear hunting but was not successful.

Then one day, he saw a small bear huddled in a tree looking so helpless that he decided not to shoot it.

The press, he said, had a field day. One cartoonist depicted the hunting president as aiming at the bear, his extended arm determining the border between the two states. The artist called it "Drawing the Line." The next day, a storekeeper, Morris Michtom made a toy bear, with an embroidered nose, shoebutton eyes and movable eyes and legs. "Teddy's bear" was what Michtom called it.

Michtom later became president of the Ideal Toy Company. At the end of performance, Zalewski gave Erin the bear as a keepsake of Teddy Roosevelt's presidential visit to Quincy.

Funds Badly Needed To Keep First Parish Open To Tourists

for the repairs and restoration of the church but also to promote the significance of the church's history and architecture.

Management consultant Timothy Reidy of Reidy and Company Inc. is helping the church's fund-raising efforts and planning several benefits in the coming months.

"We need to educate the public about the importance of this project," said Bennett.

"This is not somebody else's church. It's a monument to democracy."

From the beginning, the First Parish Church has been a public meeting place, said Bennett. The first meetinghouse was built in 1666 and was also the seat of government; the second meeting house stood south of the present church site in the middle of what is now Hancock Street, said Bennett.

In 1732 it was replaced by a wooden meetinghouse, where the Rev. John Hancock, the patriot's father, led the congregation. It stood on the site of today's church, colloquially known as the Church of the Presidents, said Bennett.

The stone temple built of Quincy granite is the final resting place for Presidents John Adams and John Quincy Adams and their wives, Abigail Adams and Louisa Catherine Adams.

The land was donated by John Adams in 1822, and John Quincy Adams paid for its construction — $30,488.56 — save for the four 25-ton granite columns in front. It was designed by noted architect Alexander Parris.

"You couldn't build this church for $3 million today," commented Bennett.

"We assume that everybody knows that this is the burial place of two Presidents, but many do not. If this church were located in Washington, D.C., or at Monticello, it would be revered," added Walter Fraser, who is working with Reidy on this project.

Think how many people come to the Jefferson Memorial or the Lincoln Memorial, Bennett continued. "To my knowledge, there is no memorial to John Adams or John Quincy Adams in Washington, D.C."

Bennett described John Adams as one of the nation's real titans of the Continental Congress. He served on the committee with Thomas Jefferson.

Adams deferred to Jefferson; Adams was the more eloquent speaker, but Jefferson had a way with the pen, said Bennett.

Adams also wrote the Massachusetts Constitution, much of which was incorporated into the language of the U.S. Constitution, Bennett noted.

"There is a growing interest in the Adamses today," said Bennett. Well-known biographer David McCullough is working on a John Adams biography which is scheduled to be published in 2000, the bicentennial of the end of his presidency.

The Church of the Presidents is "an undiscovered treasure in Quincy," said Reidy, acknowledging the individuals of other faiths and denominations until recently had not been encouraged to visit the church as a historic site.

Bennett said the church plays an interfaith role in the greater Quincy community. In the 1840s, when the first Roman Catholic church was being established in Quincy, the First Parish Church invited St. Mary's Church to hold its catechism classes here.

And, in the early 1700s, when the Church of England was trying to organize in Quincy, the Rev. John Hancock succeeded in having a law of the commonwealth amended so that tax receipts earmarked for the United First Parish Church could be shared with Christ Church. (That law was changed in 1833.)

Today, the church is active in interfaith relationships, building alliances with the B'hai, Buddhists, Jews, Catholics and other Protestants, said Bennett.

"The two Adamses had an ecumenical faith, an openness of mind," Bennett said. "John Adams as president attended different services on Sunday and critiqued them in his diary. He was just as hard on the Unitarian minister as on the others," he quipped.

"And John Quincy Adams joined with John C. Calhoun in Washington, D.C., to help establish the first Unitarian church, but Adams parted ways with Calhoun over slavery issues."

The church continues to play a role as a public meeting place as well, opening its doors for First Night, for the Woodward School graduations, for the Quincy Choral Society concerts, and for special programs sponsored by the Quincy Historical Society and the United Nations Association of Greater Boston.

In addition, every fourth grade class in the Quincy public schools visits the church as part of its lesson on Quincy history, Bennett said.

"I'd like to think most people would be struck by the historical significance of the Church of the Presidents once they come here, discovering the Adamses' legacy of their beliefs and principles for which they stood," said Fraser.

The church is architecturally significant too," said Reidy. "It is recognized by architects as a masterpiece and is featured as a fine example of early Greek Revival. It also was one of the first structures to be built of Quincy granite," he said.

Architect Parris also used Quincy granite when he designed the Quincy marketplace in Boston.

"We really need to raise money to pay off this loan," said Bennett, and "we will not be able to open up [the church for tours] until we have funding."

"We are confident people will respond when the invitation goes out to citizens of Quincy and neighboring towns," said Bennett.

When people see the scaffolding, they have donated funds on the spot, he said, writing out checks for $100. One was for $500, he said. Even though the fund-raising campaign has not been formally announced, donations can be sent to the Church of the Presidents Fund, 1306 Hancock St., Quincy 02169.

St. Chrysostom's Scouting

About 20 Cub Scouts, Boy Scouts and Venturers recently participated in Scout Sunday observances at St. Chrysostom's Church, Wollaston.

The scouts and their leaders also read and served as acolytes during the service. The highlight of the service was a rendition of "God Bless America," a song which has special connection to the Boy Scouts of America, to whom Irving Berlin dedicated the royalties. At coffee hour after the service were displays of photos from some of the Scouts' and Venturers' events during the past year, including summer camp at T.L. Storer Scout Camp and Parker Mountain High Adventure Base in New Hampshire, ski trips, rock climbing, backpacking, and community service projects.

St. Chrysostom's sponsors Cub Scout Pack 11, for boys in grades 1 through 5, Boy Scout Troop 11, for boys in grades 6 through 12, and Venturer (Explorer) Crew 11, specializing in outdoor high adventure activities for young men and women age 14 to 20. For more information on all Scouting programs at St. Chrysostom's, call Jim Pratt at (617) 773-3101.

City Gives Open Space High Priority

take another look at it."

The city council is scheduled to meet at 7 p.m. March 2 at Quincy High School auditorium to debate the Congress Group Ventures' proposal, which calls for 995 apartments and 200 assisted living units off Quarry Street, to be called Highpoint.

Koch said the legislation filed by state Rep. Ronald Mariano to help communities in Norfolk County acquire open space for new park and recreational facilities could be means to acquire open space.

Mariano was joined with State Reps. Steve Tobin and Bruce Ayers and Sen. Michael Morrissey in filing the bill.

The legislation, drafted by the Norfolk County Advisory Board on which Koch serves, would provide the needed revenue stream to purchase significant tracts of land.

Presently, deed excise taxes are split between the county and the general fund. Mariano's bill would authorize half of the money which goes into the general fund be returned to the individual communities.

"That would be a perfect fit," said Koch, "diverting an existing funding source to this fund."

Last year, $8 million from deed excise taxes went into the fund; taxes collected on Quincy deeds generated $514,286, he said.

That's a conservative estimate, according to the county advisory board coordinator, and the actual numbers could be as much as one-third higher.

Koch said the open space bill is timely, especially with President Clinton talking about open space and state officials voicing concern about preserving open space.

"People are recognizing that the time is now," said Koch.

He acknowledged that Quincy has significant open space now — 2,436 acres of land in the Blue Hills Reservation, 57 acres at Faxon Park, 73 acres at Merry-mount Park and 14.5 acres at Squaw Rock. The marshland along the 27 miles of coastline also is considered as open space.

Five years ago, when the city developed its first open space plan, officials recognized that development demands were pushing into environmentally sensitive areas.

It hasn't changed. For example, the woodlands around Faxon Park are being developed. The size of Faxon Park hasn't changed, but it looks a lot smaller with the development around it, he said.

And, with the proposed comprehensive Quincy High School nearby, even more woodland will be cleared.

Elsewhere in the city, woodlands are being cleared at Batterymarch Park for office buildings. Housing and office buildings are rising from once-vacant land at Crown Colony, and open land in Squantum's Marina Bay is disappearing.

A proposal to develop six acres of a 66-acre parcel in Squantum, commonly known as Lot 23, has received the necessary permitting, but the action is being challenged in court.

In a city which is as dense as Quincy, Koch continued, where the average lot size is small, you need a place for kids to grow up, he said.

"The city never stepped up to the plate to purchase open land years ago, but, thankfully, families with names like Adams and Faxon donated land to the city."

He said he was "cautiously optimistic" about the open space legislation.

Presently, the city is updating its five-year open space plan. Working on the plan are Councillors Bruce Ayers, Paul Harold and Stephen Durkin, Rosemary Nolan, program manager for the public works department, David Murphy, program manager for the parks and recreation department, Peter Kenney of the parks and recreation board, Paul Kennedy of the conservation commission and Koch.

"We've had only a couple of meetings," he said, as the group reviews the city's inventory of lands of conservation and recreational interest.

Cinema Fire Still Under Investigation

Investigation is still ongoing as police and fire officials search for the cause of a small rubbish fire at Quincy Cinemas Monday night.

The blaze, believed to be of suspicious origin, began in a service hallway at 8:58 p.m. and left one cinema employee hospitalized for minor smoke inhalation and over 100 people evacuated from the theaters.

The name of the injured cinema employee was not available.

Squantum Lot 23 Can Be Developed, Judge Rules

By MARILYN JACKSON

A section of Lot 23 in Squantum, which open space advocates had hoped to preserve as a bird sanctuary, can be developed, according to an administrative law judge's ruling.

Preliminary work on the site began Tuesday.

"It's likely we're going to court," said Attorney Bryan Stevens who represents the Save Lot 23 Coalition of conservation-minded citizens and organizations opposed to the development.

More than two years ago, the conservation commission issued its order of conditions for the proposed construction of 136 condominiums at the Meadows at Marina Bay on 6 acres of the 66-acre parcel. Developer Peter O'Connell then appealed to the regional office of the state Department of Environmental Protection (DEP), explained Christopher Carroll of the conservation commission.

That agency issued a superseding order, overruling the conservation commission's restrictions. The coalition then appealed to the DEP's administrative

Quincy Council On Aging Survey:

They're Over 94 And Like Their Independence

The Quincy Council on Aging and South Shore Elder Services are surveying Quincy's elders to determine that their needs are being met and identify whether some services should be improved, according to Brian Buckley, director of the Council on Aging.

Last month, 214 surveys were mailed to each resident over the age of 94, and to date more than 15 percent have responded, he said.

The next step is surveying the nearly 18,000 residents between ages 60 and 94. For this age group a random sample of 700 will be selected, after which a phone survey will follow.

Quincy's most senior residents replied they are in need of services that will enable them to maintain as much independence as possible, listing transportation, home care and snow removal as concerns.

In addition, they identified the need for a friendly visitor and home delivery of library books, which may seem a relatively simple service but which make a world of difference to an older person who is limited

More Down-Scaling Of Units Possibility

Highpoint Go-Ahead Seen On Close Vote

The proposed Highpoint development project on Quarry Street is seen squeaking through the City Council on a close vote, with possible more down-scaling.

The final vote will come next Tuesday, March 2, when the City council meets at 7 p.m. in the Quincy High School auditorium as the P.U.D.-granting authority.

Six votes — two-thirds of the nine-member council — are needed for approval.

City Hall observers believe the project will get the six-vote green light but that there will be a move to reduce the project further before the vote.

Congress Group Ventures originally proposed building 1,641 units, but the project has since been scaled back to the current proposed 1,195 units.

Observers think there will be a move in the council to get the final plan down to or under 1,000 units.

City Council President Peter Kolson said a vote will definitely be taken at the March 2 meeting.

He noted that the meeting is not a public hearing and there will be no input from the public then.

"The public hearings are over," he said. "We have had nearly 15 hours of public hearings, and it is now time to vote on the matter."

The council will accept reports from the public works commissioner, the health commissioner, the city engineer, the director of

90-Day Deadline To Initiate Liquor Licenses

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

If a business acquiring a liquor license has not opened within 90 days, the owner must reappear before the License Board.

At Tuesday's License Board meeting, a discussion led by Fire Chief Thomas Gorman regarding the 90-day time frame was approved by the board.

Owners plans will be reviewed by the board informing them of the progress and the reasons they haven't opened, and a new direction if taken.

There are three businesses in the city that have received liquor and common victualer licenses in the past year, but have not opened as yet.

Chairman Joseph Shea noted that Walsh's Restaurant on Billings Road in North Quincy was sold a year ago, but hasn't opened as yet.

The Quincy Jade Restaurant on Hancock Street in downtown was supposed to reopen months ago across the street in the old Kennedy Studio, but has failed to do so.

Louie's Cafe on Sea Street has been rebuilding since last year, following a fire that all but demolished the land mark restaurant.

All three will be notified to come before the License Board for an update and review.

Not mentioned at the meeting but still an ongoing problem which is due to come before the board soon, is the Quincy Point Pub on Washington Street.

Two years ago owner Steve Barrett spent thousands of dollars and took 18 months to renovate the establishment, only to have the board cancel the liquor license.

The vote to cancel followed protests from neighbors and Ward 2 Councillor Dan Raymondi. That decision is now in the hands of the Alcohol Beverage Control Commission (ABCC).

Public Hearing March 3 On CVS Pharmacy Proposal

The City Council and the Planning Board will hold a public hearing at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, March 3, in the council chambers to consider a CVS's proposal to build a pharmacy on Southern Artery.

Coffman Quincy Trust filed a request for a special permit within the Planned United Development district on behalf of CVS to build a 12,150-square-foot pharmacy with a double drive-through lane at 622-660 Southern Artery.

The proposed development occupies 2.3 acres of the 5.6-plus acres site.

Last year CVS entered a purchase-and-sale agreement with the heirs of Eleanor Cottle who own the former Quincy Lumber Company property which includes the historic Souther Tide Mill. The sale is expected to be finalized this summer.

Plans are available for review at the Department of Planning and Community Development during business hours between 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m.

License Board Briefs

The License Board took the following action at Tuesday's meeting.

•Granted a one day liquor license to St. Ann School, 1 St. Ann Rd, to use at the St. Patrick's Day Dance Friday, March 5 from 8 p.m. to midnight at St. Ann's School Gym.

•Granted a one day liquor license to Star of the Sea Church, 102 Bellevue Rd. to use at their St. Patrick's Day celebration Saturday, March 20 from 7 p.m. to midnight in Star of Sea Church Hall.

•Granted a one day entertainment license to Murphy's Twin Shamrocks, 425 Hancock St. for a performance of a four piece band from Ireland Tuesday, March 2.

•Granted a one day entertainment license to Brigadoon's, 520 Washington St. for St. Patrick's Day, Wednesday, March 17.

•Granted Keno Licenses to the South Quincy Bocce Club, 112R Liberty St. and Owen O'Leary's Restaurant, 579 Southern Artery.

Foot Notes

by Dr. Richard A. Hacker
Surgeon-Podiatrist

METATARSALGIA

Metatarsalgia is the term used for pain in the ball of the foot. Like a headache, it is a symptom and can be caused by different things. As a podiatrist, I have identified several causes of pain on this part of the foot.

Morton's neuroma is a condition that causes numbingly or intense achy pain. Symptoms can extend into the toes. Fibrous build-up pinches the nerve and can feel like a small marble is in the foot.

Another common cause occurs when a metatarsal bone carries more than its share of weight. Pressure pain and joint inflammation will increase. This may be accompanied by a thick callus on the bottom of the foot. Hammer-toes, arthritis and even poorly fit shoes can cause this pressure to build up.

There are many causes of pain in this part of the foot, including fractures, tumors, gout and flat feet. Proper identification is needed to stop pain and prevent this from bothering you another day. Call now and find out why your foot hurts.

Microbrewery Planned For Quincy Point

By MARILYN JACKSON

Two businessmen — a patent attorney and a professional brewer — want to open a microbrewery in Quincy Point at the former Sabatino's Restaurant at 723 Washington St.

Tuesday night, Dale Malone of Cohasset, one of the partners in the proposed restaurant, to be called Quincy Ships Brewing Company, met with neighbors and Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymond at the Fore River Clubhouse to discuss their concept.

Raymond also updated the community about the revitalization work along Washington Street, which is scheduled to begin this spring.

"We've been actively working toward this for nine months," Malone said in a telephone interview this week. He said he and his partner, Paul Mcerlean, had looked at a couple of other sites before then began to focus on the Quincy Point property. They have the property under agreement with the Thomas estate.

Malone said he has been home-brewing for about six years; he earned a chemical engineering degree from M.I.T. before attending law school in Michigan and becoming a patent attorney 13 years ago.

He returned to Boston in 1988 and briefly lived in East Braintree before moving to Cohasset. His wife, who runs Emily Malone Catering from their home, will be involved with the microbrewery, he said.

Mcerlean started brewing malt at a Lowell brewery and most recently has been working at a brew pub outside Albany, N.Y., according to Malone.

"The layout [of Sabatino's] is pretty good for what we have in mind," he continued.

"We would keep the restaurant itself as it is. The dining room, bar and kitchen are laid out well. Attached to the kitchen in the back of the lot is a smaller building that looks like a three-bay garage.

"When it was run as a restaurant, [Sabatino's] used that area for a couple of walk-in coolers. We would put the brewery in that space," he said.

Although that space is not visible from the dining room, the partners are thinking about doing some modifications, perhaps building an atrium, so that the brewing operation could be seen from the outside.

The former restaurant had 94 seats, and Malone and Mcerlean would like to maintain that seating limit in the 4,000-square-foot building. He said altogether about 25 full-time and part-time people would be employed.

Although they would like the microbrewery to open by July 1, they are aware that they need not only the city licensing board approval but state and federal approval as well.

The state issues the manufacturing permit for the microbrewery, and the federal government has reporting requirements.

Parking in the area had been troublesome for Sabatino's, but Malone said he has had preliminary discussions with officials from Harbor Express, which runs the high-speed ferry service to Boston, and they have indicated that the employees probably would be allowed to park there.

"One of the requirements we are faced with is that we have to make a sewer connection to the sewer main" which presently stops in the center of the rotary.

"The sewer connection will affect the timing of [our] project," said Malone. But the long-awaited infrastructure improvements along lower Washington Street are slated to begin this spring.

Free Breakfast Program A Hit At Snug Harbor

Since a free breakfast program was introduced at the Snug Harbor Community School last month, about 150 children have taken part.

In fact, student participation has more than doubled from the earlier breakfast program which was offered only to about 60 students who receive a free or reduced-cost lunch, according to Principal Allan Osborne.

He said the program was made possible through a state Department of Education grant, written by Joanne Morrissey, director of food services for the Quincy public schools. The actual cost of the food purchased for the program is absorbed in the school department's food service budget.

He said the school is promoting the free breakfast too.

Nomination Papers, Anyone?

Nomination papers for this year's city Election will be available May 3 at City Hall.

City Clerk Joseph Shea isn't expecting to see a long line at the Election Department window.

"There hasn't been much interest shown so far," he says. "But, of course, it's still early and you never can tell who might be thinking of running."

Right now, contests loom in Wards 1, 3 and 6.

But it's all quiet at the moment on the rest of the political front.

SHEA

Ward 6, which earlier looked like it would be this year's election hot-spot has cooled off a little.

The seat which is being vacated by Bruce Ayers to concentrate on his new duties as state representative was expected to draw a large field.

But there are only two official candidates so far. Brian McNamee and Maryann Mahony.

McNamee, who ran two years ago, was this year's early-bird candidate, the first to formally announce for any office.

Mahony, Ayers' campaign manager, community activist and a grandmother, made her official announcement this week.

Joseph Newton, who ran two years ago, is expected to run.

But two potential candidates, Tracy Wilson and Sal Giarratani, both of whom ran for the school committee in 1997, have taken themselves out of the Ward 6 ball game.

City Council President Peter Kolson has a challenger in William Weed, a Norfolk County court officers, who has officially announced for the Ward 1 seat.

And, Ward 3 incumbent Pat McDermott has an opponent in John Cain, who has a Wollaston computer products and service business. He announced two weeks ago.

But nothing seems to be stirring in Wards 2, 4 and 5—at the moment at least.

The three incumbent at-large councillors—Tim Cahill, Paul Harold and Frank McCauley—are all expected to seek re-election. David McGillicuddy who was runner-up two years ago is giving some thought to making a second run. But no other names are being mentioned.

Three school committee incumbents are due up for re-election. And all three—Sean Barry, Jo-Ann Bragg and Vice Chairwoman Linda Stice—are going for another term. No challengers have yet stepped forward.

And, that leaves Mayor James Sheets who will be seeking a record sixth term, it appears, his third unopposed.

The only way to get him out of the mayor's office, unless something drastic or unexpected happens to change his mind about running, would see to be with two or three sticks of dynamite.

Anyway, nomination papers will be ready May 3 and the deadline for returning them is July 27, notes Shea.

The preliminary election runoffs—if there are enough candidates—has been set for Sept. 14 and the final election Nov. 2.

If you aren't a registered voter and want to vote this year, you have until Aug. 25 to become one.

And time does fly.

Spring is just 24 days around the corner.

And there are only something like 299 shopping days until Christmas.

TRACY WILSON, one of Quincy's bright young lawyers and political prospects, has a new career: assistant district attorney.

She assumed her new duties last week after her appointment by Dist. Atty. William Keating.

Tracy, a graduate of the Mass. School of Law, has been assigned to Dedham District Court.

"I have always loved criminal law," she says. "This is a wonderful opportunity for me. And it is so interesting."

Accepting the appointment means she will have to put both her private practice and any political plans on hold.

As assistant district attorney she cannot have a private law practice and she'll be too busy to run for political office.

MORRILL

ONE OF THE Quincys Bill Morrill visited in his cross-country tour last fall was in Washington where he made a big hit.

Barbara Gilliland of Newbury Ave. has a friend out there who sent her a copy of an article in a local newspaper about Morrill. And with it a note that said:

"It was so good to meet Bill. He was a pleasure to visit with and it was just like we knew him. Just fun."

On his ambassador-of-goodwill-tour, of the Quincys (13) he proudly spoke about his hometown Quincy, its history and what it is like today.

But, somehow, it apparently got a little garbled in Quincy, Wash.

The newspaper article reported our Quincy "derives its name from John Quincy Adams, the nation's third president."

And, that "it is just 60 miles south of Boston" and has a population of 52,775.

Our Quincy, of course, was named for Col. John Quincy, the president's grandfather. And John Quincy Adams was the sixth, not the third, president.

And, Quincy is next door to Boston, not 60 miles away. And the population is about 88,000.

But Bill doesn't have to drive back there to straighten things out. Barbara has sent a packet of Quincy pamphlets and other literature to her friend in Quincy, Wash., hoping she will spread the word.

MILESTONE: Quincy District Court Clerk Magistrate and former Mayor Arthur Tobin and his first lady, Shirley, are grandparents again—for the 18th time.

ARTHUR and SHIRLEY TOBIN

Daughter Tracey and son-in-law Atty. Bill Phelan became parents of their fourth child, first son, Jan. 26 at Brigham and Women's Hospital.

William Arthur, named for Dad and Papa, weighed in at 9 pounds, 9 ounces. He has three dotting sisters: Rachel, Brianne and Kerry.

The count for Arthur and Shirley now is: 10 granddaughters and eight grandsons. The granddaughters call it "girl power."

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS 1930's POSTCARD is an aerial view showing the heavy industry in the Fore River Basin. Included are the Bethlehem Shipyard, Edison's Edgar power plant and the Cities Services Company's tank farm in the foreground. Now almost 70 years later, after a period of demise, there is a resurgence of activity throughout this area. A close look at the picture reveals both the old steel Quincy Point Bridge and the then new Fore River Bridge in an open position. A new soon-to-be-built temporary steel bridge will be in the same place as the old one. Notice that there was no traffic rotary, that is now being reconsidered. The shipyard on the left is being rejuvenated by MHI. The Edison plant in the top center will soon be demolished and a new gas fired Sithe Energies, Inc. power plant will begin producing electricity here again. In the far distant left, the old Eastern Mass trolley power plant is now the site of Twin Rivers Technologies which produces, among other things, the alternate fuel for diesel buses. Over time it seems that what goes around comes around.

READERS FORUM

Pleased With John Cain's Candidacy For City Council

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

In the Thursday, Feb. 11 issue of The Sun, I was pleased to read that Mr. John Cain was a candidate for Ward 3 city councilor not only because he seems well qualified, but, more importantly, because he's a person of color.

I believe for Quincy to continue to be a livable city, there must be more people of color in government, whether in the police or fire departments, social services, city council, or city hall.

I encourage anyone of color who has a commitment for public service, to serve Quincy, to do so. You will face obstacles but if your commitment and belief in yourself are strong enough, you will overcome those obstacles.

Thoughts To Ponder In Wake of Clinton Trial

Editor, The Quincy Sun,

The members of the U.S. House of Representatives who voted to impeach, and the members of the U.S. Senate who voted guilty on one or both of the Articles of Impeachment were faithful to the mandate of the U.S. Constitution. While upholding their oaths of office, they used good moral judgement.

All 12 members of the Massachusetts Congressional Delegation, some of who have had previous prosecuting experience, continued to embrace the president and ignored the powerful evidence of indefensible wrongdoing.

Until the end of the president's term of office we must sail on the Ship of State with an impaired captain at the helm, or, to put it another way, we must follow an impeached president over his much touted bridge to the 21st century which we know has been built on quicksand. At best, it will be a troubled journey.

But there is hope. When it is time for a change of command, perhaps a wiser and more informed electorate will be careful to avoid making the same error twice. The people will vote for someone who will restore honor, decency, and dignity to the Office of the President.

Among those participating in the memorial service, sponsored by the Quincy Bar Association, were judges Paul Reardon and Gertrude Halloran and District Attorney Myron Lane.

BETHELEHEM MAY BUY NAVY SURPLUS

The Bethlehem Steel Company was expected to purchase Navy built and owned property at Fore River, including lathes and cranes. The GSA declared the property surplus to federal needs and there was no need for the property by the state or local governments.

Meanwhile, Sen. Edward Kennedy and Congressman James Burke traveled to the company headquarters in Bethlehem, Penn., to ask the top executives what plans they had for the yard.

50-MILE HIKE CRAZE HITS QUINCY

The 50-mile hiking craze, inspired by President Kennedy's challenge to the Marine Corps and the subsequent 50-mile hike by Attorney General Robert Kennedy, hit Quincy and surrounding towns. Numerous individuals and groups have taken to the road this week, including a group of Boy Scouts who hiked to the Quincy Council's BSA Camp Massasoit in Cedarville for an overnight stay.

QUINCY-ISMS

Quincy police were seeking the "giggling" gunman and his knife wielding accomplice who robbed Sam's Variety on Billings Rd. of $225. . . Favorite Family Pasta

Whenever we ask our little two year old granddaughter Isabella what she would like for lunch or dinner, she always answers "pasta".

At our house, we enjoy pasta made with just about everything from tomato sauce to pastina cooked with milk and butter.

Today's fettuccine is made with two family favorites, spinach and blue cheese. And it is simple and pleasant to look at.

Favorite Family Pasta

- 1 pound fettuccine
- 2 table spoons margarine
- 1 garlic clove garlic (crushed)
- 4 sprigs scallions (small pieces)
- 2 table spoons four
- 2 cups milk
- 3 cups cooked and drained spinach
- 1/3 cup blue cheese (crumbled)
- salt and pepper to taste

First cook the spinach, drain, chop and set aside. Cook the pasta. While this is cooking, melt the margarine, add the garlic and onion and saute a couple of minutes. Then add the flour and milk blending until smooth.

Add the spinach and blue cheese and stir gently.

Place over hot drained fettuccine with some extra grating cheese if preferred.

P.S. A sharp cheese can be used in place of the blue cheese. Also diced ham or cooked bacon may be added.

(Marie D'Olimpio's cookbook containing many of her recipes in The Quincy Sun is available at the Fruit Basket (near Star Market), Nanci's Barbershop, Elm Street, Braintree, the Cherry Gift Shop at Quincy Hospital, Curry's Hardware on Copeland Street, and Previte's Market on Sumner Street.)

DANCERS AND FOOT INJURIES

Dancers are required to perform repetitive movements and to place their bodies in unusual positions. These two activities also make them prone to injuries. These injuries are usually the result of the overuse and sometimes abnormal biomechanics (the combination of anatomy and how the body part moves through space).

Injuries that may be seen commonly include fractures, stress fractures, neuromas (benign nerve growths in between the toes), tendonitis, sprains and shin splints. If you are experiencing any of these symptoms, consult a qualified Podiatrist.

If you are suffering from these or any other foot related complaints, call us at 773-4300. We are located at 1261 Furnace Brook Parkway, Suite #18, Quincy, and are affiliated with Carney, Quincy and South Shore Hospitals.

For Volunteers, A Labor Of Love Parent to Parent Baby Blanket Program A Special Success

The desire to present every newborn Quincy baby with a baby blanket hand-made by a Quincy resident was a goal that Sandra Hovrath, director of the Commission on the Family's Parent to Parent Newborn Home Visiting Program, was afraid to make public a few months ago.

"We thought it would be such a great gift and really symbolize what a caring community we live in, but we just weren't sure that we could get enough knitters to make the baby blankets."

Hovrath began her outreach by contacting area senior centers and housing communities and by putting information in the Council On Aging newsletter and community newsletters. The response was overwhelming. She credits several community leaders with helping her reach knitters: Lucy Parlee, 1000 Southern Artery, Jan Kelly, Town Brook House, Sarah Ann Frasier, Hancock Park, Peg O'Connor, the Council On Aging-South Shore Blind Center, Cynthia Antonopoulos, Houghs Neck Community Center, Sandra Buckley, Squantum Community Center, Pat Thorley, Atlantic Neighborhood Center, Diane McCracken, the Altrusa Club, Nancy Barry, and Southwest Community Center.

Two hundred blankets later, Sandra can make the goal known. Over 60 knitters and crocheters—all Quincy women—were honored at City Hall recently for their hours of volunteer work in making soft, colorful baby blankets. At a luncheon in their honor, Mayor James Sheets, who described the work as a labor of love, gave the volunteers certificates of appreciation.

Sandra reports that the Parent to Parent volunteers have made home visits to over 100 families of Quincy newborns in the past seven months.

"We started slowly and are up to almost 30 visits a month now, which is more than a fourth of all the new babies in the city." Approximately 1100 newborns are added to the city's population annually.

Heather Chauncey, a volunteer home visitor, said the blankets are the highlight of the gift basket brought to parents of Quincy newborns.

"They are the nicest thing in the basket. Parents are touched that someone in Quincy took the time to make a baby blanket for their newborn," she said.

The Parent to Parent program is a newborn home visiting program offered to all Quincy residents. The purpose of the program is to provide support and encouragement to new parents and to welcome the new babies to the city of Quincy. Trained program volunteers visit the home with a baby basket containing many baby necessities: the homemade baby blankets, diapers, wipes, baby baths, shampoos, cotton swabs, the baby's first book, Goodnight Moon, outlet covers, a pacifier, a baby toy, a teddy bear with a Parent to Parent program bib and a baby bottle.

They also bring a parent's resource bag containing: information about car seats, child development, back sleeping for baby, playgroup information, The Boston Parents Paper, South Shore Baby Journal, The Quincy's Parent's Page, a Parent to Parent magnet, a 28 minute video on infant development, and a copy of the Pink and Blue SANDRA HOVRATH (Right), director of the Commission of the Family's Parent to Parent Program coordinated an effort to make over 200 blankets and gift baskets for the city's newborns with the help of volunteers such as Heather Chauncey (left). The program hopes to eventually present a blanket and basket to every newborn in the city.

Pages. The volunteers remember every sibling in the family with a gift. It may be a bumble ball, a crayon and paper set, a card game or a 3D puzzle. 18 volunteers have completed the home-visiting program to date, with another group beginning their training in February. The Commission on the Family, under the direction of Linda Stice, created the Parent to Parent program. It is funded through the Massachusetts Department of Education through a grant administered by Quincy Community Action Program.

The City of Quincy Commission on the Family Parent to Parent program thanks the following knitters and crocheters for their time and caring:

Joan Durato, Jenny Rush, Rosemary Reinhart,

Rose Veneto, Millie Veneto, Norma Kelly, Roberta Driscoll, Lorraine Gallagher, Edna Scott, Doris Stanton, Lillian Murphy, Eunice Ford, Gertrude Ennis, Charlotte Brenner, Bruno Stracco, Josephine Tutela, Isabella Barra, Mabel Driscoll, Mary Duann, Jeanette McGibbon, Ethel Rounds, Phyllis Hohmann, Helen Buckley, Jean Smart, Sybil Smith, Mildred Michael, Betty DeChristofaro, Ruth Knowles, Amtoinette La Fleur, Mil Millis, Selma Burgess, Selina Rashleigh, Lucy Bowman, Dot Jenness, Ann Bates, Eleanor McDonald, Josephine Cook, Barbara Stapleton, Schofield, Alice Cannon, Jeanette McDonald, Pearl Riley, Madeline Baroud, Tina Bencks, Ty Ash, Helen Murphy, Bee Siddens, Mary Cann, Ann Howie, Phyllis Zachary, Doris Mitchell, Carolyn O'Toole, and Shelia Barry.

Volunteers who would like to make baby blankets or do home visits are encouraged to call Sandra or Heather at 689-8352. The program supplies the yarn.

The survey also has enabled each agency to reach out to Quincy seniors who have been isolated or unaware of what services are available.

"We are constantly trying to identify needs of our seniors," said Buckley. "With the help of South Shore Elder Services, we have conducted a number of different needs assessments over the years.

"This is the first time that we have conducted such a large survey, but the information we compile should be well worth the effort," Buckley said.

"This is a very large project," he continued, "and it couldn't be done without the help of the Planning Department, the City Clerk's office and the Data Processing Department. Their help has been a real plus."

BRIAN BUCKLEY

"We are identifying the services needed."

If there are any questions or if anyone needs help completing the survey, call the Council on Aging at (617) 376-1245, or contact Susan Rowelett at South Shore Elder Services at (781) 848-3939, ext. 331.

Buckley said once all the information is compiled, the Council will look at it closely and help South Shore Elder Services put together its three-year plan to assist Quincy residents.

"At this level, we are identifying the services needed and clients who may have fallen through the cracks," Buckley said. "Whether the Council on Aging provides the service or refers the individual to an agency will depend on that senior, he said.

THE COMMON WART

Warts are caused by the human papillomavirus that enters through tiny breaks in the skin. Most go away on their own eventually; however, products are available to expedite their disappearance if you are impatient. Ointments, liquids, and plasters for wart removal are now available over the counter in most drugstores. The most common ingredient is salicylic acid, a chemical that burns away the wart - which is really a harmless mound of rapidly multiplied, but no longer alive, skin cells. The acids aren't selective and must be used as directed, as they will burn healthy tissue, too. These preparations require multiple applications between which you should scrub thoroughly, and remove any dried dead skin cells with a pumice stone.

If you are concerned about any growth on your skin, see your physician. While most skin problems are harmless, the ones that are not require immediate attention. At AFFILIATED MEDICAL GROUPS, located at 700 Congress St., Quincy, we listen to your concerns. We are affiliated with Quincy and South Shore Hospitals. Please call us at 617-472-2550; office hours by appointment.

P.S. Over-the-counter wart removal products should never be used on genital warts. Those require treatment by a doctor.

Marina Place To Host Grand Open House Sunday

Marina Place, a new 110-unit independent and assisted living residence in North Quincy, will host a grand open house on Sunday, Feb. 28 from noon to 3 p.m.

Community members will have an opportunity to see Marina Place fully furnished and decorated. Guests can also sample the facility's cuisine prepared by Marina Place's Director of Dining Services Jack Snow. The menu will feature food stations including hors d'oeuvres, hand-carved meats and desserts.

Local pianist Paul McWilliams will provide entertainment.

South Shore residents are invited to tour Marina Place and meet the staff of the community's newest resource for seniors. Marina Place is located in Marina Bay at Four Seaport Dr.

Marina Place will officially open its door to residents Friday, Feb. 26, according to The Newton Group, LLC, the project sponsor. Marina Place caters to local area seniors from throughout the South Shore. The new facility will create an estimated 60 full and part-time jobs.

Priority residency applications are being accepted. For more information about Marina Place and the grand open house, call Laura Andrus or Joan Wright at 617-770-3264.

Those wishing to attend may send their check payable to Quincy High School to Mrs. Marilyn Waywood, Quincy High School, 52 Coddington St., Quincy, MA 02169.

Reservations must be received by Thursday, March 4.

Maryann Mahony Candidate For Ward 6 City Council Seat

Maryann Mahony of 18 Hummock Rd. announces her candidacy for the Ward 6 city council seat.

Mrs. Mahony is a community activist and served as campaign manager for Bruce Ayers in his successful runs for the city council and state representative. She has been active in the campaigns of other candidates.

Ayers is vacating the Ward 6 seat at the end of this year to concentrate on new duties as state representative.

Mrs. Mahony has formed her campaign committee headed by Ralph Ames, Quincy Police detective, as campaign chairman, Judith Brams, secretary, Frank Mahony, treasurer.

She cited as campaign issues she would speak out on: the future of Squantum Gardens, open space at Marina Bay, north and south-bound traffic in North Quincy especially in the areas of Hancock and Ken-NQHS Students To Get Close Up Look At Washington D.C.

Nine North Quincy High School students and their social studies teacher, Thomas Bourque, will get a first-hand view of Washington, D.C., next week when they participate in the Close Up Foundation government studies program.

The students are Dorothy Cronin, Brendan Griffin, Amanda McKenna, Laura Murphy, Rachel O'Hara, Kim Pham, Brian Radell, Anne Shields and Katrina Skayne.

Their visit will include attending seminars on Capitol Hill and meeting government officials, political figures, lobbyists and a representative of the Washington press corps to learn more about the federal process.

The students, along with teachers and students from Holyoke, Weston, Attleboro and Middleboro, will meet with their peers from other sections of the country for daily debates, discussions and activities. These workshop groups focus on current events and the governing process.

"One of the main goals of the program is to show students that each person can have an impact on the community," said Steve Janger, president of Close Up Foundation.

He said the teachers accompanying the students are participants, rather than chaperones, in a program designed to familiarize them with issues and innovative educational methods.

Founded in 1971, the Close Up Foundation is a non-profit, non-partisan organization founded to educate students and teachers about the democratic process and the role of the individual.

A Congressional appropriation provides fellowships for teachers and students to attend. Other funds supporting the program include the David and Lucile Packard Foundation, the Prentice Hall School Division and the Millipore Foundation.

"We offer students the opportunity to see Washington as a living city by taking them into the buildings they often see only on television and encouraging them to question law and policymakers they may only have read about," said Janger. "We have found that they usually return home with an interest in both national and community affairs. They want to get involved."

MCAS Info Meeting At NQHS

North Quincy High School will be holding an informal meeting on this year's and last year's MCAS administration, Monday, March 1 at 7p.m. in the Media Center.

Crime Watch

By ROBERT HANNA
Crime Prevention Officer
Quincy Police Department

Citizen Police Academy March 22

The next "Citizen Police Academy" will begin Monday, March 22. We have increased this program to an 11-week program. The program will be held at the Quincy Police Headquarters from 6:30 to 10 p.m. each Monday evening.

Students who are selected will learn about police procedure, police weapons, domestic violence, criminal law, search and seizure, juvenile investigations, finger printing, drunk driving, traffic investigations and many other police topics.

Students will have an opportunity to ride-along with a police officer and take a trip to the firing range to fire our weapons.

Interested residents can obtain an application at the front desk of the Quincy Police Headquarters, 1 Sea St. Applications must be submitted by Monday, March 15.

Applicants must be at least 21 years of age and registered voters in the City of Quincy.

For further information, contact Officer Bob Hanna, project director, at 617-745-5719.

Personal Note

I wish to thank the Citizen Police Academy Alumni Association for their assistance at the recent Child Identification Program held at the Quincy Masonic Temple. Twenty-three members of the Alumni volunteered to finger print more than 400 youngsters that day. A job well done by a great group of individuals.

YOUR LIFE

American Heart Association

(NAPS)—Here's some encouraging news for anyone who's ever felt tired of being tired. A new book has been published with ten simple strategies to soar past fatigue, boost energy, shed stress and reclaim your enthusiasm for life. The book, The Energy Edge (LifeLine Press $19.95), is written by Pamela Smith, R.D., the author of the bestselling Eat Well—Live Well.

According to Smith, millions of Americans unknowingly allow fatigue to control their lives. You can recognize the warning signs by asking yourself these questions:

- Am I always tired, even after a full night's rest?
- Am I irritable at certain times of the day?
- Do I have trouble thinking clearly and remembering things?
- Do I have difficulty staying consistent with an exercise routine?
- Do I crave sweets much of the time?

According to the author, energy has become a most precious and rare commodity. We're up earlier and work later. We're so busy scheduling what we have to do, there's no energy left for what we want to do. However, statistics have shown that one out of five people suffers from extreme fatigue. In her book, Pam Smith reports that life doesn't have to be that way.

In The Energy Edge, readers learn how to:

For The First Time Quincy College's Spring Enrollment Higher Than Fall

By MARILYN JACKSON

For the first time in Quincy College's history, spring enrollment is higher than fall.

Dr. G. Jeremiah Ryan said 4,149 students are enrolled for the spring semester, compared to 3,986 last fall, which represents a 2.5 percent increase. Of that number, 1,539 are full-time students and 2,610, part-time students. The fall term enrollment exceeded budgeted projections, he said.

A year ago, the school's spring term enrollment totaled 4,289.

In addition, the college's winter term, an intensive three-week program, saw a 10 percent increase enrollment of 522 students, 196 of whom were from other colleges, Ryan said.

"More and more of our students are finding this intensified term a great way to catch up or to get ahead on required courses," he said. Liberal arts courses were the most popular, followed by business courses.

About 70 percent of the students are women, and two-thirds of the enrollment are evening students. He said the ratio of part-time to full-time students is 2:1.

During the past two years, Boston has had more people attending college than in previous years, said Ryan. "That probably still is the case," he said, although he has not reviewed the zip codes of the students.

Two of the college's programs are doing "exceptionally well," he said. "The computer science program is growing by leaps and bounds. It's up 50 percent from last spring."

He also attributed the enrollment increase to the growth in the liberal arts program because of guaranteed transfer agreements Quincy College has entered with UMass/Boston, Curry College, Suffolk University, Bridgewater State College, Pine Manor and the Massachusetts College of Pharmacy for students in the health science program.

Just recently, Quincy

College entered an agreement with Curry College which will guarantee Quincy nursing students full transfer credit as they pursue a bachelor of science degree in nursing from Curry.

Ryan said enrollment numbers have dropped at the Plymouth satellite campus which Quincy College opened in 1991.

"We're concerned about that and are doing some market research to see what has happened, who didn't come back and where they went.

"Plymouth has become more competitive. Eight years ago, no other college was there. Now, Fisher, Curry, Lesley, Suffolk and Bay State are all within a few miles and are serving that marketplace. It's highly competitive.

"Enrollment there has been on a rollercoaster. It was up last spring, way up, but in the fall it was down, and this spring it is way down," he said noting that

TWO COLLEGE STUDENTS enter the front door of Quincy College to attend classes. College President G. Jeremiah Ryan says spring enrollment this year has increased by 2.5 percent from last year's enrollment.

468 students are enrolled for the spring semester, compared to 583 a year ago.

The school offers associated degrees in business, liberal arts, paralegal, criminal justice, nursing, environmental science and hospitality.

This year Quincy College began offering a coastal ecology class in Plymouth, due to the fragility of the environment in southeastern Massachusetts. "We hope to build on that." Basically, though, liberal arts are the most popular classes, followed by business.

Ryan said an increasing number of international students are attending Quincy College too. This spring 498 are enrolled, compared to 451 a year ago and 371 in 1997.

Sixty countries from five continents are represented among the student population. The majority, he said, come from Japan, China, Kenya, Nigeria and Nepal. Sixty are from Nepal, he said.

In his report to the board, Ryan said the college is on target to be Y2K compliant by July 1.

"We haven't had to spend anything yet," said Ryan.

"Because we were late in acquiring technology, all the computers on campus were purchased within the last three years, and all are Y2K O.K.

"We're very lucky," he continued. "Because Quincy College is semi-autonomous, it relies on the City of Quincy for its financial services and personnel record-keeping, and the city is fully compliant.

"That took a lot of worry away," he said. "The only equipment that needs to be replaced are the computers with the temperature controls in the heating, ventilation and air conditioning system."

Highpoint Go-Ahead Seen On Close Vote

traffic and parking and the director of inspectional services as well as the city's environmental consultants, Weston and Sampson, which were not available earlier.

Last month the Planning Board voted 2-to-1 in favor of the project but imposed several conditions on the multi-million-dollar proposal, including setting a maximum number of 995 apartments and 200 assisted living units.

Fifty percent of the rental apartments may be one-bedroom units; the other half, two-bedroom units.

Another requirement the planning board recommended was that all paving and infrastructure — sewage and drainage work on Quarry Street must be completed before half of the units can be occupied and that all other traffic improvements must be completed before occupancy can reach 75 percent.

Larger, lined water mains must be installed to improve fire flows and a second 12-inch pipe will be required to provide a second large main loop to Quincy Hospital.

During construction, the developer must address dust, noise, insect and rodent control, radon and solid waste issues.

Most councillors agree that the number one issue regarding Highpoint is traffic, but the issues of sewerage, water pressure and the potential impact to the schools, plus the cleanup of the former landfill must be addressed as well, they said.

Ward 4 Councillor Michael D'Amico said the council had asked the city's traffic engineer, Jack Gillon, to study the different intersections of Willard, Stedman and Quarry streets not included in the initial traffic study and take into consideration the effect on all of the side roads off Quarry Street in an effort to avoid cut-through traffic.

His comments will carry a lot of weight, said D'Amico.

Free Breakfast Program A Hit At Snug Harbor

During the first week, Thing 1, a character from Dr. Seuss book, "The Cat in the Hat," visited the children in kindergarten through grade 5 and teachers sat down with the youngsters who were having breakfast.

In addition, said Osborne, the school has hung colorful posters throughout the school publicizing the breakfast.

"We're offering incentives too," he continued. "We're starting a breakfast club." The children have a card, which is punched each time they eat breakfast. Once they have 10 punches in their card, they receive a very small surprise, a trinket, he explained.

"Once the card has been punched 20 times, their card is put into a hat for a drawing for a little bit bigger prize," he said.

Teachers handed out notices for the children to take home to their parents, he said, and the parents will be invited grade by grade to have breakfast with their children.

He said the breakfast program starts at 7:45 a.m., a half-hour before school begins.

"But if the free breakfasts get to be more popular, we'll have to start a little bit earlier," Osborne said.

He said Deanna White-Hebert, a classroom teacher, is helping to coordinate the program with Gladys Picot, the school's cafeteria manager, and the school department added a lunch aide to staff the breakfast program.

Also assisting with the project is Karen Guttentag, a child nutrition outreach coordinator from Project Bread.

Osborne pointed out that many studies have demonstrated that students who eat a good, nutritious breakfast before school increase their math and reading scores, improve their attention spans and are better behaved in class.

In one such study, conducted in a pilot program in Minnesota, the students who were given a free breakfast at school experienced a 40 to 50 percent decline in discipline referrals and school nurses noted a significant decline in morning visits to their offices.

Teachers also found that their students were more energetic and were better able to stay alert and concentrate throughout the entire morning.

Research conducted by the U.S. Department of Agriculture has suggested that school breakfast programs are nutritionally superior to other breakfasts, including those eaten at home, he added.

Although Osborne has not asked the teachers whether the students have demonstrated better scores or improved behavior, he said the teachers as well as the neighborhood council have embraced the idea.

Squantum School To Receive Environmental Education Money

Three Squantum School students will accept a $300 check tomorrow (Friday) from the Wal-Mart Foundation to continue the school's efforts to teach environmental awareness.

Viet Pham, grade 2, Joshua Babbitt, grade 3, and Kimberly Pham, grade 4, will represent the many students who participate each day in Squantum's schoolwide recycling program and its butterfly garden environmental education project.

The Butterfly project is annual attempt on the part of the students and teachers to beautify the school grounds by planting flowers and a tree and ridding the school of litter in order to create a beautiful "butterfly garden."

Donald Houghton, Squantum School principal, and Ellen Pierce, first grade teacher, will accompany the children to the 9:15 a.m. presentation at the Wal-Mart Store by the Falls, Quincy.

The presentation is part of an $8 million commitment by Wal-Mart to encourage outstanding community, nonprofit environmental education and recycling programs.

"We are all concerned about the condition of our planet, but its true future lies in the hands of younger generations," Emerson Goodwin, Director of the Wal-Mart Foundation, said about the importance of earmarking money for student environmental causes.

Free Pepper Spray Training Class At Hospital

A free pepper spray training class will be offered the first Tuesday of each month from 5-8 p.m. at Quincy Hospital, 114 Whitwell St., in Conference Room A.

Participants will learn offensive and defensive techniques for pepper spray use as well as differences in strengths of the product and how to work through exposure.

Comfortable clothing is recommended and advance registration is required.

To register, call the Hospital Security Department, (617) 376-4175.

Telling Your Kids About The Move

You may be thrilled about moving into your new home.

Whether it be the new neighborhood, your spacious new bedroom or whirlpool tub, you realize that the stress of moving all your belongings into a new place will be worth it.

One thing that may be tough as well is discussing the move with your kids. Making new friends. Attending a new school. What will they do?

Children see moving differently than their parents do, and they feel like their world has been turned upside down. Little do they realize that your move comes on the heels of financial success that has allowed you to seek a bigger home filled with more luxuries and privacy.

If you're moving, it's not necessary to announce this big change to your children immediately. However, if you have teenagers, they may want to be treated as adults and told the moment you decide.

On the other hand, there's no need to worry your preschooler far in advance.

Be prepared for things to come along a tad slowly right after the move. You should expect your little ones to be disturbed more after the move than before it. The children won't know anybody at school yet, and if you move during the summer, they may have limited time to meet anyone their own age.

If you and your children find making new friends and adjusting to the neighborhood are going slowly, throw a housewarming party for yourselves and invite all the adults and children on the block.

Remember that the newness to your children will eventually wear off. The new home and its environment will take some getting used to, but in the long run, everything will work out just fine.

Jack Conway Adds Four Agents To Expanding Quincy Office

Jack Conway and Company recently added four sales agents to its expanding Quincy real estate office, company officials announce.

The associates, while new to Conway, are top producers in the real estate industry and have been serving Quincy for many years. All four were formerly affiliated with Hunneman and Company/Coldwell Banker, which recently closed its Quincy office.

Lynn Houghton, who was appointed manager of the expanded office, is well-known in the community.

She is the former owner of Morrill Real Estate in Quincy, immediate past president of the Quincy Rotary Club, and secretary of the board of directors of the American Red Cross.

Former office manager Annemarie Barton has stepped down to spend more time with her family, said company President Richard Cahill. Barton remains part of the 16-member sales force.

Sandra Fennelly, a 21-year-veteran of the real estate industry and a former vice president of Hunneman and Company/Coldwell Banker, specializes in the Marina Bay community in North Quincy. She worked with the O'Connell family--developers of Marina Bay-- as the original marketer of the luxury high-rise and townhouse residences on the city's waterfront.

Gloria Skolnick has been working with buyers and sellers in Quincy for the last 10 years. She is known for her ability to match the right house to the right buyer. She began her career working with Houghton at Morrill Real Estate.

Corinne Gretchell specializes in the Houghs Neck section of the city, where she lives. In addition to selling homes, she has experience renting apartments and condominiums in Boston.

"We are delighted to welcome our new associates to the Conway family," said company Chairman Jack Conway. "Our Quincy office has always had a strong presence in the marketplace and this will help us expand our service."

Conway's Wollaston office opened more than 25 years ago with Cahill as its first manager.

Norwell-based Jack Conway and Company is the largest independently owned real estate company in Massachusetts, with more than 600 agents in 36 offices from Boston to Cape Cod.

1999 Quincy Kiwanis Club Youth Hockey Tournament

QUINCY BANTAM A team went 4-0 enroute to its title in the 1999 Quincy Kiwanis Hockey Tournament.

Quincy Bantams, Pee Wees Crowned Kiwanis Champions

South Boston And Lewiston, ME Also Win Titles At 26th Annual Tournament

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

The 26th annual Quincy Kiwanis Club Tournament had a distinctive local flavor as two hometown entrants claimed championships Sunday at Quincy Youth Arena.

The Quincy Bantam "A's" pulled out a one-goal victory while the Quincy Pee Wee "A's" shutout their opponent to win their respective divisions. In the two other championship games, the Lewiston, Maine Squirt "A" team and South Boston Mite "A's" recorded excitingly close victories.

The week-long tournament is expected to raise more than $10,000 for the Kiwanis Club of Quincy. Proceeds will benefit the club's charities, notably scholarships and camps, local needy children and the Kiwanis Pediatric Trauma Institute at the New England Medical Center in Boston.

Following each final game, trophies were presented to the championship team and runners-up by Kiwanis members.

The club singled out tournament co-chairman Michelle Stenberg for spearheading the event which featured 32 teams including entrants from Greater Boston, Connecticut, Maine, Rhode Island and California.

Here's a wrap-up of the four divisions:

BANTAMS

In the Bantam championship, Quincy earned a hard-fought 3-2 victory over Lewiston, Maine, as Bill McKeon scored the game-winner with 29 seconds left in the third period. Quincy centerman Tom Hughes won the face-off in the Lewiston end and McKeon broke in from the right circle and slipped the puck past the Lewiston goalie Matt Roy. Hughes picked up an assist on the goal.

Lewiston had tied the game with just under four minutes in the third period as Jay Verrill notched his second goal of the game. Verrill took a feed from center ice and shot a low-slapper just inside the blue line which eluded Quincy netminder Bruce Maggio.

Verrill put Lewiston on the scoreboard first with 4:23 left in the first period. Matt Fillion recorded the assist.

Quincy tied it up with about a minute left in the first period as Jordan Virtue lit the lamp unassisted. Quincy's momentum carried over into the second period as McKeon scored his first goal just 56 seconds into the second. Daniel Sheehan assisted and Quincy led 2-1. The score remained 2-1 until Lewiston's tying goal with 3:52 left in the game.

Both teams had glittering scoring chances in the game's waning moments and it appeared the final was headed to overtime until McKeon's second goal gave Quincy the victory.

For the tournament, Quincy went 4-0. On its way to the championship, the local Bantams defeated Needham, 8-2; handled the South Coast Sabers from California, 7-2; and blanked Lewiston 4-0.

Also skating for the Quincy Bantams were Matt Conso, David Germain, Brian O'Hanley, Brian Lewis, Kevin Pattern, Shawn Richardson and John Ryan. Coaches are Dennis Murray, Rick Pattern and Bill Richardson.

PEE WEES

In the only one-sided title game, the Quincy Pee Wees blanked Billerica, 7-0 behind the four-point effort of Matt Grazioso who scored two goals and assisted on two others.

After a scoreless first period, Quincy scored three quick goals in a three-minute span in the second period and never looked back. Matt Lavery scored the first of his two goals with 5:19 left in the second. Grazioso assisted. Kevin Richardson put Quincy on top 2-0 with a goal assisted by Ryan Conley and Matt Germain. A minute later, Grazioso scored his first goal with Andrew Pattern assisting.

Already in control, Quincy went up 4-0 just 16 seconds into the third period as Germain scored with Richardson assisting. About a minute later, Quincy took a commanding 5-0 lead as Grazioso notched his second goal. Josh Giordani and Tim Duggan assisted.

Lavery and Giordani added late goals to make the final score 7-0. Grazioso assisted on Lavery's goal while Lavery assisted on Giordani's score for his three-point performance.

Goalie Nick Manning was solid between the pipes to earn the shutout.

Quincy's victory over Billerica avenged an earlier 6-3 loss to the Indians. The locals had defeated Braintree (6-2) and Middlesex, Conn. (5-2) to advance to the finals.

Billerica entered the finals with a perfect 3-0 record. Besides Quincy, Billerica had defeated Braintree (5-1) and Middlesex (8-0).

Also suiting up for Quincy were Pee Wees Steve Kelly, Brendan Conley, Liam Powers, Kyle Carmody, Tim Duggan, Pat Maxey, Joe Norris and Ryan Feldhoff. Coaches are Al Grazioso, Mark Giordani and Stephen McGowan.

SQUIRTS

Lewiston, Maine nipped the Riverside, Jets from California 2-1 in a double-overtime thriller which featured end-to-end rushes, sparkling defense and stellar goaltending.

Riverside got on the board first with 5:29 left in the first period on a goal by Jacob Newton assisted by Alex Hudson. Ten seconds later, Lewiston tied the game as Kevin LaPlante lit the lamp. Erik Rousseau recorded the assist.

There were plenty of scoring chances during regulation but Lewiston goalie Tyler Hall and Riverside netminder Brian Nason made save after save to push the game into overtime. After a five-minute overtime left the teams still knotted at 1-1, the puck was dropped for a second overtime.

The drama ended quickly 46 seconds into the second OT when Erik Roussau fired in the game-winner with an assist by LaPlante, his second point of the game.

The Squirt division had the most competition as 12 teams vied for a spot in the championship.

Lewiston advanced to the finals with a 4-0 shutout over Canton Sunday morning. Earlier in the week Lewiston posted wins against Weymouth (4-2), Canton (6-2), and skated to a scoreless tie with South Boston.

Riverside's loss in the championship game was the team's only blemish for the week. The Jets advanced to the finals with a 7-2 win over the Mohawks from Randolph-Avon-Holbrook-Stoughton in the semi-finals. Earlier victims were Walpole (5-4), Brockton (5-2) and Hyde Park (8-1).

Quincy Squirts went 1-1-1 for the tournament. The locals defeated the Mohawks, 6-3; fell to Newport, R.I., 5-4; and tied Newton, 1-1.

Skating for the Quincy Squirts were Stephen Bythrow, Craig Calley, Matthew Connors, Jonathan Conso, Patrick Devlin, Paul Fasoli, Glenn Gibbons, Matthew Giordani, Michael MacPherson, Raymond Marchand, Michael McKeon, Brendan Mulcahy, Daniel Poggi, Christopher Rooney, Frank Sorrento and Matthew Tobin. The team is coached by Jeff Giordani, Paul Bythrow and William Lawless.

MITES

South Boston edged Charlestown, 5-4, in a game that saw seven goals scored in the third period alone, including the game-winner with just over a minute to play.

Southie's Peter Flaherty was the hero as he scored the game-winning goal with 1:07 left in the third period. Flaherty's title-clinching goal overshadowed the offensive clinic put on by Jimmy Hayes of Charlestown. Hayes scored three goals in a 48-second span near the end of the third period to tie the game at 4-4 and set the stage for Flaherty's heroic goal. Hayes nearly notched his fifth goal of the game and force overtime. With about 10 seconds left, Hayes whistled a wrist shot from the right point but Southie goalie Frankie Lynch made the save to ensure victory.

Hayes put Charlestown on top, 1-0, with a first-period goal unassisted. Southie's Robert Lerro tied it up with 2:23 remaining in the second period.

In the third, Southie took what appeared to be a commanding 4-1 lead with goals by Kyle Rooney, Michael Carr and Lerro. Only 3:44 minutes remained in the game when Hayes went to work for Charlestown.

Hayes scored his second goal with 3:19 remaining and 39 seconds later completed his hat trick as he broke in and stick-handled past a few Southie defenders and fired a shot past goalie Lynch. Just 12 seconds later, Hayes nailed his fourth goal unassisted. Suddenly, the game was up for grabs.

While the afternoon's second overtime loomed, Flaherty, who had assisted on Southie's third and fourth scores, ended it in regulation as he scored with Rooney assisting. Charlestown pulled its goalie but couldn't get the equalizer.

Southie advanced to the finals with a 7-1 victory over Quincy in the semi-finals. Other victories were against Braintree (6-2), Weymouth (4-3) and Charlestown (6-2).

Charlestown advanced to the finals with a 7-1 semifinal win over Dorchester. Earlier in the tournament, Charlestown had defeated Weymouth (8-4), tied Braintree (5-5) before bowing to South Boston.

The Quincy Mites had an up-and-down week. They opened with a 7-1 win over the Mohawks; fell to Dorchester, 4-1; rebounded against Lewiston, Maine by a 6-2 score but were erased in the semi-finals by South Boston.

Suiting up for the Quincy Mite Wolf Pack were Doug Haskins, Kenny Patey, Brandon Gilmore, Kyle Tobin, Mike Leone, Johnny McInnis, Kevin Lewis, Matt Flaherty, Chris Devlin, Teddy Walsh, James Patten, Brian Sullivan, Johnny Magliozzi, Mikey Griffin, Ricky Penzo and Stephen Barresi. The team is coached by Jack McInnis, Rick Patten and Ted Walsh.

'White' Wins Kiwanis Coaches Game, 7-4

The "White Team" defeated the "Blue Team" 7-4 in the second annual Quincy Kiwanis Hockey Tournament coaches game played Friday night at Quincy Youth Arena.

Both squads were undermanned but gutted it out in an exciting game that was not decided until the third period when the White team scored three goals to break a 4-4 tie.

Dennis Murray, coach of the Quincy Bantam A team, had two goals for the White team, including the game winner.

The White team got on the scoreboard first 1:53 into the game when Jack McInnis fired a wrist shot from the left point which beat Blue goalie Jim Coffey of Quincy. McInnis is the head coach of the Quincy Mite A team. Coffey plays net in the Quincy Executive League.

Paul Bythrow, Quincy Squirt A coach, assisted on the McInnis goal.

The White team went up 2-0 with four minutes left in the first when Billy Lawless scored on 'air' assist by Dave Campbell. Lawless also coaches the Quincy Squirt A team; Campbell is head coach of the Weymouth Squirt "A's."

As the first period wound down, Dennis Croke of the Quincy Kiwanis Club and former standout at Archbishop Williams High School, raced down the left side. His low slap-shot just inside the blue line beat White goalie Jim Campbell, a former star goalie for Quincy High School. Croke's goal made it a 2-1 game at the first intermission.

The White team pushed its lead to 3-1 five minutes into the second period when Lawless scored his second goal. Rich Bekerian of the Weymouth Squirt "A's" assisted. Forty seconds later, Bekerian scored to pad the White team's lead, 4-1.

However, the Blue team refused to quit and rallied for three goals in less than two minutes to tie the game at 4-4. With just under six minutes to play in the second, Eddie Nolfie of the Mohawk Mite "A's" lit the lamp assisted by Wayne Foley, coach of the Quincy Squirt B team. Twenty seconds later, Rick Patten, an assistant coach of the Quincy Mite "A's," scored. Foley again assisted.

Patten then returned the favor as he fed Foley who scored with 4:10 remaining in the second period. The teams entered the third period knotted at 4-4.

Both teams had chances to break the tie during the first half of the third period but Coffey and Campbell made some dazzling saves to keep the game even. Murray then struck for back-to-back goals about 90 seconds apart to give the White team a commanding 6-4 lead.

Murray's first goal with 5:25 remaining was assisted by McInnis and Ricky Sousa, coach of the Newport, R.I. Squirt A team. A minute and half later, Murray connected again on a low wrist shot as Kiwanis Club President Bob Bosworth found Murray all alone in front of the net.

The White team closed out the scoring with just over a minute left to play when Bob Almeida, another Newport Squirt A coach, notched a goal. Bosworth and McInnis assisted.

Also participating in the coaches game were Jeff Giordani, head coach of the Quincy Squirt A team and Chris Lydon and Jeff Franklin, both of the Mohawks.

High Schools In Hockey Play-Off Doubleheader Friday At UM/Boston

North Quincy Vs. Durfee At 6 P.M. Quincy Vs. Braintree At 8:30 P.M.

By CHARLES ROSS
A hockey doubleheader Friday evening will feature both local high schools in opening round play-off games at the University of Massachusetts/Boston rink.

Both Quincy and North Quincy high hockey teams qualified for the Eastern Mass. South Section hockey tournament that begins this week.

The Red Raiders will play Durfee High School of Fall River Friday at 6 p.m. at UMass/Boston. The Presidents will face off against Braintree at 8:30 p.m. Friday at the same rink.

North Quincy played Durfee twice this year, winning 5-2 and losing 5-4. Coach Bob Doyle said that the loss, "came at a time when the team was in a bit of a meltdown. I think we match up very well with them and hope we can come out of Friday night with a win to advance to the next round."

Quincy defeated the Wamps of the Bay State

League last year to knock them out of the tourney and Quincy Coach Bob Sylvia expects that they may have a bit of revenge on their minds. As far as his team, Sylvia said they're ready for the post-season.

"We've been preparing all season and we're ready for the playoffs. One of the reasons we've played three lines, six defensemen and two goaltenders all year is to have everybody ready to go," he said.

5 Local Athletes Compete In All-State Track Championship

Five Quincy athletes competing at four different schools all performed well at the All-State Championships held at the Reggie Lewis Center in Roxbury.

Kellyrose O'Brien of North Quincy, a sophomore, was the highest individual performer with a 10th place finish in the 600 (1:42.25), her second best time of the year.

Freshman Kylie Mansfield of Fontbonne turned in a personal best of 5:26.29 in the mile, breaking the school record she set a week ago in the Class B meet which was good for 13th place overall. She is coached by Bruce Richardson.

Junior Russell Mullen of Quincy High, the lone Quincy boy in the meet, finished 15th with a 1:28.10. He is coached by Scott King.

Junior Lynda Wilson

placed 14th overall in the two-mile run, the #1 class A and OCL performer in her event racing to an 11:54.93, her second best ever.

In the relay events, senior Courtney Paquette of Notre Dame Academy in Hingham led her 4 x 800 relay team to a 7th place overall. Her 2:29.2 split helped her team clock a 10:05.33. She is coached by Rick Kates.

Youth Girls Softball Registration March 8

Quincy Youth Girls Softball will hold a registration night Monday, March 8 from 6 to 8 p.m. at St. Ann's School, St. Ann's Rd., off Hancock St. across from Veterans Memorial Stadium.

All Quincy girls ages 8-15 are welcome.

Girls play on teams of no more than 14 in order to get as much playing time as possible. Each game has a paid umpire.

Games are played on a regulation baseball/softball fields, equipment is safe and up to date. Each player in the system is insured.

There are three age divisions:

• Abigail Adams (ages 8-9) is an instructional league where girls learn the basics of the game.

• Dorothy Quincy (ages

10-12) is a regulation game with only a few modifications.

• The age 13-15 league uses rules and regulations just short of high school.

The league is also seeking umpires ages 16 and older. It is a paid position.

For more information about the league or umpiring, call Denise at 472-9023.

Women's Fitness Classes At Fore River Clubhouse

Quincy Recreation will conduct two women's fitness classes at the Fore River Clubhouse, Nevada Rd., Quincy Point.

Programs will be held Monday, Wednesday and Friday mornings at 8:30 and 9:30 a.m. beginning March 1. Instructor is Mrs. Mary Manoli.

Each class includes exercise to improve and strengthen flexibility, endurance and overall fitness. Adaptations in the exercise allow each participant to work out at their own pace.

Program cost is $30 for 20 classes. The program concludes April 16.

Registration is on a first come, first serve basis at Quincy Recreation Department, 1 Merrymount Park, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. weekdays. Registration begins Friday, Feb. 26.

For more information, call Quincy Recreation at 376-1394.

2 From Quincy Fontbonne All-Stars

Fontbonne varsity basketball players, Amy Satkevich and Casey Ridge were named all-stars at the Westwood Winter Classic.

Satkevich, a junior forward, scored 27 points and pulled down 17 rebounds in the two games. Ridge, a sophomore point guard, scored 14 points and had four assists and four steals.

Fontbonne, headed to the state tournament, finishes the regular season with 13 wins and seven losses under first-year coach Clare Murphy, also of Quincy.

Youth Hockey Assn. Annual Meeting March 2

Quincy Youth Hockey Association will hold its annual meeting Tuesday, March 2 at 7:30 p.m. at Quincy Youth Arena, 60 Murphy Memorial Dr.

All members are invited to attend.

The meeting agenda will include financial reports, discussion and nominations for Board of Directors.

Squirt B's Make Play-Offs

A Sunday morning visit to Waltham netted the underdog Quincy Squirt B team one of two needed wins to qualify for the upcoming playoffs.

After a slow first half, the Firefighters have rebounded to win five of their last six games. Solid goaltending from Jim Carita and David Arrufat have frustrated the G.B.L. competition.

Under the skillful coaching of Wayne Foley, the young B players have posted decisive victories against Wellesley, Belmont, Waltham and Needham. In the most recent shutout against Needham, Tommy Pasquantonio supplied all the offense that was needed.

Stingy on defense was Ted Finnegan, Joey Fontana, Mike Lohnes, Steve McDonough and the always steady John Kurpeski. Securing the victory was Mike Gillespie and Mike Maxey.

In earlier games, Brian Gilligan scored a hat trick and Jimmy Fitzpatrick netted a pair. Mike Lohnes and Joe Canavan also lit the lamp for the Firefighters 7-2 win over Waltham.

A tough game against Belmont left the Firefighters on top, 4-3. Gillespie scored the first and last goal, with Fitzpatrick and Pasquantonio each netting a goal. In action against Wellesley, Joe Fontana, Tommy Pasquantonio and Steve McDonough supplied the needed offense.

Shedevils Too Much For St. Catherine's

St. Catherine's of Norwood girls' basketball team came to Quincy with a little too much confidence and underestimated the Shedevils of St. Joseph's.

The night started with a tribute to the eighth graders who were playing their last home game and were not going to disappoint their loyal fans. Co-captains Jaclyn Brogna and Meghan Chagnon led the team to victory, along with the excellent effort of another eighth grader, Colleen Young.

Brogna controlled the board, and that proved to be the difference. She led all scorers with 12 points.

Young shut down St. Catherine's scoring efforts with awesome defense, and chipped in 8 points. Chagnon really pushed the pace of the game, scoring 4 points on fast break attempts.

Janai Mungalsen and Nikki Groleau played their best game of the season, adding 3 and 6 points respectively. The Shedevils backed off in the second half but coasted to a 33-26 victory.

With one more league game remaining the Shedevils have a shot at the top spot in the playoffs with a current record of 7-2.

Bantam B's Capture Coca-Cola Tourney

The Bantam B travel team of Quincy Youth Hockey skated to a four win sweep of the Coca Cola Tournament at the Gallo Arena on Cape Cod.

The B's seized the tournament title with wins over Cape Cod Canal (3-2), Hingham (3-2), Canton (4-2) and the New Hampshire Junior Wildcats (4-3) in the championship game.

It was the second time the team has captured a tournament crown this season. The first championship came when they won the Knights of Columbus tourney at Quincy Youth Arena.

Members of the team are goalie Tom Shruhan, James Chicchio, Bryan Cooper, Ryan Donahue, Bob

Donavan, Jeremiah Hanson, Andrew Mahoney, Captain Scott Markarian, Michael McGonagle, Robert Mooney, Sean Moriarty, Andrew Ross, Ryan Tophin, and Peter Turowski.

The team is managed by head coach Brad Vinton and assistant coach John Hanson.

Quincy Youth Hockey Registration

Quincy Youth Hockey will conduct registration for teams next September including drills and instruction on Monday and Tuesday, March 23 and 24 from 6 to 9 p.m.

Registration fee is $40 first child; $25 for each additional child. Fees are for this registration period only; fees will rise after the March 23 and 24 registration.

Spring travel team tryouts will be held April 10-16. Tryout fee is $30 for Mite through Bantam.

Midget fee is $20.

Eligibility for drills/instruction is minimum age 5, born after 6/30/94.

New members must bring Mass. driver's license as proof of residence and birth certificate for child.

SCOTT DEWARE

*A Thought
For The Week*

Pre-arranged/pre-financed funerals make economic sense and are increasing every year...

There are many reasons for pre-arranging a funeral... More than anything else, one makes pre-arrangements because of those they love. It removes from the family the burden of making important decisions at one of the most difficult times in their lives. It makes one's wishes known. The family knows what to do. It takes the concern as to "Is this what he or she would want?" Through the years we have always been truthful in answering any and all questions concerning our costs/services/facilities and merchandise. We have always believed that it is our responsibility to provide a range of prices and services that provide exactly what the needs and preferences of the consumer prefer. Over the years our service shows a remarkable consistency of economy. The many, many families of all faiths we have been privileged to serve will confirm this.

Please feel free to stop by or call us anytime for an appointment to discuss any pre-arrangements or pre-financing you might desire. We will be pleased to answer any questions you might have. This will be in complete confidence and is without cost or obligation, of course.

Your Horoscope

by Natasha

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Whatever you're considering on the business scene is a good move. Your thinking is right on target. Later in the week, get together with friends for good times.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Group activities are favored and you find yourself relaxing and having a lot of fun. Someone contacts you from a distance. You spend the weekend doing some bookkeeping chores.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Anything you've done of a creative nature lately needs a little revision. Think of this as "fine-tuning." You need to get chores out of the way before doing any socializing over the weekend.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Although you're sure of your position, it's best not to pick an argument with someone you disagrees. You both get nowhere and feelings are needlessly hurt by this exchange.

LEO (July 23 to Aug. 22) Things said in private generally relate to money. Avoid making a hasty decision when it comes to a career-related concern. The weekend is best for relaxing quietly.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Someone close to you is really getting on your nerves. You've been too consumed with this person's life and need to ease up. Your efforts have been draining you.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Shopping is favored, but make it more of a window-shopping trip, since your finances are still somewhat iffy. Couples find renewed romance. Domestic concerns fill the weekend.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Anything you can do together as a family is favored, especially where children are concerned. You converse well with others and get your point across easily.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Address domestic decisions. Family members cooperate and make things easier for you. Activities of a mental nature are favored later in the week.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Your intuition and thinking are sharp and right on target. You are able to see right through some people and know the motivations behind their actions. Self-discipline is your forte.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You are called upon to utilize your problem-solving abilities. Thanks to you, all turns out well. Common sense is your ally in this endeavor.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You get together with a close tie, share some meaningful dialogue and reach some helpful conclusions. This weekend, you are occupied with business matters.

West Coast Cafe Opens At 1659 Hancock St.

West Coast Cafe, specializing in quickly prepared yet healthy food, recently opened at 1659 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

Drawing on his extensive background in the restaurant industry, owner-manager Todd Bornstein designed the menu, and personally developed each recipe. "I've always believed that food can taste good, and still be good for you," he explains.

West Coast Cafe offers a large selection of vegan, vegetarian and non-vegetarian meals, including burritos, soups, pasta, sandwiches, wraps and flat bread pizza. There is a juice bar with freshly squeezed juices and smoothies, and the bakery offers a variety of cookies and muffins--including some that are fat-free.

The early response has been very positive, Bornstein said, as people discover that eating fast and eating healthy are both possible at West Coast Cafe.

"We've been open for over a month and already people are telling us they really love the burritos," Bornstein said. "The smoothies are popular, too--especially the one that gives you more energy."

"Customers are pleasantly surprised to find so many choices... and they don't have to worry, because at West Coast Cafe, everything on the menu is nutritionally balanced, low in fat and low in sodium," he added.

West Coast Cafe is open seven days a week from 6 a.m. to 9 p.m.

CITY OF QUINCY IN COUNCIL

ORDER NO. 99-019
ORDERED: February 1, 1999

Title 18 Environmental Protection Add the following Chapter:

Environmental Assessment and Controls for City Project Section I. Rationale

The potential exists for community exposure to hazardous materials which have been, are or may be released during City-sponsored projects (such as building expansion, infrastructure improvements, etc.). In order to minimize (reduce or eliminate) the potential for hazardous exposure to the exposure, appropriate, site-specific environmental controls can and should be implemented before and during project implementation. Effective risk communication through public outreach and notification should complement actual environmental controls.

Section II. Environmental Assessment & Control Requirements

Any project conducted by or on behalf of the City of Quincy which has the potential to create a nuisance condition of air pollution and which involves the application, removal, or repair of any material deemed to be or to contain hazardous materials (including but not limited to asbestos, lead, petroleum products, etc.) must include a site and project-specific environmental assessment and control plan. Review and approval of the environmental assessment and control plan by the Quincy Health Department must be received prior to the commencement of the project. The environmental assessment and control plan must include, at minimum, the following:

-Project Description

-Safety and/or Health Hazard Assessment which will evaluate any potential environmental hazards generated by the project (including pre-monitoring test requirements, and ambient air testing requirements, as applicable).

-Operational Plan, which will include statements and references to applicable local, State and Federal regulations, and include site control and containment measures (as applicable), along with detailed Health & Safety procedures that will be required to be in effect for the duration of the project.

Section III. Notification Requirements

A. For any project which abuts, wholly, or in part, any residential structure, or which has the potential to impact a residential area within the City, a public informational meeting describing the scope of the project (including anticipated project start and completion dates), any potential environmental hazards, details of control measures to be implemented, etc., must be conducted prior to the start of the project.

B. Notification regarding the actual start and completion dates for the project must be made at least 24 hours prior to the state, to appropriate City officials (including but not limited to: Quincy Health Department (Health Commissioner and/or Environmental Sanitarian), Quincy Fire Department (Hazardous Materials Officer), Mayor's Office, and Ward Councillor whose ward includes the project location).

C. Notification regarding any major project change (including procedural changes with respect to environmental controls) should be made prior to the change, whenever possible, or at minimum, within 24 hours of the change, to appropriate City officials (including but not limited to: Quincy Health Department (Health Commissioner and/or Environmental Sanitarian), Quincy Fire Department (Hazardous Materials Officer), Mayor's Office, and Ward Councillor whose ward includes the project location).

PRAYER TO THE BLESSED VIRGIN
(Never Known To Fail)

Oh, most beautiful flower of Mt. Carmel, Fruitful vine, splendor of heaven, Blessed Mother of the Son of God, Immaculate Virgin, assist me in my necessity. Oh, Star of the Sea, help me and show me, herein you are my Mother. Oh, Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth! I humbly beseech you from the bottom of my heart to succor me in this necessity. (Make request). There are none that can withstand your power. Oh, show me herein that you are my Mother. Oh, Mary, conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee (3X). Holy Mother, I place this cause in your hands (3X). Thank you for your mercy toward me and mine. Amen. The prayer must be said for 3 consecutive days and after that the request will be granted. The prayer must be published. J.T.C. 2/25 law judge, Judge Mark Silverstein, who upheld the superseding order Feb. 18.

Squantum Lot 23 Can Be Developed, Judge Rules

Carroll said O'Connell's attorney had informed the conservation commission and the city clerk that clearing would begin within 48 hours, according to Carroll.

Previously, O'Connell said if someone was interested in buying the property, he would be interested in selling it, according to Mayor James Sheets.

"We looked into it," said Sheets. "We don't have the almost $1 million to purchase it."

"Despite our best efforts to maintain this land as open space, we were working against a timeline to begin with," said City Council President Peter Kolson.

"We tried to incorporate that [land] into our open space policy in the last two to three years, but we were a little bit too late getting to it," said Kolson.

Attorney Stevens said Tuesday he had only returned an hour ago from a vacation and had been deluged with telephone calls about the ongoing clearing work.

"Basically, Peter O'Connell, who had designated the area as a bird sanctuary several years ago when he was building the high rises and the Marina Bay project, is reneging on that," said Stevens.

He said the coalition has seven business days from Feb. 18, or until March 1, to ask the judge to reconsider his ruling and has 30 days to appeal the decision to Superior Court. He said his office received a copy of the decision Monday.

Kolson said the council and the city had no legal standing to challenge the conservation commission's order of conditions, and [we] couldn't prove that it was not eligible for development," he said.

"We were trying to get money to buy the land for $2 million," he said.

Planning Director Richard Meade said the city had researched seriously the city's eligibility to apply for state funds to acquire the land, but without other funding sources, an acquisition grant requiring 50 percent matching funds could be costly. He said he thought O'Connell acquired the land for about $1.2 million.

Ian Cooke, executive director of the Neponset River Watershed Association, said the coalition also had been pursuing the possibility of purchasing the land as it was seeking legal recourse.

"The watershed association is a regional organization which covers from Quincy to Foxboro," said Cooke, "and we've internally dedicated a lot of our own staff time and resources to this partly because some of the natural resources [at this location] are amazing."

"This is a tremendous bird habitat," he continued. "Twenty-three of the state's listed endangered or threatened bird species have been identified" during counts at this site.

He noted that the Metropolitan District Commission owns land adjacent to Lot 23, and in addition to its ecological value, it has nice recreational potential. In addition, the MDC recently acquired some of the marshes between the Neponset River and Commander Shea Boulevard as well a little sliver of land that runs along the back side of Lot 23, near Squantum Gardens, the former naval housing.

"Having the habitat connection would make a nice tie-in to the MDC parcels and all the activities the MDC has under way on the other side of the river," he said, noting the scheduled construction of a bike path along the riverway and the creation of the 76-acre Pope John Paul II Park at the former Neponset Drive-In and Hallett Street landfill sites.

"The majority of the 66 acres is salt marsh and clearly not developable at all," said Cooke. "The point of contention is the small area of shrubs and wooded land right in the corner up to the rotary," he continued.

"It has some wetland characteristics, but the question was whether it was wetlands," he said. The decision seems to say that wetland habitat must be related to flooding.

"The law characterizes land in a number of categories," Stevens said, "and habitat is a relatively new part of the regulations."

Stevens said the land has many wetland habitat characteristics. It has wetland vegetation but not wetland soil; it has fresh water, salt water, mud flats and salt ponds.

"And because it has that diversity of characteristics, it has a rich habitat," said Stevens.

In addition to the number of migratory birds that use this site, which includes apple trees and other fruit trees, the land is one of the very few wildlife habitats in Greater Boston Harbor, said Stevens.

There are plenty of wildlife habitats on Cape Cod, but the next nearest is Crane Beach on the North Shore, he said.

Cooke said the coalition argued that the land should not be developed "not because it's not a wetland but it has the potential to enhance [the existing] wetland and improve the flushing of the marsh."

The area is shaped like a bowl, and water gets in and out through a couple of small culverts. "It was our contention in the appeal that the culverts prevent the flush of the marsh."

In the meantime, the city has applied for a $30,000 matching grant through the state's wetlands restoration and banking program to improve tidal flushing and improve the health of the marsh, said Public Works Commissioner David Colton.

Cooke said there is a federal restoration grant which not only pays for restoration enhancement but for acquisition and was hoping "that the folks at city hall were getting that application ready and tracking those initial funds."

"This decision comes at not an opportune moment," said Cooke.

Sheets Wants Developers To Pay Open Space Fee

Open space is a high priority on Mayor James Sheets' agenda.

"That's why I and Council President Peter Kolson put together an open space committee to find ways to get funding that would enable us to purchase open space lots available," said

Sheets.

He made those remarks after learning that the administrative law judge in the state Department of Environmental Protection last week had upheld a superseding order which would allow the development of Parcel 23.

He has suggested that the open space committee consider seeking home rule legislation which would require a half of one percent of the costs of any development to be set aside for acquisition of open space.

"As a ward councillor, I introduced a home rule petition which the Legislature passed which requires that 1 percent of the construction costs of a project to be set aside and given to the city to improve the sewer system and storm drainage," said Sheets.

This new measure would be similar, he said. He said the work for which the city is responsible at Wollaston Beach is being financed through this means.

FINDING YOURSELF IN A FIX

Car owners who are intent upon selling their old cars and purchasing new ones may wonder if it pays to make any necessary repairs before selling. In most cases, the answer is that car owners are better off making the necessary repairs prior to selling than if they were to sell their cars "as is." Usually, they will find that, by spending a few hundred dollars on repairs that put their vehicles in good running order, they can increase the value of their cars by thousands of dollars. On the other hand, by making a decision not to repair their cars, they limit the number of prospective buyers to those who are looking for a project.

LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree

Developer Has Options

Highpoint Shot Down, But Is It Dead?

Good Citizens

COMMENDED FOR CITIZENSHIP by the City Council were Pack 32 Cub Scouts Patrick Day, Dominick Speranzo, Raymond Pratt and Benn Johnson Tattlebaum from St. Mary's Church. Ward 4 Councillor Michael D'Amico, left, and state Rep. Bruce Ayers, right, the Ward 4 Councillor presented the Webelos and their Cubmaster, Stan Pratt, with citations, a City of Quincy pin and a copy of the U.S. Constitution. In the background is Council President Peter Kolson.

The City Council rejected the proposed controversial Highpoint development on Quarry Street Tuesday night, but the vote was not seen as the final death sentence.

"The possibility is very clear we are going to be back doing this all over again," said City Council President Peter Kolson.

The size of the project and the feared impact on the area were the main reasons for the councillors' voting against Highpoint, which would have been one of the largest residential complexes on the South Shore.

"The number of units (1,241) is like trying to put an 11-sized foot into a 9-sized shoe," said Ward 3 Councillor Patrick McDermott. "You might get it in, but it is sure going to hurt a lot."

The vote, which only last week was seen as being close in favor of the project, fell far short of the required six votes needed for passage.

"A project of this size does not fit into the contours of this area of the city," McDermott said. "The density would be too great. It would put too many people in one area. It just doesn't fit. It just would not work."

Late Tuesday the Quincy and South Shore Building Trades Construction Council said it was disappointed.

"The City Council had an opportunity to provide 2,000 local construction workers jobs, clean up a dump, provide more than $1 million in new tax dollars, pave 15 streets in Ward 4, upgrade and install traffic signals at several intersections, install new water pipes in Wards 4, 5 and 3, make substantial improvements in the existing drainage system and provide 30 acres of open space," said Tom McKay, the labor council president.

With only eight of the nine councillors voting, just three negative votes were needed to block the project. Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymond had abstained from voting or from discussing the project to avoid any conflict of interest because he owns property abutting the development site.

At The Sun's press time, five other councillors in addition to McDermott said they would vote no — Councillors Bruce Ayers, Michael D'Amico, Stephen Durkin, Timothy Cahill and Kolson.

Congress Group Ventures Inc. acquired the old quarry site about two years ago for $8.5 million and first submitted a $200 million development proposal for the site last June. The City Council was required to make a decision on the plan by March 8.

"It's important that people understand we went from a 1,641-unit development to approximately 790 units at the last hour," said Kolson. "It was cut in half."

"It was the most extensive mitigation [proposed] that was ever done in a project in this city," Kolson said. "My fear is that it will be taken out of our hands and placed into the courts."

"I do not want that to happen. It is best to try to work with the developer. He's very resolute he is going to build something there, and he does have the clout," said Kolson.

A last-minute pitch to pare down the number of apartments, combined with a proposal to grant favorable tax concessions to the developer in exchange for 35 acres of the 75-acre tract dedicated as open space,

Natale's Men's Clothing Store Coming To Quincy

Natale's, one of South Shore's finest men's retailers, plans to open a shop in Quincy Center by late September.

"I have been looking [for space] in Quincy for the past six months," said Natale Agostino, who owns and operates Natale's in Hanover.

"The people in Quincy are very, very good," he said. The shop will be located next to the Central Fire Station on Quincy Avenue.

The Keep It In Quincy Shopping Commission had approached Agostino with the idea of coming to Quincy several months ago.

"It's that one-on-one approach we used to make this happen," said Judy Kolson of the commission.

She said a survey several months ago indicated that a men's specialty store was a top priority for residents and Quincy shoppers.

"We haven't had a men's specialty store in Quincy Center since Milton's left and Remick's closed," she said. "We knew this concept of reaching out would be successful."

"Quincy is a great place to have a retail shop, and this was the commission's

Building Trades Council Disappointed In Vote

The Quincy and South Shore Building Trades Construction Council says it is disappointed in the vote by the City Council to deny the PUD permit application by Congress Group Ventures to build 925 luxury apartments and 200 senior living units on Quarry St.

"The City Council had the opportunity to provide 2,000 local construction worker jobs, clean up a dump, provide over $1 million in new tax dollars, pave 15 streets in Ward 4, upgrade and install several traffic signals at several intersections, install new water pipes in the Ward 4, 5, and 3 areas, make substantial improvements in the existing drainage system and provide 30 acres of open space," Tom McKay, president of the council said.

The city, he said, is now faced with paying for the cleanup of the site. Under the law, persons responsible for polluting a site are required to pay for the cost of cleaning up the site. The city of Quincy owned the site for 45 years and permitted the dumping of all materials in the former quarry, he said. The cost of the project is expected to reach $6 million, according to McKay.

"There are no winners. This decision cost the taxpayers $6 million just for the cleanup. It could cost the city $500,000 in legal fees on an appeal. Unless the city has deep pockets, they may be faced with cutting Police, Fire, or School Department budgets to help pay for legal and cleanup fees," he said.

McKay and building trade member unions have expressed concern about the possibility of Congress Group filing for a comprehensive permit for the site.

"We are supportive of affordable housing, however, under the law they would be allowed to apply to the Quincy Zoning Board of Appeals for 1,640 units at the Quarry St. site. That is too many affordable housing units for one site," stated McKay.

City 'Looking Up' For 2000 U.S. Census

It's no secret, said City Clerk Joseph Shea. When the federal census for the year 2000 is conducted, the city wants to have as high a count as possible.

On Monday, Shea outlined what procedures he would implement for taking the city census to ensure an accurate count and to but-truss what numbers the federal census takers document. He said there are 88,781 residents in Quincy.

He said a city census form will be mailed to every household and to every owner of a housing complex with eight or more units. He said there are 178 such multi-family dwellings in Quincy.

Among them are Eastern Nazarene College and the Quincy Housing Authority and the Eventide Home.

For this year's census, he said 50 percent of the census forms were returned during the first week. He said for those households

Third Crew Would Help Clear Sidewalk Backlog

Public Works Commissioner David Colton told the City Council Monday night that an additional crew of six or seven men could help clear the backlog of sidewalk requests.

However, there would be a significant cost. He estimated that it would cost $200,000 for salaries alone, plus another $250,000 for new equipment — a dump truck, a pickup and a back hoe loader and some smaller equipment.

"We always have a backlog," said Colton. "It takes two to four years before we the repairs completed, but our productivity is high."

He said two small crews of five men each complete between 600 and 700 repairs a year.

City Council President Peter Kolson asked Colton to include the projected costs in his budget request to the mayor for fiscal year 2000.

Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi, the son of a highway supervisor, pointed out that many sidewalks are public safety sidewalks.

During the 1970s, each ward had its own crew and the work was prioritized. Today, however, there is one crew for three wards. A third crew would allow one crew per two wards.

Quincy 2000 Conducting Industrial Needs Assessment

Quincy 2000 has begun a comprehensive study of the city's industrial sector.

The study's objectives are twofold: to identify industrial companies' financial, spatial, and technical assistance needs, and to help those needs through Quincy 2000's economic development programs and other business development resources that the state offers.

The goal of the study is to help retain and expand the industrial employment base in Quincy. Staff members will present the findings of this industrial business survey to the Quincy 2000 Board of Directors, Mayor James Sheets, and other city officials this spring.

"A strong urban economy relies on diverse industries," said Quincy 2000 Executive Director Joe Mannarino. "The city's economy has been transformed over the past 20 years from a reliance on industrial employment to service sector and professional employment. Also, a significant amount of the city's industrial properties have been transformed or re-developed for commercial use. We are implementing this industrial needs assessment in an attempt to preserve the remaining industrially-zoned land and to strengthen industrial firms in Quincy for the next millennium.

Mannarino said statistics bear out his observations.

According to the Massachusetts Division of Employment and Training, from 1985 to 1997, the number of manufacturing jobs in Quincy dropped from 8,900 to 1,900, or a 79 percent decrease. Concurrently, the number of service positions has increased by 44 percent, and the number of jobs in the financial, insurance, and real estate industries has increased by 46 percent. The steep decline in Quincy manufacturing jobs is not consistent with national data. According to Bureau of Labor Statistics data, from 1985 to 1997, there was a 3.1 percent decrease in manufacturing positions nationwide.

Quincy 2000 is working with the Greater Boston Manufacturing Partnership to locate companies and serve as a resource for technical assistance. Once companies are identified, Quincy 2000 staff members will conduct interviews with company owners regarding their needs and compiling the responses. Based on the responses, Quincy 2000 will prepare recommendations to retain and expand Quincy industrial business. Quincy 2000 can also offer technical and financial assistance to implement the business development recommendations.

Quincy 2000 staff members conducting the survey include Mannarino, Michael Rei, and Ann Fisher.

Gillon To Speak At Councourse Meeting

The Quincy Citizens Advisory Committee (CAC) for the Quincy Center Councourse will meet Thursday, March 11 at 3:30 p.m. in the second floor conference room, City Hall Annex.

Guest speaker will be Traffic Control Engineer John Gillon who will discuss the 25 percent preliminary design plans for the roadway linking the east side of Hancock St. with McGrath Highway and South Street.

Phase One plans linking Burgin Parkway with the west side of Hancock street in the downtown section of Quincy have been approved and sent out for bid. Phase One includes the bridge over the MBTA Redline and Commuter train tracks to the Ross Parkingway.

CAC Chairperson David Ezickson urges committee members to attend to discuss traffic control and pedestrian safety highway issues relative to Revere Rd., Mechanic St., and McGrath Highway.

All CAC meetings are open to the public.

GET PUMPED UP!

A tire with air pressure five to ten pounds too low does not look all different from a tire that is properly inflated — even to an expert. Thus, there is no substitute for using a tire gauge to check the air in your vehicle's tires. The National Highway Safety Administration estimates that 20% of the tires on American highways are underinflated, resulting in compromised efficiency and safety. Underinflated tires waste gas to the tune of about $72 annually per automobile. Tires also experience greater heat buildup, and wear faster. More importantly, underinflated tires compromise handling and braking, rendering vehicles less able to perform accident-avoidance maneuvers. It's a good idea to check your tires' inflation at least every other week. The safety of our customers and their families is very important to us here at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO and we want them to be informed. Beede Fund Donation To Furnish Library Young Adult Room

By MARILYN JACKSON

The Quincy Retired Teachers Scholarship Fund Inc. will donate $35,000 to the Thomas Crane Public Library's fund-raising campaign to furnish the young adult room in the new addition in memory of Harry A. Beede, a Quincy educator, and his wife, Louisa Beede.

When Mr. Beede died in April 1996, he bequeathed 75 percent of his estate to the Quincy Retired Teachers Association to be used as scholarships for students graduating from both Quincy and North Quincy high schools.

The endowment totaled more than $1.27 million.

"We wanted something in Quincy to be named in his honor," said Robert J. Mattsson, who is treasurer of the scholarship fund.

"We asked the Secretary of State, William Francis Galvin, in early February for a one-time waiver that our funds had to be used exclusively for scholarships," he said.

Mattsson said the Beede Fund also will distribute scholarships this year.

A plaque acknowledging the gift will be unveiled during dedication ceremonies in early 2000 when the new $15 million facility is opened, said Mattsson.

Mr. Beede, a graduate of Quincy High School, Northeastern University and Boston University, began his teaching career in Quincy in 1935 as a science teacher at North Quincy Junior High School. He later became principal of Central Junior High School and took a leave in 1956 to oversee the construction of Broad Meadows Junior High School which opened a year later. He served as principal there until his retirement in 1970.

Mrs. Beede, a Quincy podiatrist, predeceased him three years earlier.

"With Sen. Michael Morrissey's help, this [request] went through very quickly, and we got the waiver," said Mattsson.

This is a wonderful gift, said Library Director Ann McLaughlin.

The young adult room will be a large, sunny, cheerful room, 30 by 32 feet, with a 12-foot ceiling, furnished with four computer work stations and study carrels and comfortable furniture, she said.

The architects, CBT/Childs Bertman Tseckares Inc. of Boston, who designed the exterior of the building to reflect the original 1882 design of H.H. Richardson, are also designing the interior, said McLaughlin.

"We're working with the architects on the color schemes and picking out carpet and deciding what finishes will be on the wood, on the ends of bookcases. We'll come up with the final designs within the next couple of months," she said.

As for the location of the young adult room, that was not an easy decision.

"We went back and forth trying to decide where to put the young adult room," said McLaughlin.

Previously, the young adult room was tucked into space next to the children's

Bellotti Names Harnais As Legal Counsel

Sheriff Michael G. Bellotti has named Robert Harnais of Quincy as legal counsel for the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office.

Harnais, 37, joins the Sheriff's Office after almost a decade's worth of experience as a defense attorney based in Quincy and Boston.

Prior to becoming an attorney, Harnais worked in the probation department in Quincy District Court and was instrumental in setting up the pilot program for the Electronic Incarceration Program in the mid-1980's. The program has since been adopted by many corrections institutions throughout the state, including Norfolk County.

Harnais, who is fluent in Spanish, graduated from the University of Massachusetts at Boston. He earned his law degree from the New England School of Law.

"Bob will bring to this job a wealth of experience as an attorney and a vast knowledge of the courts and community corrections," Bellotti said. "His first order of business will be to alleviate the caseload that exists at the jail."

Harnais is vice chairman of the Quincy Planning Board and is a member of the Quincy Democratic Committee. He also volunteers as a football coach for the Quincy Elks and the South Shore Stars.

Clinton Should Have Resigned

Editor, The Quincy Sun,
I decided to wait until the recent presidential impeachment process ran its course before writing.

From a legal standpoint, Mr. Clinton's impeachment appeared unlikely because the trigger events could be construed as witness entrapment. Overly ambitious attorneys working under Kenneth Starr marred an otherwise sound process.

However, the investigation revealed or confirmed truths about Mr. Clinton, truths I felt should have compelled him to independently offer his resignation. His arrogant denials for months only showcased his moral unfitness as president, but as a professor at Northwestern University School of Law has stated, "Politicians these days rarely resign over principle."

Even in the face of his behavior, Mr. Clinton was not without his defenders. These included none other than Massachusetts' own Ted Kennedy and Barney Frank. Like most vocal Clinton supporters, they sought to divert attention away from the real issue. First, they questioned witness credibility which struck me as quite amusing, given Mr. Clinton's past record in extramarital liaisons.

When the facts of the case grew increasingly verifiable, Clinton supporters then dismissed the accusations as nothing more than a kiss-and-tell incident which should remain Mr. Clinton's personal business and not the nation's. They pointed to Mr. Clinton's presidential achievements and supposed achievements (e.g. the economy) further prolonging their's and Mr. Clinton's denial.

When Mr. Clinton's insincere August televised address to the nation was poorly received, his supporters attacked the impending impeachment process as a partisan conspiracy. Did these people honestly think their fellow democrats would spearhead an objective inquiry? Put another way, could we have trusted Republicans to probe Nixon's misdeeds? This is exactly why we have a primarily two party system: to provide checks and balances.

The President's defenders then quickly shifted into hypocrisy mode, citing Mr. Hyde's and Mr. Livingston's own errant pasts. This had about as much relevance as Republican accusations would have had in 1974 about Democratic Mayor Richard Daley's violations of the constitutional rights of protesters (in Chicago during the 1968 Democratic convention).

In the end, the only hypocrisy I saw was the singular nature of voting by Democratic senators on Mr. Clinton's impeachment charges.

I had expected the partisan mud-slinging in Washington, but what really surprised me were the supposed random poll samplings. I have a hard time believing that the only president in history to be elected not once but twice with less than 50% of the popular vote would be 65-75% in the midst of this scandal.

Beyond the legalities of Mr. Clinton's charges were far more serious offenses which were wrongfully downplayed by his advocates: his desecration of the sanctity of the Office of the President and his adultery.

First, Mr. Clinton's exploits did not take place in some mountain hideaway in view of someone's concealed camera. They occurred in the White house of our forefathers, on the job, and during business hours. Few of us could ever survive being fired at our places of work after engaging in such conduct. That so few politicians saw the office of the president as commanding an even higher standard was nothing short of disgraceful.

Second, Mr. Clinton's act of adultery, while nothing new, was overlooked as exactly that, nothing new. Adultery is an act of cold-blooded disregard for marriage.

City Council Trivia

City Councillor and former Mayor Frank McCauley is a walking encyclopedia on Quincy political history.

He came up with some interesting trivia tidbits for the recent City Council reunion attended by 28 councillors--19 former and nine present--at the Quincy Neighborhood Club.

You might find them interesting, too.

Did you know, for example, that Joseph LaRaia, now a city assessor, served the longest in the City Council? He put in 20 years and five months in the period between January, 1960 and July, 1995. (But not consecutive years).

Who served the longest as a ward councillor? James Sheets, 16 years, eight terms, from 1974 to 1989 in Ward 4. (And who says a ward councillor can't be elected mayor?)

The top vote getters for councillor-at-large? (1) Paul Harold, 21,243 votes in 1977. (2) George Burke, 20,741 in 1965. (3) Arthur Tobin, 20,453 in 1975.

McCauley and Sheets are tied with the longest service in municipal elective office with 25 years each. LaRaia is runner-up with 22 years, five months.

The longest serving council president? Tobin, eight years, from 1970 to 1977.

The oldest living city councillor is Alfred Helfrich at 93. He served three terms as councillor under Plan E and is the lone surviving member of those councils. He attended the reunion with his wife Lillian.

Tom Gilmartin goes back the furthest in time of service. He served two terms as Ward 6 councillor from 1946 to 1949. Gilmartin, who now lives in Weymouth, did not attend the reunion but still keeps close tabs on Quincy elections.

Five of those attending the reunion went on to become mayor: Walter Hannon, LaRaia, Tobin, McCauley and Sheets.

Three became state senator: James McCormack, now living in Florida, Tobin and Harold.

McCormack, who defeated Thomas Burgin in one of the biggest political upsets, couldn't get up for the reunion.

Five became state representatives: George Burke, William Delahunt, Hannon, Sheets and Tobin.

March was the first month of the ancient Roman calendar. Julius Caesar moved the year's beginning to January.

Burke also became district attorney and was succeeded by Delahunt who is now Congressman from the 10th District.

George McDonald became a county commissioner, Daniel Raymondi became

BURKE

county treasurer and is now Ward 2 councillor. He also served as a school committeeman. Tim Cahill is now councillor at-large and county treasurer.

Ward 5 Councillor Steve Durkin also served as a school committeeman as did McCauley.

According to McCauley, 359 individuals have served on the city council since the first council took office Jan. 7, 1889.

Of that number, 356 were men and only three women: Edna Austin, Joanne Condon (Walsh) and Patricia Toland.

Condon Walsh attended the reunion and as a group photo of the 28 councillors was being taken, she was asked if she felt a little outnumbered.

"Oh, I'm just one of the guys," she laughed.

Hard to believe there have been only three women councillors in 100 years with female voters outnumbering male voters. Latest figures: Female, 28,077. Male: 22,400.

If the women got together, they might not only improve their City Council numbers but maybe even give us a Madam Mayor.

Like early next century?

ALICIA COLETTI, who recently retired from the Quincy public schools, is back in school. She's taking a current events course in the Learning in Retirement program at Boston College.

And, she's also taking a course on the Civil War at UMass/Boston. One of her classmates there is her nephew, Bob Noble, assistant football coach at Quincy High School.

Noble finished his associate's degree at Quincy College and is now working toward a bachelor's degree at UMass. He's a Civil War buff.

And, Alicia is getting to be one. She and her husband, David, are planning a trip to Gettysburg in April.

OOPS! In our political rundown in last week's column, we reported that three school committee members -- Sean Barry, Linda Stice and Jo-Ann Bragg -- are up for re-election this year. We were one-third wrong.

Barry and Stice will be running but the third is Christine Cedrone. Jo-Ann was re-elected two years ago and is still in that term.

Sorry about that.

FIRE STATION, W. QUINCY, MASS.

THIS IS A 1915 POSTCARD view of the wooden fire station for Hose Three and Ladder Three that was on Copeland Street in West Quincy for over 40 years. It was built in 1894 next to the Willard School that can be seen on the right. 'Granite' was the original name of Hose Company Number Three. It was organized in 1852 and before it moved here, its early equipment was housed in the building now occupied by Callahan's Tap on the corner of Furnace Avenue and Copeland Street. The present home of Hose Three, to the left of this view on the corner of Miller Street, was built in 1939. The site of the fire station shown here is now a parking lot for the Willard office building.

City, State Should Work Together On Juvenile Courthouse

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

We teach our kids to try and get along with each other, the way our parents taught us. Some things never change whether it's 1959 or 1999. Learning to listen to each other and work together is always better than yelling at each other and far more productive too.

I laugh as I say this because too often our political leaders act like children. Instead of working out differences, they get into name-calling or blame games. This is the real world not a playground.

Recently, the City of Quincy and state officials have boxed themselves in with seemingly childish behavior. The state accepted a bid from a developer to renovate the old Grant's Department Store on the Parkway into a juvenile courthouse. The City of Quincy thinks this is a bad site. They are now offering what they see as a better spot over near the police station off Southern Artery. Mayor Sheets wants the best location which would cause the least disruption.

The state needs a separate juvenile courthouse because of overcrowding at the Quincy courthouse.

City Hall and our State House delegation up on Beacon Hill need to lobby the governor and state officials but both the City and the State need to stop being so juvenile about it. Being stubborn won't get us anywhere.

Both sides should have been working together years ago rather than have this crisis hit now, shouldn't they? This isn't about who stakes out the high moral ground. A new courthouse for juveniles is coming to Quincy, the only issue is where. It shouldn't be viewed as anything but a win-win situation. The City of Quincy and the Commonwealth need to cooperate just a tinge better than they have to date.

Don't play kid games. Work together the way we were taught as kids and the way we teach our kids.

Clinton Should Have Resigned

riage and its required loyalty to spouse and, in this case, to child. It was not imbued in the Ten Commandments for no good reason.

From all accounts I have read or seen, adultery inflicts emotional trauma upon the participant's spouse and/or children when it is discovered. The resultant emotional wounds can take many years to heal. While I don't pretend that Hillary was affected by the shock factor, the national awareness of the situation had to have caused her ongoing humiliation. If such embarrassment or emotional scarring were manifest by outward physical disfigurement on Mr. Clinton's wife and daughter, I suspect that the public and congressional mood would have been much different, with Mr. Clinton being shown the gate.

Yet, Mr. Clinton displayed no understanding of such consequences. He cavalierly repeated his adulterous mistakes, lied about them while looking the nation in the eye, and eventually appeared sorry for only getting caught...until the surprising impeachment vote in the House of Representatives. Only then did he strike me as aware of his behavior.

Meanwhile, I saw or heard my share of Democratic citizens in conversations or in the newspapers, or on TV or radio, parroting the rhetoric of their party leaders in defense of Bill Clinton. Their cutting him slack on violations they would never tolerate in their own spouses or friends reminded me of Republican friends who went down the shoot protecting Nixon's image. Rare was a thought on behalf of others outside the debate, such as what kind of example for our kids should be set by our President, or for our World War veterans by their Commander-in-Chief.

When party or ideological loyalty suppresses our better judgement, we become unpaid shills for politicians, whose own consciences then also go out the window. The circus of debate and defiance of the higher self only further reinforced my desire to remain unregistered as an independent voter.

Due process was carried out, and Mr. Clinton was called into account. There were those in Congress or among the public who argued "forgiveness" as a means to avoid having to discipline the president. They condemned Republicans and an occasional maverick Democrat as vindictive for the necessary continuation of constitutional due process by the Senate.

We parents in the world could never discipline our children if we were required to go into parenthood with blemish-free lives. Exerting parental authority is an uncomfortable and sometimes hypocritical job, but someone has to do it. It's the same with the impeachment process.

While the Senate's decision was not what I desired, the Constitution and our system worked. I can live with the outcome. Regarding Mr. Clinton, I felt that the worst thing that could happen to him would be acquittal, the same way I felt about O.J. Simpson. The courts of public opinion and history are the worst for all people who escape punishment. Mr. Clinton's darkest personal days may be yet to come.

Three 'Firsts' At Fore River Launching

By PAUL HAROLD

Three "firsts" occurred at the Fore River Shipyard this week with the launching of a new landing craft.

First, the ship was the first LST in series of landing crafts that would be built at the yard. Second, it was the first ship in local history to be launched without a sponsor. Third, it was launched by an employee of the yard. William McLennan was selected by lot from among the shipbuilders who bought at least $100 in war bonds. McLennan pulled the pin that sent the craft down the ways, and was able to keep the pin as a souvenir.

USO HOSTESS AND SEAMAN MARRIED

A wedding ceremony took place in the City Clerk's office between a local USO hostess and serviceman in what was believed to be the first war-time romance and marriage of its kind locally.

Patricia Sawyer, originally from England, was the hostess for the Quincy Service Club Juniors canteen. Her husband, Chief Petty Officer A.L. Kersey, originally from South Carolina was assigned to a DE in Hingham. They planned to make their home on Beach St.

WOLLASTON LEGION CENSURES SCHOOL COMMITTEE AND COUNCIL

At a meeting of the Wollaston Legion, members voted to censure the School Committee for wasteful spending of tax dollars and the City Council for petty politics.

The School Committee's recent trip to New York in search of a replacement for retiring superintendent James Muir was called a junket. The trip to New York was seen as unnecessary since there were so many qualified candidates locally.

The charge of "petty politics" was leveled against the council because of their failure to plan for the return of veterans after the war. Without such a plan, they predicted there would be chaos.

Quincy Blues Festival To Benefit Library

The Thomas Crane Public Library, which is undergoing a $15 million expansion program, will be the beneficiary of the proceeds of this year's Quincy Blues Festival, according to Joe Hajjar, who first organized this annual event seven years ago.

"It seemed like a natural fit," said Hajjar, a lifelong Quincy resident and owner of the Yard Rock in Quincy Point.

"We are very excited about the partnership with the Quincy Blues Festival," said Library Director Ann McLaughlin. "The festival has become a wonderful event in the city.

"Joe Hajjar came to us about the Blues Festival [several weeks ago] trying to find a way to link it to reading, education and children, not just in Quincy but throughout Greater Boston," said McLaughlin.

"There are a number of exciting ways to encourage reading while producing a terrific music show," added Hajjar. "We are working out the details now."

"The festival has matured as an event and is arguably the best event in the city," Hajjar claimed. He and McLaughlin now are working on plans to make this year's festival both fun and rewarding.

"We want to go with the theme of the library and design a portion of the art show to focus on their achievements over the years," said John Black of Presidential Camera who is coordinating the accompanying art show.

Marilyn Manning and the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association have been involved from the beginning of this event. "For businesses like Presidential Camera, this is a great way to show community involvement," she said.

Aviation History Meeting At Beechwood Center

Aviation History bluffs, historians and local residents with personal and family ties to Quincy's aviation history will meet March 10 at the Aviation History Info Center at Beechwood on the Bay, North Quincy.

"The History Trail" topics will feature Early Air Shows (1910-1912), The Dennison Days, The Seaplane Base, and the Squantum Air Base. Aviation historian and former Quincy resident Frank Delear will lead the discussions. Delear is a pilot and journalist.

Bill Ellis, former Dennison pilot will present a very special artifact to the center. A 1917 Jenny propeller will be presented by Ned Hauptner of Milton.

"Inside the Hangar" at the Squantum Air Base will be exhibited by Betty Dow, Quincy resident and former US Navy WAVE.

The Aviation History meetings are open to all, at no cost. However, because seating is limited reservations are required. Call 617-471-5712 for more information.

The Aviation History

Info Center is located at Beechwood on the Bay, 440 East Squantum St. The center has evolved from four years of community meetings and assistance from aviation history buffs, journalists, aviation historians, and interested community members.

The Center's Aviation History Advisory Council includes: Frank Delear, Peter O'Connell, Tom Galvin, Henry Bosworth, Don Uvanitte, George Burke, Sharron Beals, Arthur Casey, Paul Reynolds and David Duneen.

Introduction To World Wide Web At Library

A basic introduction to the World Wide Web will be held Wednesday, March 10 from 7 p.m. to 8:30 p.m.

at the North Quincy Branch Library.

It will be repeated on Thursday, March 25 from 10:30 a.m. until noon. The presentation will give adults an easy way to understand view of access to

GILBERT'S SYNDROME

Though Gilbert's Syndrome is certainly not a household word, it is a relatively common, congenital, benign liver disorder. It is estimated that as many as three to seven percent of the adult population may have this disorder characterized by a fluctuating level of serum bilirubin. Normally red blood cells are carried from the bone marrow and spleen where they undergo a chemical change, are then excreted by the liver as a yellow pigment into the bile, and pass out through the intestines. In the presence of Gilbert's Syndrome, excessive amounts of bilirubin in the blood may produce a jaundiced (yellowish) skin tone. This syndrome most often starts in the teens or early adulthood and affects more males than females.

Part of our purpose as physicians is to give you information that is up-to-date and helpful for treating physical conditions which impair your life. At AFFILIATED MEDICAL GROUPS, located at 700 Congress St., Quincy, we listen to your concerns. We are affiliated with Quincy and South Shore Hospitals. Please call us at 617-472-2550; office hours by appointment.

P.S. Other liver function tests will prove normal in patients with Gilbert's Syndrome, differentiating it from more serious liver diseases also marked by jaundice.

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Sweet and Sour Chicken

I only met Evelyn a short time ago, but our conversation turned to food very quickly. And so today's recipe for a sweet and sour chicken is at her request!

For this entree, I used chicken tenders which I coated. They can also be sauted plain.

Sweet & Sour Chicken

1 pound chicken tenders corn flake crumbs for coating (or bread crumbs)
1 egg mixed with a little milk

Coat the chicken first in the egg and milk mixture and then the corn flake crumbs. Fry them in hot oil until golden brown. Drain and set aside.

sweet and sour sauce

1 small can pineapple squares
1/2 cup sugar

3 tablespoons corn starch
3/4 cups cider vinegar
1 tablespoon soy sauce
1/4 teaspoon ginger

Combine sugar, corn starch, soy, juice from the pineapple, syrup, vinegar and ginger and boil for two minutes. Add the pickles and pineapple. Then add the chicken and blend. Delicious served over rice!

Quincy Hospital Receives Grant For Breast, Cervical Cancer Initiative

Quincy Hospital has been awarded a grant from the Breast and Cervical Cancer Initiative (BCCI), a Massachusetts Department of Public Health program providing free mammograms and pap smears for women who meet certain criteria.

Quincy Hospital receives funding to provide free mammograms and pap smears for 200 women over age 40 with a low income and who have no health insurance or whose insurance does not cover these services. The BCCI covers costs for other breast and cervical related diagnostic testing as well as educational materials.

"We at Quincy Hospital are very committed to helping the people of the community receive the health services they need," said Hospital CEO Jeffrey Doran. "This BCCI grant is one more way we can accomplish that."

Quincy Hospital submitted a grant proposal working in cooperation with Manet Community Health Center, Crown OB/GYN, and Elizabeth Griffey, MD, of Quincy Surgical Associates, to ensure that patients could receive needed services.

"This is a very important service that Quincy Hospital is providing for people who might not otherwise access these health care services and I am very proud to help this effort," said Dr. Griffey.

Practitioners from Manet Community Health Center perform the clinical breast exams and take the pap smears. The BCCI funding enables Manet and other physicians to refer patients appropriate for services.

"We see so many patients come through our offices who just don't have the means to pay for the mammograms that they need," said Ellen Hafer, executive director of Manet Community Health Center. "While Manet has long served residents who need medical services, the BCCI offers us more options to serve our patients."

For more information about the BCCI, call Quincy Hospital at (617) 376-5462.

Beede Fund Donation To Furnish Library Young Adult Room

room because there was no other space, she said. But this age group certainly does not consider itself children.

With the new addition, the young adults will have their own space. It will be incorporated into part of the first floor and the main activity, right off the main reading room, she said. It will look out over the atrium and face out onto Washington Street.

"It won't be in an area off the reference department, where you expect it to be very quiet, nor will it be stuck down with the kids."

"We are putting them in their own place, where we can keep an eye on them but they will still have their independence."

"This is money from a man who worked with this age group who knew to give them enough freedom but not too much. It's a nice poetry that his name will be on this room, overseeing this age group that he loved to work with," said McLaughlin.

McLaughlin said when she told the library trustees of Mattsson's idea to earmark some of the Beede endowment for the young adult room, they were ecstatic.

Mattsson said William and Jean Phinney wrote the letters to Morrissey and Galvin to secure the waiver and make the gift in memory to the Beedes possible. William Phinney had been an assistant principal with Mr. Beede at Broad Meadow.

Last year was the first time scholarships from the Beede endowment were distributed, said Mattsson.

"We were able to give $72,300 in scholarships last year," said Mattsson, "and $40,000 was from the Beede bequest. Altogether there were 27 scholarships, including six in honor of the Beedes."

"This year, we will be distributing $111,200 in scholarships, and $90,000 will come from the Beede endowment," he said. Thirty-one scholarships will be awarded, including 10 given in the Beedes' memory.

"These scholarships will be forever," said Mattsson. "The scholarships are based on the interest earned on the endowment principal," he said.

"And because we received so much interest [this past year] from the Beede endowment, we were able to increase the $500 [Quincy Retired Teachers Association] scholarships to $1,000."

In addition, a Beede scholarship will be given to a graduate from both Quincy High and North Quincy High who plans to major in education and become a teacher, said Mattsson.

Before the association received the Beede request, the scholarship fund approached about $450,000, and the association was giving approximately $35,000 a year in scholarships.

The Quincy Retired Teachers Scholarship Fund was established in 1979 with a $1,000 bequest from Warren P. Findlay, a former Quincy High School teacher, and the first scholarship, one for $500, was awarded in 1981. Since then, the fund has grown, but the Harry Beede's gift has made and will continue to make a big difference for the graduates of Quincy public schools.

Lincoln-Hancock PTC Scholarships Available

The parent-teacher council of Lincoln-Hancock Community School and Amelio Della Chisea Early Childhood Center is offering scholarships to high school seniors who have graduated from the Lincoln-Hancock Community School and are planning to further their education beyond high school.

Applications may be picked up from the office at Lincoln-Hancock School and then submitted to: Mr. Dennis Carini, Principal, Lincoln-Hancock Community School, 300 Granite St., Quincy, MA, 02169.

Deadline is March 31.

PETER COLLINS, Assistant Vice President and Branch Manager of South Shore Savings Bank at Granite Crossing presents a check for $1000 to Ellen L. Whitehouse of East Braintree. Mrs. Whitehouse's name was selected from hundreds of entries to celebrate the opening of the Granite St. location, which resulted in the closing of the former East Braintree branch. The new branch has the added conveniences of safe deposit boxes and a drive-up ATM machine.

Ward 1 Elects 11 Delegates To State Democratic Convention

Eleven delegates to the 1999 Massachusetts Democratic Convention were recently elected at the Quincy Democratic Ward 1 Caucus held at the Houghs Neck Community Center.

Delegates are:

Thomas Cheney, Robert Drury, Michael O'Connell, Walter Jacobs, James Perkins, Donald Uvanitte, Noreen O'Connell, Paula Clarke, Barbara Cheney, Tish Cheney and Betty McLean.

Following the delegate election, Ward 1 Chairman

Archie Wahlberg announced his retirement as chairman.

Michael Berry was then elected to replace Wahlberg as Ward 1 chairman.

Berry will attend the convention as an ex-officio delegate. Other Ward Committee Officers are Paula Clark, secretary; and Greg Hanley, treasurer.

The Ward 1 Democratic Committee thanks Wahlberg for his many years of service on the Ward Committee. He will remain as vice chairman of the City Committee and will work with the Ward Committee Officers.

The state Democratic Convention will be held May 15 at the Springfield Civic Center. The purpose of the convention is to adopt a political agenda and make amendments to the Democratic Party Charter.

The Ward 1 Democratic Committee and elected delegates invite all Democrats in Ward 1 to share any ideas for the Democratic agenda with them. To contact the committee on-line, e-mail MJIBEW103@aol.

Childs Gets Council Recognition

The City Council commended Treasurer-collector Dana Childs Monday night in recognition for "a job well done."

Councillor-at-large Francis X. McCauley introduced the resolution, which was passed unanimously by the six councillors who were present.

McCauley was mayor in 1987 when he hired Childs 12 years ago. Until this year, he was appointed annually by McCauley and then by Mayor James Sheets.

Childs plans to seek a new position outside Quincy government.

The resolution noted that he had "substantially improved the efficiency and professionalism of the office in an exemplary manner and performed his duties as collector-treasurer with the utmost loyalty and dedication while dramatically improving the financial health of the city."

PLANTAR WARTS

Warts, or verruca, are lesions in the skin caused by a virus. They can appear anywhere on the skin, but the most common location is the bottom of the foot - known as plantar warts.

Warts, like any virus, are contagious and can be spread from person to person. Left untreated, they can increase in size and spread to other areas.

Warts, like any virus, are contagious and can be spread from person to person. Left untreated, they can increase in size and spread to other areas. Treatment usually consists of destruction of the lesion by acid and paring, as well as freezing, burning or cutting the wart out.

To minimize the risk of being infected by the virus, avoid walking barefoot in warm, moist Hospitals.

Policing Topic For Montclair-Wollaston

Lt. William Stenmon and Officer Kent Yee will discuss the community policing concept at a meeting of the Montclair/Wollaston Neighborhood Association tonight (Thursday) at 7:30 p.m. at Work Incorporated, 3 Arlington St.

The program has been successful in the first Quincy areas involved in community policing. The officers will discuss the benefits to residents of the Montclair/Wollaston community, and addressing problems specific to the neighborhood.

The policing is an integral part of combining crime and improving the quality of life in our community. From bike-patrols to enhanced foot patrols, the effort will be on crime prevention. There is coordination between police and citizens in child safety identification and parent-child safety training. The grant provided funding for police training in the areas of domestic violence and responding to elder abuse.

Beede Fund Donation To Furnish Library Young Adult Room

room because there was no other space, she said. But this age group certainly does not consider itself children.

With the new addition, the young adults will have their own space. It will be incorporated into part of the first floor and the main activity, right off the main reading room, she said. It will look out over the atrium and face out onto Washington Street.

"It won't be in an area off the reference department, where you expect it to be very quiet, nor will it be stuck down with the kids."

"We are putting them in their own place, where we can keep an eye on them but they will still have their independence."

"This is money from a man who worked with this age group who knew to give them enough freedom but not too much. It's a nice poetry that his name will be on this room, overseeing this age group that he loved to work with," said McLaughlin.

McLaughlin said when she told the library trustees of Mattsson's idea to earmark some of the Beede endowment for the young adult room, they were ecstatic.

Mattsson said William and Jean Phinney wrote the letters to Morrissey and Galvin to secure the waiver and make the gift in memory to the Beedes possible. William Phinney had been an assistant principal with Mr. Beede at Broad Meadow.

Last year was the first time scholarships from the Beede endowment were distributed, said Mattsson.

"We were able to give $72,300 in scholarships last year," said Mattsson, "and $40,000 was from the Beede bequest. Altogether there were 27 scholarships, including six in honor of the Beedes."

"This year, we will be distributing $111,200 in scholarships, and $90,000 will come from the Beede endowment," he said. Thirty-one scholarships will be awarded, including 10 given in the Beedes' memory.

"These scholarships will be forever," said Mattsson. "The scholarships are based on the interest earned on the endowment principal," he said.

"And because we received so much interest [this past year] from the Beede endowment, we were able to increase the $500 [Quincy Retired Teachers Association] scholarships to $1,000."

In addition, a Beede scholarship will be given to a graduate from both Quincy High and North Quincy High who plans to major in education and become a teacher, said Mattsson.

Before the association received the Beede request, the scholarship fund approached about $450,000, and the association was giving approximately $35,000 a year in scholarships.

The Quincy Retired Teachers Scholarship Fund was established in 1979 with a $1,000 bequest from Warren P. Findlay, a former Quincy High School teacher, and the first scholarship, one for $500, was awarded in 1981. Since then, the fund has grown, but the Harry Beede's gift has made and will continue to make a big difference for the graduates of Quincy public schools.

PETER COLLINS, Assistant Vice President and Branch Manager of South Shore Savings Bank at Granite Crossing presents a check for $1000 to Ellen L. Whitehouse of East Braintree. Mrs. Whitehouse's name was selected from hundreds of entries to celebrate the opening of the Granite St. location, which resulted in the closing of the former East Braintree branch. The new branch has the added conveniences of safe deposit boxes and a drive-up ATM machine.

Ward 1 Elects 11 Delegates To State Democratic Convention

Eleven delegates to the 1999 Massachusetts Democratic Convention were recently elected at the Quincy Democratic Ward 1 Caucus held at the Houghs Neck Community Center.

Delegates are: Thomas Cheney, Robert Drury, Michael O'Connell, Walter Jacobs, James Perkins, Donald Uvanitte, Noreen O'Connell, Paula Clarke, Barbara Cheney, Tish Cheney and Betty McLean.

Following the delegate election, Ward 1 Chairman

Archie Wahlberg announced his retirement as chairman. Michael Berry was then elected to replace Wahlberg as Ward 1 chairman.

Berry will attend the convention as an ex-officio delegate. Other Ward Committee Officers are Paula Clark, secretary; and Greg Hanley, treasurer.

The Ward 1 Democratic Committee thanks Wahlberg for his many years of service on the Ward Committee. He will remain as vice chairman of the City Committee and will work with the Ward Committee Officers.

The state Democratic Convention will be held May 15 at the Springfield Civic Center. The purpose of the convention is to adopt a political agenda and make amendments to the Democratic Party Charter.

The Ward 1 Democratic Committee and elected delegates invite all Democrats in Ward 1 to share any ideas for the Democratic agenda with them. To contact the committee on-line, e-mail @MJBIBEW103@aol.

Childs Gets Council Recognition

The City Council commended Treasurer-collector Dana Childs Monday night in recognition for "a job well done."

Councillor-at-large Francis X. McCauley introduced the resolution, which was passed unanimously by the six councillors who were present.

McCauley was mayor in 1987 when he hired Childs 12 years ago. Until this year, he was appointed annually by McCauley and then by Mayor James Sheets.

Childs plans to seek a new position outside Quincy government.

The resolution noted that he had "substantially improved the efficiency and professionalism of the office in an exemplary manner and performed his duties as collector-treasurer with the utmost loyalty and dedication while dramatically improving the financial health of the city."

PLANTAR WARTS

Warts, or verruca, are lesions in the skin caused by a virus. They can appear anywhere on the skin, but the most common location is the bottom of the foot - known as planter warts.

Warts, like any virus, are contagious and can be spread from person to person. Left untreated, they can increase in size and spread to other areas. Treatment usually consists of destruction of the lesion by acid and paring, as well as freezing, burning or cutting the wart out.

To minimize the risk of being infected by the virus, avoid walking barefoot in warm, moist areas such as showers or areas exposed to the virus. Avoid using the towel of a person who has warts and do not pick at the wart as this may cause the wart to spread to other areas.

If you notice any unusual lesions or spots on the skin of your feet, call your podiatrist for an appointment.

If you are suffering from these or any other foot related complaints, call us at 773-4300. We are located at 1261 Furnace Brook Parkway, Suite #18, Quincy, and are affiliated with Quincy, Quincy and South Shore Hospitals.

Policing Topic For Montclair-Wollaston

Lt. William Stenmon and Officer Kent Yee will discuss the community policing concept at a meeting of the Montclair/Wollaston Neighborhood Association tonight (Thursday) at 7:30 p.m. at Work Incorporated, 3 Arlington St.

The program has been successful in the first Quincy areas involved in community policing. The officers will discuss the benefits to residents of the Montclair/Wollaston community, and addressing problems specific to the neighborhood.

The policing is an integral part of combining crime and improving the quality of life in our community. From bike-patrols to enhanced foot patrols, the effort will be on crime prevention. There is coordination between police and citizens in child safety identification and parent-child safety training. The grant provided funding for police training in the areas of domestic violence and responding to elder abuse.

Maryrose Mirick has been named Director of the Quincy Hospital Health and Education Foundation.

She most recently served as Director of Development for the Health and Education Foundation.

The Quincy Hospital Health and Education Foundation raises funds for the purchase of advanced medical equipment, im-

Highpoint Shot Down, But Is It Dead?

appeared neither opponents nor proponents, city councilors said Tuesday.

Moreover, the suggested compromise, which surfaced only last weekend, had not been debated publicly during any of the hearings before the council, as the permit granting authority for a Planned Unit Development (P.U.D.), or before the planning board.

The planning board last month had voted 2 to 1 in favor of the development, reducing the project to a maximum of 995 one- and two-bedroom apartments and 200 assisted living units.

"The developer needed a tax concession on the property taxes for the project to work for the developer," Councilor-at-large Francis N. McCauley said.

"There was not enough time to deal with it and, personally, I am opposed to giving tax concessions for luxury housing, for high rental housing," McCauley said.

He praised McDermott for his efforts. "He has worked very hard to get some kind of viable proposal," he said.

"This project is not going to go away. Dean Stratouly [the principal of Congress Group Ventures Inc.] has a substantial investment in this property, and he has options. He can appeal to the courts or he can go through the anti-snob zoning law where he could bypass the council," added McCauley who said he planned to support the development at 1,195 units.

"I looked at the traffic objections [and the concerns that] some people feel there will be a lot of kids in the project," the former mayor continued.

"And I looked at the major positive points — increased housing, job creation and a substantial increase in property taxes from that project.

"The raw land alone will generate $60,740 in taxes this year. Based on a build-out to the year 2005, we would be getting $1,932 million in taxes," McCauley said.

"I may be on the losing side, but the people should know how I feel. I've been through these projects before. People have had objections, and the projects have gone through, and the perceptions were far worse than the reality," he said.

The vote, which only last week was seen as being close in favor of the project, fell far short of the required six votes needed for passage.

Said Ayers, the newly elected state representative whose district includes nine precincts in Wards 3, 4 and 5 that would be affected by the Highpoint development. "When I was door-knocking, campaigning for state representative, I had the opportunity to talk to the people in Wards 4, 5 and 3 and, of course, 6, and they told me first-hand of their concerns and made their opposition pretty clear.

"I feel the developer has not addressed the concerns of the residents, and that's why I am voting no," he said.

In addition, Ayers, as a member of the city's open space task force, introduced a resolve at Monday night's council meeting which "would take a more proactive role in preserving parcels of land before they disappear."

Some time ago, he said, the task force had identified Highpoint's 75-acre site, which once served as the city's landfill, for potential acquisition.

"But we never changed the zoning. It was zoned P.U.D., we invited development," said Ayers.

The resolve proposes assessing a fee of not more than 0.5 percent of the estimated construction costs on all building permits for construction, improvement, reuse or rehabilitation of land or buildings thereon for industrial, commercial, multi-family and residential uses. Single-family residences would be exempt if the owner occupies such dwelling as a primary residence for at least a year.

"This is a draft proposal," Ayers told the City Council, and will require the state legislature's approval. "This would generate approximately $300,000 a year and would give us working capital that we didn't have before either to outright buy property or bond the acquisition costs."

Ayers noted that in House Speaker Thomas Finneran's state-of-the-state address in January, Finneran focused on open space.

Ayers, along with Councilors Durkin, D'Amico and Cahill, met intermittently with Highpoint opponents during Monday's council meeting discussing the new, pared-down Highpoint proposal.

"There were about 35 people there, all adamantly opposed," said Ayers. "They were particularly upset about the last-minute proposal that would cut the number of units to 780 and eliminate the senior living campus," said Ayers. "Even with the changes, the residents were still opposed and upset that the council would consider those changes at the 11th hour."

Councilor-at-large Paul Harold said he would wait to hear the final proposal before he casts his vote, but added that he was opposed to the planning board's recommendations for 1,195 units because of the project's size.

Traditionally, the council follows the recommendation of the ward councilor, said McDermott, who has played a lead role in negotiations. "But in this case there are three ward councilors affected."

He said there has been confusion in the discussion of issues such as reducing the number of units and amount of open space, which may have led to the belief that the project might skin by in the council.

"It's easy to vote against the proposal," Harold continued. "The concern is that if it goes the court route, the Chapter 40B comprehensive permit route, the city could be given back something it does not want."

"That's what Ricciardi had [several years ago]. He was given permission to build 1,400 units, which would have been phased in but would have included a component for low- to moderate-income housing.

"If a permit is granted by the court or the state, all conditions [imposed by the planning board] would be put aside," Harold said.

(The planning board's conditions included making traffic improvements, installing water mains along Quarry Street to improve fire flows and providing a second large main loop to Quincy Hospital — all a significant cost to the developer.)

Harold said he believed Quincy probably has its share of affordable housing, "but because of the need statewide, this could be imposed upon us from Boston. It's a concern, really because of the numbers; the state could allow a density in excess of what the planning board recommended.

"What's our chance that a court rules in our favor?" Harold asked. "Ten percent? Twenty percent? If it's before the council, the council should deal with it," he said.

Harold and others said they were deluged with calls from residents angry about the proposal. "Let's buy the land," they say. But that's not an option. The city doesn't have the capacity to do that. Or if they buy it, the city won't be able to build a new high school or finish the library.

"Every time there's a change, it's a new proposal," Harold said, whether it's fewer units or a mix of union and non-union workers. Originally, the proposed development called for 100 percent union labor.

Should the developer appeal, the city could face a $500,000 legal bill plus a $6 million bill to clean up the old landfill, said McCauley, the labor council leader.

The developer could return to the City Council and seek a substantially different development proposal without having to wait the two-year moratorium, said City Solicitor Stephen McGrath. Or, if the proposal is not significantly different, the developer could seek a P.U.D. permit only with planning board approval, he said.

Building Trades Council Disappointed In Vote

McKay expressed his appreciation to Councilor Patrick McDermott for making the process open to all for input.

"We never knew how Councilor McDermott was going to vote, but we did know he at least listened to us and worked hard for his people," McKay said.

Building Trades members also thanked Councilors Paul Harold, Francis McCauley and Council President Peter Kolson for "at least listening to the concerns of working men and women."

"We are disappointed in Councilors Cahill, D'Amico, Durkin, and Ayers. We only asked that they keep an open mind, work toward a resolution that everyone could live with and listen to the voices of working men and women.

That did not happen," said McKay.

Fair Housing Committee Planning Special Calendar

The Mayor's Fair Housing Committee has initiated a partnership with the secondary schools to create art work to be published in an 18 month calendar commencing Jan. 1, 2000.

The committee's goal is to educate the city's youth and to promote fair housing to the residents of Quincy. The theme of the posters will be "A Student's Interpretation of Fair Housing."

Sheets and prominent members of the community will select 20 posters to be used on the calendars from the artwork submitted by the students. A reception for the parents, students, teachers, and sponsors will be held March 30 in conjunction with CDBG week.

Calendars will be available to the public in the fall of 1999. The Fair Housing Committee is seeking corporate sponsors to defray the expenses of the undertaking.

Contact Nancy Callanan at 376-1372 for sponsorship information.

Foot & Notes

Surgeon-Podiatrist

IS IT REALLY HEEL SPUR PAIN?

So you have this pain in the heel that has bugged you for a while. Maybe you have tried some advoil or soaking your foot. Those cushions helped a little, but you're still not much better. What are you going to do?

Not all heel pain is from the common spur. In fact, pain in the heel region can be from many different causes. A nagging and persistent burning sensation around the heel could be a condition called Tarsal Tunnel Syndrome.

Tarsal Tunnel Syndrome is a condition where the nerve behind the inside of the ankle bone gets trapped and irritated. This causes burning pain in the toes and on the bottom of the foot. In certain cases only the heel will be involved. This condition is very similar to that found in the hand called Carpal Tunnel.

Early diagnosis and proper treatment are helpful in preventing the need for surgery. If left untreated, permanent damage to the nerve could result. Fortunately, many conservative treatments and methods to reduce pain are available.

If you have heel pain or other problems with your feet, please call for an appointment. Dr. Hacker is Board Certified, A.B.O.P.P.M. Office visits can be arranged by calling 472-3466. Our office is conveniently located and fully accessible at 110 W. Squantum St., North Quincy.

Kevin's At The Heritage Hosts California Winemaker

Renowned California winemaker Rodney Strong recently visited Quincy to present a selection of wines at a wine tasting held at Kevin's at the Heritage, 1495 Hancock St.

Strong, a prior in the development of California's Sonoma County as a world-class wine producer, presented six of his choice wines to approximately 50 attendees at the Quincy-based restaurant. Menu selections, prepared by Kevin's, included corn fried oysters, crab and shrimp dumplings and five spice powdered duck breast.

Kevin's owner Kevin Cadigan considered the event a great success.

"We are honored to have had Mr. Strong present his wines at Kevin's. To say he has had a successful career as a vintner would be an understatement," Cadigan said. "He has an amazing reputation as a winemaker. We all enjoy his presentations and were excited to meet him."

Strong led the way in establishing Sonoma Valley's reputation for producing world class wines. He conducted years of detailed research to fine ways to enhance his wine, experimenting with temperature controlled fermentation, carefully selecting yeast strains, and even importing French oak barrels for aging his wines.

After 40 years in the wine industry, Strong and his wife, Charlotte, now travel the country to promote Rodney Strong wines.

Elder Services Sponsoring 'Body Recall' Demonstration

The Quincy Department of Elder Services is sponsoring a demonstration on "Body Recall" Wednesday, March 31 from 10:30-11:30p.m. at Squantum Gardens Community Center.

This is a movement pro-

Body Recall is based on the principals that bodies need to be active, that slow movement is possible for everyone and that people can become physically fit by moving slowly.

Catching Up On Our Photos: 'ROCK-A-THON' Aids Project SAFE

THE THREE TENORS?—Ward 3 City Councillor Patrick McDermott, Council President Peter Kolson and Mayor James Sheets offer a song at the Rock-a-Thon as Quincy Atty. Tracy Wilson listens.

PLAYING CHESS at Quincy's first annual Rock-a-Thon to benefit Project SAFE are Tom Accomando and Tiffanie Williams.

NATIONAL FIRE PROTECTION ASSOCIATION'S Sharon Gamache is flanked by Mayor James Sheets (left) and Don Uvanitte of the Quincy Lions Club at the Rock-a-Thon. The NFPA and the Lions were among the sponsors of the event and Gamache and Uvanitte served on its Advisory Council.

PREPARING FOOD at Quincy's first annual Rock-a-Thon for Project SAFE are School Committeeman Michael McFarland of Barry's Deli and Robert Curry of Curry Hardware. The event concluded with a gourmet pasta feed created by the two men.

WARD 6 COUNCILLOR Bruce Ayers chats with Fran Shields of Beechwood Community Life Center and her son, Greg, a North Quincy High School student, at the Rock-a-Thon.

DOING THEIR PART for the Rock-a-Thon at Beechwood Community Life Center are Brian Spillane, School Committee Vice Chairwoman and Quincy Commission on the Family Executive Director Linda Stice, and Helen Gallahue-Irvin.

Rev. Fred Atwood-Lyon To Retire On June 6

By BERT GARR

Rev. Fred Atwood-Lyon, who has served Quincy Point Congregational Church as pastor and co-pastor for 14 years, will retire June 6.

He will also be closing out a 39-year career in the ministry.

"It has been my pleasure to serve the church, the city, and its members," Atwood-Lyon told The Sun.

Following his final worship service at 10 a.m. June 6, a reception will be held at the Viking Club, Braintree.

Ordained in 1960, Atwood-Lyon came to Quincy Point Congregational in October, 1985 after a stint as National Secretary for Church Growth and Development for the United Church of Christ in New York City.

His wife, Rev. Carol Atwood-Lyon, then a Minister at Saugatuck Congregational Church in Westport, Connecticut moved north with him.

The two served as co-pastors of Quincy Point Congregational for nine years.

When his wife moved to Islington United Church in Westwood, Rev. Fred Atwood-Lyon stayed on as sole pastor of the church.

However, the two will be re-united in extensive travel plans following his retirement.

Rev. Atwood-Lyon and his wife are currently planning a trip from Toronto to Vancouver on the Trans-Canada Railway after which they will tour Jasper and

Rev. ATWOOD-LYON

Lake Louise on Canada's furthest edge.

From Lake Louise, the two will board an inland cruise of the Alaskan Coastline followed by a leisurely drive to the Rocky Mountains and down to Sedona, AZ and Albuquerque, N.M.

After they catch New Mexico's International Balloon Festival, the Reverend and his wife will head home to Weymouth.

There the Rev. Fred Atwood-Lyon may finally have time to reflect upon what he and his church have accomplished during his tenure as pastor.

He has already begun to place the accomplishments of his tenure as pastor in the context of Quincy Point Congregational's prestigious history.

That history included sponsoring and building the 1000 Southern Artery senior center.

"I'm most proud of the way the church has continued making its facilities and resources available to area groups and organizations."

During Atwood-Lyon's time as pastor, offering resources and facilities has included everything from housing homeless women for nearly three years prior to the opening of Father Bill's Place to hosting meetings for more than 15 area nonprofit groups in the city and region. Those groups have run the gamut from Boy Scouts to Alcoholics Anonymous to the Crane Library.

Rev. Atwood-Lyon is especially proud that Quincy Point Congregational has also become a major resource for helping the hungry to purchase their own food.

A "Memory Book" will be presented to the pastor at the reception.

Members of the church and friends are invited to contribute letters or photos for inclusion in the book. They can be sent to Ginger Disher, 85 Hollis Ave., Braintree, MA 02184 by April 1.

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

Aging Beautifully Just Got Easier

NAPS—Wine is not the only thing that gets better with age. More and more women today are aging beautifully by taking control of the aging process.

Covermodel and author Dayle Haddon makes looking and feeling better easier with her new book Ageless Beauty: A Woman's Guide to Lifelong Beauty and Well-Being. Hyphen, 1999. Here are a few tips:

- Create your own private sanctuary or space in which to read, listen to music, or work on a hobby. Your environment is an extension of you, so surround yourself with things you love.

Tips found in a new book by cover model Dayle Haddon can help women look and feel their best.

- Think of exercise as a lifestyle. Gentle, regular exercise like going for a walk or a bike ride can boost your energy level and calm your mind. By upping your activity level and getting off the couch, you can defy not only time, but also gravity.

- Conquer bad habits. Try to recognize negative habits that can hold you back and work to overcome them. Approach them with the same eagerness as you would any challenge.

- Opt for baths instead of showers. Showers are fine for cleansing but a bath can help re-balance your life and renew your spirit—it's healing, it's revitalizing and it's fun.

- Visualize your passion. Use pictures and headlines to make a collage of things you crave and keep it in sight to remind yourself often of your goal.

- Give yourself the gift of time with meditation. Meditation can help you slow down, gain perspective and clarify life's most challenging issues.

- Invent celebrations. Honoring victories can help you restore yourself. Celebrate accomplishments no matter how small they may seem.

- Indulge yourself—often. Try a new perfume, buy yourself some beautiful flowers, get a massage or visit a spa for a few hours of unashamed pampering.

- Moisturize everywhere. The aging process slows down oil production, so give nature a helping hand to replenish skin—and pay special attention to elbows, hands, heels, knees and toes.

For more information, including a free sample of age defiance by HUE and a free bookmark (first 1,000 respondents), write to HUE's Ageless Beauty Tips, 89 Fifth Avenue, 4th Floor, New York, NY 10003.

Benefits Of Early Orthodontic Treatment

By DR. FRED ATTARZADEH

Why is age 7 an ideal time for screening by an orthodontist?

- The posterior occlusion is established when the first molars erupt. At that time the orthodontist can evaluate the antero-posterior and transverse relationships of the occlusion, as well as any functional shift.

- The presence of permanent incisors indicates arch length, possible crowding, habit patterns, and vertical dimension problems such as deep bite, open bite, or gummy smile. Most facial asymmetries are likely to be apparent by age 7.

- For some, a timely screening will lead to significant treatment benefits; for others, early screening may indicate that treatment is not indicated, but the screening can provide information to relieve parents' concern that even though development permanent teeth may be temporarily unattractive, the developmental pattern may be normal. Early treatment presents the opportunity to:

- influence jaw growth in a positive manner
- improve the width of the dental arches
- reduce the need to extract permanent teeth
- reduce or eliminate the need for jaw surgery
- lower the risk of trauma or protruded front teeth
- correct harmful oral habits
- improve aesthetics and self-esteem
- simplify and shorten treatment time for definitive orthodontic treatment
- increase stability of final treatment results
- reduce likelihood of impacted permanent teeth
- improve speech development
- improve position of first permanent molars
- guide permanent teeth into more favorable positions
- improve lip competence
- preserve or gain space for erupting permanent teeth
- reduce potential for damage to TM joints
- encourage better compliance before the uncooperative teenage years.

Remember, all kids should have an orthodontic screening no later than age 7.

Chiropractic Update

by Mark C. Jaehning D.C.

ARM & SHOULDER PAIN

Arm and shoulder pain can have a number of causes, but the large percentage of cases are caused by misalignment of one or more spinal bones (vertebrae), improper posture, spinal curvatures, occupational stresses, or injury to the spine. Any of these conditions may cause irritation or impingement of the nerves supplying the arms, shoulder, and neck. Arm and shoulder pain does not always mean trouble where the pain is felt.

The degree of pain may vary between slight and intermittent to excruciating. But do not be fooled by the degree of pain. Sometimes a slight pain goes along with a serious condition while intense pain may be a symptom of nothing more than temporary muscle soreness caused by a weekend of unusual activity.

It should be apparent to anyone that arm and shoulder pain may indicate a serious condition. But whether the problem is serious or not, the pain can become quite debilitating. Fortunately, the doctor of chiropractic is eminently qualified to correct arm and shoulder problems. The chiropractors education and experience have been directed to such problems that involve the spine, nerves, muscles and joints of the human body.

If you have any questions or would like to make an appointment please call Dr. Mark Jaehning, a lifelong Quincy resident, at Quincy Chiropractic Office, 110 Billings Road, N. Quincy, 773-4400.

Eating Disorders Collaborative To Conduct Free Screening

The South Shore Eating Disorders Collaborative will hold a free screening tonight (Thursday) from 6 to 8 p.m. at 44 Greenleaf St., Quincy.

The screening was rescheduled from Feb. 25 due to the snowstorm.

The collaborative is a group of clinicians, nutritionists and volunteers committed to helping the fight against anorexia, bulimia and compulsive overeating. The group was founded by Kathleen Burns Kingsbury, LMHC, a psychotherapist and educator with offices in Weymouth and Brockton.

The collaborative also includes Lori Lieberman, RD, MPH, a nutrition consultant based out of Weymouth and Quincy; Christine Shruhan, LMHC, a psychotherapist practicing in Quincy; and Mary Ellen Williams, LICSW, a psychotherapist from Belmont Counseling in Brockton.

"I formed the collaborative to help raise awareness among the residents of the South Shore about the dangers of dieting, unhealthy exercise and food and weight obsession," Kingsbury said. "My hope is that as a group we can reach more people and when possible, prevent a young person from turning to food and weight control as a means for handling difficult feelings and coping with low self-esteem."

Eating disorders affect more than five million Americans, most of them women.

James Parisi Joins Army

James F. Parisi has joined the United States Army Reserve under the Delayed Training Program at the U.S. Army Recruiting Station in Quincy.

The program gives young men and women the opportunity to delay reporting for basic military training for up to 270 days.

An enlistment gives many new soldiers the option to learn a new skill, serve their country, and become eligible to receive more than $7000 toward a college education and $20,000 for repayment of college loans.

After completion of basic military training, most soldiers receive advanced individual training in their career specialty.

The recruit qualifies for a $3000 enlistment bonus.

Parisi, a student at North Quincy High School, will report to North Jackson, S.C., for basic training June 30.

He is the only son of Mary L. and Enrico D. Parisi of 186 Wilson Ave., Wollaston.

Ready Or Not, Here They Come

Now that your house is on the market, you want to do everything you can to make a good impression on potential buyers; especially those who arrive on your doorstep with very little notice. It's perfectly natural for your home to collect a little clutter throughout the week, but where can you hide that clutter when those last minute lookers knock on your door? Believe it or not, it can be done. Here are five great hiding places buyers will never know about when viewing a house for the first time.

Under the bed. This is a nice big place to hide your clutter. Clothes, toys, shoes, and whatever else you can fling from all directions can be kicked under the bed at the last minute.

In the washer and dryer. This is a great hiding place because buyers rarely, if ever, open a washer or dryer. This makes them ideal last minute hideaways for toys, books, dirty clothes, etc. However, if you decide to utilize space, be sure to tell the rest of the family so that no one decides to turn on the machine and do laundry.

Trunk of the car. If a Realtor is pulling into your driveway, and you are standing there holding two paper bags filled with household items, then the trunk could come in very handy!

Behind the sofa. Because most sofas are against a wall, they make great hiding spots. And buyers won't even think to peek!

Your refrigerator. This may appear far fetched, but buyers typically will not open your refrigerator. This makes it an ideal place for stashing any last-minute items that won't mind being cold.

Delahunt Launches Study Of Local Prescription Costs

Congressman William Delahunt has commissioned a Congressional study into prescription drug disparities faced by many senior citizens on the South Shore and Cape Cod.

The study will assess the costs of common prescription drugs for area seniors who are either uninsured or whose health plans do not offer prescription drug benefits. It will then contrast those costs with corresponding prices paid by major corporate and institutional customers—like large insurance companies and HMOs.

"Many managed care companies maintain their profit margins through significant price breaks from prescription drug companies," Delahunt said. "The question is whether senior citizens—many of whom are especially vulnerable consumers—are being forced to subsidize these corporate discounts."

Delahunt said that studies elsewhere in the country showed that, for common prescription drugs, the average difference paid by senior citizens and nearby HMOs exceeded 100 percent. Other studies revealed that some widely prescribed medications—like Tyclid, a drug for stroke victims—are subject to 300 percent markups.

The Delahunt study is designed to document prices charged by area retail pharmacies for the ten most common medications used by older Southeastern Massachusetts residents. These medicines include Zocor for reducing cholesterol, Norvasc for high blood pressure and Relafen for arthritis relief.

Congressional investigators with the House Government reform Committee will work, at Delahunt's direction, with numerous local senior groups and retail pharmacists to assemble data. The Congressman will then release a formal report on the extent of any local discrepancies, and their impact on area seniors.

With prescription drug costs growing faster than nearly any other segment of the U.S. economy, many seniors are currently facing a prescription drug nightmare—taking advantage of a conflict between state and federal laws—sharply scaled back drug benefits this year for older beneficiaries. According to Delahunt, many seniors will now be forced to pay even more for prescription medications, and others will not be able to afford them.

As recently named co-chair of the House Older Americans Caucus—a bipartisan Congressional group advocating on issues of particular importance to senior citizens—Delahunt will play a leading role in upcoming debates on matters important to the nation's seniors. In addition to protecting the future integrity of Social Security and Medicare, the Caucus will focus on improving access to quality, affordable health care and strengthening long-term care. Delahunt will also bring prescription drug costs—a priority noted in the President's State of the Union last month—to the top of the Caucus agenda.

ade with Citizens," said Mary Lynn Lenz, Citizens senior vice president and director of Retail Banking. "Quincy is one of the largest and most important retail markets and we're fortunate to have someone of Doug's vision and experience at the helm of Quincy Center."

A Hanover resident, Burton is active in the South Shore community, serving on the Board of Directors of the Marshfield Kiwanis Club. He is also a member of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce. Burton is a University of New Hampshire alumnus.

Keohane Funeral Home Adds Internet Address To Death Notices

Keohane Funeral Service has become the first firm in Massachusetts to include its web site address in newspaper death notices.

The site, located at www.keohane.com, features directions to each of Keohane's four funeral homes, including printable maps to help family and friends arrive at the funeral home with minimal effort. All death notices are also on the web site so people can easily check viewing hours and funeral times.

"Since the Internet site was launched a few weeks ago, we have had very positive feedback from people who have used it," said Edward Keohane, president of Keohane Funeral Service. "We've been tracking 'hits' on our site and are very pleased with the number of people who are taking advantage of this service."

This is not the first time that Keohane has offered an innovative service. In 1996, the firm was the first in New England to have a professionally trained grief counselor on staff. We try to take advantage of new ways to help the people we serve during their time of loss," said Keohane. "We felt that with the web site, we could use technology to make things just a bit easier for people," Keohane said. "People with access to the web site can print out directions and a map to have with them in the car, which is much simpler than calling us and writing down directions. Also, the web site allows people who are at a distance and might not have access to the local newspapers to read the death notice of a loved one."

Keohane Funeral Service has two funeral homes in Quincy, as well as the Pyne Keohane Funeral Home in Hingham and the Keefe Keohane Funeral Home in West Roxbury. The firm is a member of the Nationally Selected Morticians, an invitation-only organization dedicated to maintaining the highest standards of service in the funeral industry.

Michael Hussey Receives Heroism Award For Sea Rescue

Captain Michael Hussey of Marshfield, a Quincy native, was recently presented the Admiral of the Sea Award for helping to save the lives of three fishermen in the Sea of Japan.

Hussey and the crew aboard the SS Cornucopia intercepted a distress signal from a capsized Korean fishing boat and Hussey quickly took action to help those in need. Once alongside the survival craft, the men were carried to safety by Hussey, who was Chief Officer at the time.

Six others were presumed dead at sea.

The humane actions earned Hussey national admiration from the United Seaman's Service. The Honorable Richard A. Gephardt, Minority Leader of the U.S. House of Representatives, presented the Admiral of the Sea Award to Captain Hussey at an awards dinner at the New York Sheraton.

Hussey credits his parents, the late Quincy Police Detective Paul Hussey and Regina Hussey of Quincy, with fostering an appreciation for the well-being of others.

"I will always be grateful to my parents for promoting the values of humanity, respect and leadership. I believe these early lessons in life rooted an instinct within me to reach out to others on a daily basis," he said.

Recently, a local Girl Scout troop in Marshfield visited Captain Hussey, their very own resident role model, to learn more about his rescue and vocation.

Capt. Hussey, who served in the Persian Gulf War, is presently Master aboard the SS Trinity with Sabine Transportation. Hussey graduated from the United States Merchant Marine Academy in 1987 and Boston College High School in 1982.

He and his wife, Sharon, have three children: Shannon, Tara and James. In the near future, Hussey hopes to secure a permanent shoreside job and resume coaching at his high school alma mater.

Ellen Laramée Named Director Residential Care At Marina Place

Ellen Laramée, R.N., has been named director of Residential Care at Marina Place, the South Shore's newest senior living residence featuring independent living, assisted living and an Alzheimer's program, announces Executive Director Patricia Pierce Garre.

As residential care director, Laramée will oversee the healthcare services for the residents of the 110-unit residence located at Marina Bay.

Laramée has more than 25 years of experience in healthcare services. Previously, she served as home health liaison for Welch Home Health at South Shore Hospital, Braintree Hospital and Welch Nursing and Rehabilitation Centers. In this position, she was responsible for the continuity of care for patients transitioning from health care facilities into the community—coordinating healthcare services, interacting with physicians, insurance carriers and case managers.

As a visiting nurse for Welch Home Health between 1990 and 1996, Laramée was responsible for providing clinical assessments and clinical care. She also assisted patients and families with identifying and utilizing community resources.

Additionally, Laramée served as a community health nurse for the town of Marshfield, where she managed town-wide health programs, assisting patients' needs for home care or community assistance.

"We are delighted to have Ellen on board," Garre said. "Her experience working with seniors and their families, coupled with her knowledge of the local healthcare community make her an excellent choice for Marina Place."

Marina Place is designed for seniors who want convenience, a stimulating environment and personal care assistance now or in the future. It offers a full range of services and amenities to its residents in a residential style environment with the comforts of home.

For more information, call Joan Wright at (617) 770-3264.

Presidents Bumped By Brockton, 4-3

Heartbreaker Follows Win Over Braintree

By CHARLES ROSS

The Quincy High School hockey team was knocked out of the Division 1 South Sectional tournament Sunday night after dropping a heartbreaker to Brockton 4-3 in a game played at Brockton's home rink.

Last Friday, the Presidents won their first round game by beating Braintree 5-4 to advance to play the Boxers. In the Braintree game, Junior Scott Mattson opened the scoring for Quincy with Brian Nolan assisting.

Quincy's second goal also came in the first period as senior Sean Hauld beat Wamp goalie Nick Hanks. Joe Vallatini scored the third President's goal with an assist to senior Sean LeFebvre.

In the third period,

LeFebvre lit the lamp for Quincy's fourth goal. The Wamps tied the game in the third period and with less than two minutes to go, it was Mattson whose wrist shot went in off a great pass from freshman Bill McKeon to give Quincy the win sending them to the next round Sunday at Brockton.

The Presidents came out flying in the game against the Boxers who came into the game with a record of 19-2-2. Once again, it was Mattson who opened the scoring for Quincy. Brockton answered with a goal, but the Presidents regained the lead as Joe Vallatini scored with an assist to junior Brian Nolan.

Woodward School Wildcats Independent Girls Champions

The Woodward School Wildcats Basketball team clinched the championship of the Independent Girls Conference (I.G.C.) Woodward dominated the I.G.C. this year and finished the regular season undefeated with a 12-0 record under Head Coach Bob Giordano.

The team dedicated the season to the memory of Robert Johnston. Mr. Johnston was the much admired and devoted headmaster of The Woodward School who died tragically last year after a long illness. Fittingly, the Woodward basketball team clinched the championship almost to the day of the one year anniversary of Mr. Johnston's death.

Since Giordano took over the struggling program three years ago, Woodward has compiled a 29-9 league record. In this time the team has made it to the playoffs in the first year; last year the team made it to the championship finals and this year, together with winning the championship, the basketball team qualified and was invited to the New England Preparatory School Conference (N.E.P.S.A.C.) tournament. The third-seeded Woodward played St. Andrews of Rhode Island in the opening round Wednesday at the Armory on Hancock St., Quincy Center.

Woodward posted six players in the I.G.C. All-Star game. They are: Jackie O'Meara, Janet McNamara, Kathleen Hester, Audrey Ferguson, Jessica Boothby and Shante Moore. Three players were elected to All-League: Ferguson, Boothby and Moore. Junior center Audrey Ferguson led the I.G.C. in scoring and in rebounds along with being a N.E.P.S.A.C. All-Star selection.

Giordano, who is also the school's athletic director, attributes the success of Woodward athletics to the dedication, sportsmanship and pride the players bring to the program. Other notable athletic achievements at Woodward include the 1998-99 varsity soccer team which placed third in its first year as a varsity sport, compiling an 8-5-1 record; the 1998 varsity softball team which compiled an 11-1 record; jayvee volleyball, soon to be a varsity sport; a successful dance team program and double dutching, as well as thoughts about adding ultimate Frisbee.

Falmouth Clips North Again, 5-3

Raiders Advanced After OT Win Over Durfee

Coach Bob Doyle of North Quincy and his hockey team were very familiar with Durfee, as the teams had played twice this year splitting the games.

North took off to a 4-0 lead, but had to hang on and senior winger Mike Sullivan scored in overtime to give the Red Raiders a 5-4 win.

That advanced them to the next round game on Sunday against fellow Old Colony League foe Falmouth who beat North twice this year, once by a 10-0 score. The Clippers got up early 3-0 and North came up on the losing end of a 5-3 score sending them out of the tournament.

Against Durfee, freshman Scott MacDonald scored first for North. Charlie Sorrento set up sophomore Matt Holt who made it 2-0 North. Paul Markarian and Chad Fitzpatrick each scored a goal and assisted on the other giving the Red Raiders a 4-0 advantage.

Goalie Chris Carthas played a strong game for North. Coach Doyle was not happy that the team let a 4-0 lead slip away, but was pleased with the win and advancement to the next round.

League scoring champ Paul Markarian scored the first North goal, assisted by Mike Sullivan and Ross O'Driscoll. That cut the Clipper lead to 3-1.

A minute later senior Chad Fitzpatrick scored North's second goal, assisted by Joe Fitzpatrick and sophomore Graham McShane. Fitzpatrick scored his second of the game with 7:20 to go in the game with Sullivan and Markarian assisting.

But second seed Falmouth was too tough and came away with the win.

Coach Doyle was disappointed in the loss but was pleased with the effort of his entire team.

"I couldn't be prouder of a bunch of guys who gave it their all this season and

St. Joseph's Blue Devils Seeks S.S. Parochial League Title

By ROBERT CERASOLI II

The St. Joseph's School Blue Devils culminated its basketball season last Saturday with another "at the buzzer win" against St. Ann's of Quincy.

The Blue Devils, coached by Peter Ramponi and assistant coach George McQuinn, have had an outstanding season with 18 wins and only one loss making the Blue Devils the first-place team in the North Division of the South Shore Parochial School League.

The Blue Devils of St. Joseph's School in Quincy Point exhibits a combination of good sportsmanship, talent and a fierce resistance to losing. The team consists of eighth graders Gary Thomas Jacobs, Saad Bhatti, Michael Capano, Josh Yellin, Brian Sweeney, Kevin O'Connell, James McQuinn and Matthew Ramponi and from the sixth grade class, Tony Pepdjonovic, Alex

Scott and Parker Scott.

The season had many exciting moments and triumphs. Most wins came in the final minutes of the game with some going into overtime and once, double overtime. Top scorers Matt Ramponi and Kevin O'Connell came through with clutch baskets when needed. Rebounding from Josh Yellin and Gary Thomas Jacobs proved invaluable. Fearlessly taking the ball up the middle was James McQuinn. Saad Bhatti, Mike Capano and Brian Sweeney played pivotal roles in helping the team reach their 18-1 record and the triple threat of Tony Pepdjonovic, Alex Scott and Parker Scott guaranteed the Blue Devils went home victorious.

This Friday at 6:30 p.m. at Archbishop Williams High School in Braintree, the St. Joseph's Blue Devils representing Quincy will be compete in the semi-finals for the SSPSL title. This team is ready to compete and definitely ready to take home the championship. Good luck Blue Devils.

Presidents Bumped From Tournament

defenseman Steven Ford blasted one from the point with an assist from Nolan.

Quincy goalie senior Jeff Langille played the game of his career as the Boxers were all over the Quincy net. Langille was called on in a penalty shot awarded to Brockton and he stopped Brockton sniper Phil Nedean.

The game was tied at 3 as time wound down and with 1:27 left Nedean beat the Quincy defense and slipped the puck in the net to give Brockton the 4-3 win and sent Quincy home for the season.

The Presidents ended the year with a record of 11-5-6. Quincy Coach Bob Sylvia called the game, "the best my team has played this year, we went as far as we could and I'm proud of what they accomplished."

Sylvia was asked about playing Brockton in a tourney game in Brockton's home rink.

"Actually the configuration of their rink played to our advantage in the game, but the game should have been played on a neutral rink as tourney games beyond the first round should not give either team home ice advantage," the coach said.

Sylvia, in his 33rd year as Quincy High Hockey coach praised his seniors Jeff Langille, Sean LeFebvre, Joe Vallatini, Sean Haidul, Jake Flemming, Jim Sullivan,

North Quincy ends the year at 11-7-4 and brings to a close the high school careers of eight seniors. Tim O'Connor, Chad Fitzpatrick, Mike Sullivan, Stephen Ford, Sean Slattery, Rich Tatem, Kevin Regan, John Katsirikas and Chris Cullen.

The Presidents coaching staff this year has been coach. Assistant Coaches this year have been George Peachey, Joe Keegan, Jamie Shatzl, Jeff Hines and Graig Copper.

Ted Walsh JV coach, and Mike Furey the ninth grade

As far as next year, Sylvia is optimistic. "We have a lot of good young kinds coming up. It's up to them to work hard in the off season to have a good team next year," he said.

North Quincy Falls

Paul Markarian, John Bertucci, Ryan Barrett, Rob Bell and Chris Carthas all played well as seniors for North.

Coach Doyle is optimistic for next year even though he will lose his leading scorers and starting goaltender. Four freshmen played on varsity this year and four defensemen from the team will all be back next year for North.

"I think we will have a strong core to start and a lot of players will have to step up for next year," Doyle added.

Assisting Doyle as North Quincy hockey coach this year were assistants Mark Boussy, Chip Foley, Tom Borque, Larry Costello, Sean Vermette and goaltending Coach Jim Dunn.

Bantam C's Sweep Cranberry Tournament

The Quincy Bantam C team skated to a four-win sweep of the Cranberry Tournament during February school vacation at the Hobomock Twin Arenas.

Wins over Melrose (5-1), Quincy C-1 (7-3) and the Seahawks (5-2) set the stage for a 5-2 win over the Seahawks in the championship game.

Seven goals by Tim Coughlin, four by Mike Doyle, three by Jim Kuhn and Glen Liberatore, two each by Colin Maxey and Mike Brewster, and a goal by Brian Kenney powered the offense. Lee Sheehan, Lauren Struzik, Tom Walsh, Mike Conley and Mike Maguire assisted on the goals.

Strong goaltending by Matt Peters backboned the defense.

The Quincy Bantam C team will compete in the state tournament at Ulin Rink in Milton March 5-7.

Janet Calhoun Steps Down As ENC Volleyball, Softball Coach

Janet Ranstrom Calhoun, a part of Eastern Nazarene College athletics for 22 years, has stepped down as head coach of ENC volleyball and softball due to family reasons.

A 1981 graduate of ENC, Calhoun was an outstanding volleyball setter and basketball point guard for the Crusaders. She is the only female athlete to have her uniform number retired at ENC.

She began her coaching career as an unpaid assistant in volleyball and worked herself into a job. For the past seven years she has been the head volleyball coach.

During her volleyball years Calhoun was instrumental in leading ENC to six NAIA national volleyball tournaments, winning three Commonwealth Coast Conference titles and being named Conference Coach of the Year two of the last three years. She was also selected last year as one of the only coaches from New England to participate in the Kaepa Volleyball Festival in California.

During her seven years as head volleyball coach at ENC, she compiled 134 wins and 90 losses. This is a 60 percent winning percentage against some of the top Division III teams in New England. Volleyball also holds the most ENC appearances in the ECAC playoffs.

Janet, the fourth softball coach at ENC, guided the team the last five seasons.

She and her husband Gary have two children, Stacey and Brian.

Four Quincy Student Athletes Honored In Boston

Four female Quincy high school students recently participated in the Massachusetts celebration of National Girls and Women In Sport Day at Faneuil Hall in Boston.

The students were chosen because they are positive contributing members to both their teams and their school.

They are: Kristen Bowes, of North Quincy High School, soccer co-captain, basketball co-captain, and softball player;

Julie Gibbons, of Quincy High School, soccer co-captain and basketball player; Rachel Powers, of North Quincy High School, soccer co-captain, basketball co-captain, and softball player; and Leeanne Martin, of Quincy High School, soccer co-captain, and outdoor track athlete.

The ceremony, which is sponsored by New Agenda Northeast, Massachusetts Interscholastic Athletic Association, and the National Association for Girls and Women in Sport, is held to honor female athletes in the Commonwealth.

Brendan Welch On Dean's List

Brendan Welch of 165 Arlington St., Quincy, has been named to the Dean's List for the fall semester at Westfield State College.

Welch, a senior majoring in criminal justice, is a 1995 graduate of North Quincy High School.

Heather Rendle Patch New ENC Women's Volleyball Coach

Heather Rendle Patch, a former standout at North Quincy High School, has been named head women's volleyball coach at Eastern Nazarene College.

Patch becomes the third volleyball coach in the past 28 years to lead the Crusaders. She succeeds Janet Ranstrom Calhoun who has resigned for family reasons.

While at North Quincy High School, Patch was a four year letter winner in volleyball. Her team was Massachusetts State Champions in 1991 and 1992. During those years she was selected Patriot Ledger All-Scholastic and Boston Globe All-Scholastic.

Patch was also selected the state Division 1 Player of the Year in 1992. She is one of the finest players to graduate from a strong volleyball program coached by her father, Jim Rendle.

She attended Bucknell University on a volleyball scholarship and studied to become a teacher. She collected numerous volleyball honors in college, including Patriot League Academic Honor Roll for four years (1992-96). She was also named Patriot League Player of the Week and captain of her team in 1996. In 1997 she received the WMLP/WVLY Award in recognition of Exceptional Athletic Achievement. Patch has been head coach of Mass. Juniors for three years. She has coached most recently in the Patriots Elite program. For the past three years she has been co-director of the Dig It Volleyball Camp.

Heather is no stranger to ENC since she has worked at Kinder Haus along side her mother-in-law Anne Patch during her summers. She is married to Michael Patch. Her brother Jim is on the ENC men's basketball team and plays men's club volleyball. She is currently a first grade teacher at the Marshall School in Quincy.

Wendy Reid Named ENC Softball Coach

Wendy Reid has accepted the head softball coaching position at Eastern Nazarene College vacated by Janet Calhoun who stepped down for family reasons.

Reid was assistant coach under Calhoun for the past year. Her new position begins this season.

At Mt. Vernon High School in Ohio, Reid lettered in three sports. She was selected the Mt. Vernon News All-Star while in high school.

A graduate of Mt. Vernon Nazarene College, she was a four-year starter in softball. Her career college record was 120-39. Playing against stiff competition, they managed to win .755 percent of their games.

Wendy was selected All Conference at two positions. In 1990 she was All MOC second base person. In 1992 she was first team All MOC catcher. She was named NCCAA All District in 1992. She was also a member of the 1992 NCCAA World Series All Tournament Team. She played her final game in the 1992 NCCAA Finals losing 1-0, but going 3-3 at the plate as the Cougars finished as national runners-up.

Besides being an assistant coach at ENC she has also coached in Ohio as head coach of 16 and under for Knox County.

Wendy is married to ENC baseball coach Todd Reid. They have a two-year-old daughter named Maddux K.

ANSWERS TO CROSSWORD

Your Horoscope by Natasha

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Someone you deal with this week is opinionated. You'll be enjoying happy times socially and singles will meet with romantic introductions. This weekend, you may be in a bit of a rush.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) A career matter may remain on hold for now. You'll want some time to spend alone with a loved one. You'll also be making some changes at home. Try not to be hasty.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A friend's jealousy may surprise you. Romance and pleasure interests are happily accounted, but guard against infidelity or impetuosity over the weekend.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You're stressed for a while on the job, but then a breakthrough comes. Income should be picking up now, but during the weekend, you must guard against being heavy with loved ones.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Business and pleasure combine to your advantage. You'll be working hard now, but you remain charming and sociable. You may be making plans for a weekend party.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) You're inclined to be self-insistent as the week begins, but overall this is a time of sharing and affection between loved ones. You're ready to act on an investment matter.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Both home decorating projects and travel are favored this week. However, avoid an argument with an adviser. Your financial picture should change for the better soon.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) One conversion this week frustrates you. Bats inclusive, though, leads to career gain. Travel is a plus right now and joy comes from dining and recreational interests.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) You're still very much in a festive mood and will be enjoying good times with friends and loved ones. There are some unfinished tasks you'll be getting out of the way over the weekend.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) You may be stuck on one work problem early in the week. Developments affecting finances are favorable. New starts are indicated at present, but you may be too self-insistent.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Try not to be stubborn with a close tie. Travel and dealings with advisers are favored. You're inclined to impulsive shopping this weekend and need to watch expenditures.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Be cooperative about money concerns. Income should be good and career efforts meet with success. During the weekend, you have extra energy but must avoid being pushy or argumentative.

SCOTT DEWARE

When is a person old? A person is old when his fire of learning has died; when he refuses to take a chance and hides behind a cloak of security. When he refuses to accept a challenge; when his vitality runs dry; when he resigns himself to passive thoughts; when meeting new people is 'just too much trouble'... That's when a person is old (and it may be at 30 or it may be at 80+)

Routine, uninspired living, lack of challenge, laziness, non-creative thinking... these are some of the robbers of growth, maturity and longevity. Without them, one dies prematurely at 90. With them one lives a full life, REGARDLESS of the calendar. As long as a person is changing and enjoying, he is not old.

Emerson said: "We do not count a man's years until he has nothing else to count!"

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
THE TRIAL COURT
THE PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT
Norfolk Division

Docket No. 99P0384EP
Estate of WALTER P. DONAHUE

Late of QUINCY
In the County of NORFOLK
NOTICE

A petition has been presented in the above-captioned matter praying that the last will of said decedent be proved and allowed and that BARBARA DONAHUE of QUINCY in the County of NORFOLK be appointed executrix, named in the will without surety on the bond.

If you desire to object to the allowance of said petition, you or your attorney must file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham on or before ten o'clock in the forenoon on April 07, 1999.

In addition you should file a written statement of objections to the petition, giving the specific grounds therefore, within thirty (30) days after the return day (or such other time as the Court, on motion with notice to the petitioner, may allow) in accordance with Probate Rule 16A.

WITNESS, David H. Kopelman, Esquire, First Justice of said Court at Dedham, this day, 23 February, 1999.

who do not respond within 90 days, he mails a series of letters to them.

"For the Asian community, which represents about 18 percent of the city's population, census forms then will be mailed in Cantonese and Vietnamese where we feel it is applicable," Shea said.

He said that list of residents is developed by using school records and assessors' records to identify those non-English-speaking residents.

He added that the Asian population, which had been concentrated in North Quincy and Montclair, is spreading throughout the city but is not growing in significant numbers.

He said when the 1990 federal census was conducted, it tabulated about 3,800 Asians. However, in 1995 and 1996, Shea said there were nearly as many 3,800 Asian children in the school system.

Council President Peter Kolson suggested that with two colleges in the city, perhaps some of those students, who are familiar with Quincy, could help take the federal census for three or four weeks.

He also suggested that the census forms be mailed in a brightly colored envelope so that the recipients would know that the contents were important.

Harold said his asking Shea to discuss census-taking procedures was not criticism of his work. In fact, he added, Secretary of State William Francis Galvin had described Shea as "one of the leaders among the clerks' association, particularly regarding census collection."

Kolson also asked Shea to look into the possibility of having the residents respond to the annual city count via the computer.

Shea said there was no apparatus to do that now, but he would look into it. He noted that the state of Washington allows post card voter registration.

mission. This is our first accomplishment, and it won't be our last," she said.

Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi welcomes Natale's too. "He's a quality individual, a quality retailer. I've known him for 15 or 20 years, when he had his Braintree store.

"This will certainly enhance retailing opportunities in Quincy Center. I'm very pleased," said Raymondi. "The Keep It In Quincy group deserves an awful lot of credit."

Natale's has been in business for 30 years, first opening a shop on Washington Street in Braintree Square. He opened a second shop in Hanover and eventually closed the Braintree store. Agostino said he plans to keep the Hanover shop and expand the property at Quincy Avenue and create 2,500- to 2,800-square-foot clothing store."

Marshall Fifth Graders May Be Moved

Point Webster Opening Will Affect Other Schools

A DONATION OF $1,284 to purchase a patrol bicycle and accessories for Community Police Officers in the Ward 2 area is presented to Ward 2 City Councilor Daniel Raymond, chairman of the Council Public Safety Committee, by Paul Green, president and CEO of Mass Cooperative Bank which will be opening at 70 Quincy Ave. in the Fall. With them are Community Police Officers Lt. William Steenman, James Deantremont, Ralph Radzevich, and Christine Kraunells.

When the Point Webster Middle School opens next September for the sixth, seventh and eighth graders in Quincy Point, students from other schools will be affected.

School Superintendent Eugene Creedon has proposed bringing in classes from Marshall, Montclair and Central schools to fill the new school which has a capacity for 600 students. The plan proposes:

- Moving the fifth graders at the Marshall School into Point Webster;
- Relocating the fifth graders in the citywide Elementary Laboratory Center for gifted and talented students from Montclair to the Point Webster;
- Assigning sixth graders in the advanced placement (APC) program at Central to Point Webster until Central School is moved into the present Quincy School.

Creedon was scheduled to meet with parents and faculty of the brand-new Marshall School last night (Wednesday) to detail his plan.

Parents are unhappy, citing the fact that fifth graders are only 10 years old and should not be attending a school with eighth graders who are teenagers.

"All of our spaces are utilized right now," said Marshall Principal Philip Connolly. "We don't have Parking Garage, Apartment Building For Hancock Lot?

By MARILYN JACKSON
Quincy developer Mark Dickinson and Quincy 2000 executive director Joseph Mannarino are exploring the feasibility of building a four-story apartment building and a multi-level garage in the Hancock Parking lot opposite the Quincy courthouse.

Dickinson was named the designated developer for the city-owned lot about four years ago after several area developers responded to a request for proposals.

"My position is that the Hancock Lot has to be developed to provide more parking for this section of Hancock Street," said

Mayor James Sheets. "We don't have enough parking."

For several years, the Quincy Business and Professional Association has urged that the lot be expanded for more parking to meet the existing needs of the retailers and businesspeople on Hancock Street. The lot, which has about 530 spaces, is heavily used not only by the business people but those working or doing business at the court as well.

Dickinson had submitted far more extensive plans to build a commercial building with office space plus parking, said Sheets. The

New Businesses Finding City Attractive

Furniture Store Coming To Quincy Center

The Furniture Market is coming to Quincy Center, the latest in a number of businesses that are locating here.

Quincy 2000 Executive Director Joseph Mannarino announces that The Furniture Market announce that The Furniture Market has leased 33,000 square feet of space at 169 Parkway, former site of Party Experience and Paperama.

Mannarino was joined in the announcement by Richard Morde, owner of the furniture store; Joseph Zink, president of Atlantic Management, and owner of the property; and John McDonald of Retail Properties, the real estate broker.

"The Furniture Market is filling one of the largest vacant retail spaces in Quincy Center," Mannarino said. "I'm pleased that this established regional retailer recognizes the strength of the market in Quincy. I think The Furniture Market fills an important retail need in Quincy as there's no comparable furniture retailer in the area that provides this type of product at such an attractive price."

"Quincy 2000 has been working closely with Mr.

Zink for the past several months and we are pleased to have contributed in Mr. Morde's decision to locate The Furniture Market in Quincy Center."

Morde said: "I am very excited about the opening of the Quincy Center store because of its visibility from the Burgin Parkway, combined with the new connector road to Hancock Street. This makes it a powerful location with excellent long-term growth potential." Zink expressed his thanks to Quincy 2000 for participat-

NQHS Course Selection Deadline Today

The course selection process for grades 9, 10, and 11 at North Quincy High School begins March 2.

Students will be instructed in the process by the guidance staff and will have input and recommendations from the department heads and their teachers.

Students and parents are encouraged to read the program of studies and course description booklets which students will receive and bring home.

Parents with questions about the process are asked to call their child's guidance counselor at 984-8747.

Deadline to return the course selection sheet signed by student and parent is today (Thursday).

Would Serve 10,000 In Area

Funds Sought For Veterans Satellite Clinic

A satellite clinic for veterans would be of great value to the 10,000 veterans who live in Quincy, according to Hank Bradley, director of veterans services.

"I believe there is a need for a clinic in Quincy," he said. "There is a large number of senior veterans we have in the Quincy area, which includes Braintree, Weymouth, Milton and Canton and even south Dorchester who are able to drive here or, better yet, use public transportation."

He said he is working with U.S. Rep. William Delahunt's office to help secure funds for a clinic. Presently, the Veterans Administration now is assessing how much the clinics in Worcester, Lowell, Hyannis and Framingham are being used, he said. The number is low in Framingham, said Bradley, but it has open for only six months, he said.

Bradley estimated about 20 percent of the area veterans would use a clinic, although nationally, the average is about 10 percent of the 23 million veterans.

HENRY BRADLEY

Meeting with the City Council last week, he said as veterans age, they are developing more health concerns. And, there are more women veterans now.

Bradley said he has had some communication with both the Veterans Administration and Quincy Hospital to determine whether a veterans' satellite clinic could be housed within the hospital.

Both Councilor-at-large Paul Harold and Bradley acknowledged that the Veterans Administration is rethinking health care issues. For instance, its large facilities are no longer called hospitals but rather medical centers.

Some of the larger centers have served more as nursing homes than hospitals, Bradley continued, noting that a quadriplegic who recently died had been hospitalized since the Battle of Iwo Jima had been bedridden for more than 50 years.

Another issue the Veterans Administration is exploring is the geographic distribution of the veterans who seek health care from the facilities in Brockton, West Roxbury, Jamaica Plain and on Causeway Street in Boston.

Bradley said he did not know whether a satellite clinic would be affiliated with Brockton or Jamaica Plain, which is now combined with the West Roxbury facility. That needs to be determined before a budget request can be made for a satellite clinic to open in two years.

He suggested that the clinic could be open one or two days a week and then expand the hours. He anticipated that there would be between 500 and 700 visits (perhaps some would be repeat visits) and the number would grow to about 1,000 to 1,200.

"It would make sense to move a satellite to the South Shore and even better to Quincy," said Harold. "I'm not sure we should look only at the hospital. Perhaps it could be free-standing."

Harold said easy access should be an important consideration as well.

Bradley said he wanted to publicize an upcoming Veterans Administration health clinic for veterans in Quincy and the surrounding towns, like Weymouth, Braintree, Milton and Canton. Last year, 84 veterans attended. This year's event will be held May 14 at the Quincy Armory on Hancock Street.

Changes At City Hall Chiccino, Madden Treasurer-Collector Personnel Director

It's official. James Chiccino, personnel director for the city for the past three years, has been named treasurer-collector of taxes, effective March 19.

He succeeds Dana Childs, who served as treasurer-collector for the past 12 years.

In announcing the appointment Mayor James Sheets cited Chiccino's nearly 20 years of banking experience. Sheets named Assistant City Solicitor Kevin Madden of Quincy as the city's new personnel director, and Paul Hines of Quincy as assistant city solicitor.

Hines is a 1991 cum laude graduate of Suffolk University Law School and has been a practicing attorney for eight years. For the past five years, he has maintained a private practice in North Quincy.

Madden has been an assistant city solicitor since 1990 when Sheets first came into office and has handled most of the Civil Service work regarding personnel, said the mayor.

"Given Kevin's daily involvement with the legal aspects of the city's personnel matters, he was the logical choice for the personnel director's position. He brings to his new position a great knowledge of employment law and nine years of experience with city employees and personnel issues. He will continue to be a great asset to the city."

Of Chiccino, Sheets stated: "Jim is well known and respected in the banking community. His 20-plus years of private banking experience along with the kills he has developed as personnel director make him uniquely qualified for the treasurer-collector's position.

"We are very fortunate to have already working for the city someone with his experience... He will step right in and do a great job."

"With the appointments of Jim Chiccino as treasurer and Kevin Madden as personnel director, the city has been able to retain two skilled professional individuals," said Sheets. "Paul Hines as assistant solicitor will bring a new set of skills to the city's law office. Each of these individuals, through their work and involvement in the community, have shown a great commitment to Quincy."

Sheets Sees Hospital Partner Soon

Mayor James Sheets says the city is reaching the point of choosing a partner for Quincy Hospital.

"I expect we'll be making a public announcement within the next four weeks," said Sheets.

One of the biggest issues facing Quincy Hospital and all other hospitals is how the federal government plans to handle Medicare. "Most if not all hospitals in the state, in New England, are looking at losses," he said. "The fact is that the federal government is trying to shuffle the Medicare cuts and bring them into line in the balanced budget."

"That has caused Quincy Hospital some problems which neither officials nor the hospital can resolve," he said.

In an effort to address the shortfall, hospitals have been merging and cutting staff to provide an economy of operation. "We're no different from the other hospitals, but we are publicly owned. Our resources are limited."

Priest Shortage May Necessitate Teaming Reconfiguring Parishes Does Not Mean Closing Them

By MARILYN JACKSON

Like many communities, Quincy's nine Roman Catholic churches are affected by the shortage of priests.

And Bernard Cardinal Law has asked all the churches in the Archdiocese to develop a pastoral plan which would allow the continuation of all the ministrations of each parish with fewer full-time priests.

The cardinal is not thinking about closing any parishes, said the Rev. Daniel Graham, pastor of St. Joseph's Church.

Just five of the parishes — Sacred Heart, St. John's, St. Ann's, St. Joseph's and St. Mary's — have two full-time priests while the other four — Most Blessed Sacrament, Our Lady of Good Counsel, St. Boniface and "In the future some parishes which have a low membership and a declining number of baptisms, weddings and funerals may have to team together to make sure the parish has the necessary staffing," said Fr. Graham, who also serves as one of the vicars in the Archdiocese's South Region.

In addition to the Quincy churches, his region includes the three churches in Braintree, the three in Milton, the two in Randolph plus St. James in Stoughton.

"It's been coming for a while, but now the reality is here," he said of the inevitable reconfiguration of some of the parishes.

Fr. Graham said he did not envision the Archdiocese closing any of the parishes. "But down the line, in 2005, when we won't have 15 priests in Quincy as we do now — we're hoping that direction will change, who knows — we're trying to be creative in what we have at the present time."

"Perhaps there are as many as 35 priests who retire or die during a calendar year, but we're only ordaining between five and 10 annually at the present time," he added.

Last month Bernard Cardinal Law sent a letter to all the churches in the Archdiocese advising the clergy and parishioners that he had

Quincy Hospital Among 100 Top 'Techno Savvy'

Quincy Hospital has been named among the country's top 100 "most wired" or "techno savvy" hospitals and health systems, according to Hospitals & Health Networks Magazine.

The hospital and health systems who were selected among the top 100 were chosen for their commitment to using technology to link patients, doctors, nurses, employees, suppliers and insurers. The institutions responded to an eight page survey asking which technologies they would use and how they interpret the data. The emphasis for the survey was how much and in what ways the technologies benefit patients and meet the needs of the clinicians who care for them.

Quincy Hospital met the criteria for being "most wired" because the data from their information systems, such as laboratory, pharmacy, radiology, and nursing notes, is accessible both throughout the hospital and at off-campus locations. With this system, physicians can access important patient records from their offices and homes.

Quincy Hospital was also chosen among the top 100 most techno-savvy because of the high security level built into the system.

"Our main priorities when selecting an information system here at Quincy Hospital were twofold," said Robert Borr, Chief Information Officer at Quincy Hospital. "First we required a system that would allow physicians access to important information that would facilitate the care of their patients. Second, we needed a system that would ensure patient confidentiality. It is essential that we are able to secure information and allow access to patient records to only those who need to know."

"Quincy Hospital, if not the most automated hospital in the state, is very close to it," added Borr.

Remembering Pat Toland

You get to meet a lot of people in the newspaper business.
All kinds.

One of the real nice ones was Pat Toland who has been gone nearly five years. But not forgotten.

Friends are holding a special remembrance evening Tuesday, March 16 from 6 to 9 p.m. at the Quincy Neighborhood Club.

It would have been her 67th birthday.

Pat waged a courageous and uncomplaining battle against cancer which she ultimately lost Sept. 7, 1994 at a young age, 62.

She was assistant city clerk at the time, a post she enjoyed but one she would hold too briefly--less than two years.

She had served six years with distinction on the school committee and 12 in the city council. Two of those 12 years as council president, the first and only woman so honored in the city's history.

I met Pat when I was starting The Sun in 1968 and she was active in the Quincy League of Women Voters and we became friends.

Politics can be rough and tough. And sometimes, a little dirty. But Pat never stooped to that.

Pat didn't look or sound like a politician. She looked and sounded like a former school teacher, which she was. But she got into politics because she thought she could do something for her community. And, she did.

She had her share of disappointments, bruises, and hurt in politics and in life. But she was never discouraged and never complained.

I have said this before and say it again: Pat was a lady always--and in all ways.

She never hurt anyone. She was never unkind. She liked people and they liked her. She was easy to like. She was a fun person to be with. Especially with time out to shoot the breeze with over a martini.

Pat was a fighter. She knew tragedy face to face. It invaded her family but she fought to overcome it.

And she knew that dreaded enemy, cancer, and fought that gallantly. She was in and out of hospitals the last few months of her life but fought her way back to City Hall. And near the end, it was a real struggle for her to get there.

She managed to get there Sept. 2, 1994, for the last time. Five days later, she was gone.

Her death shocked even some of her closest friends who were taken by surprise because she had managed to hide from them the fact that she was fast losing the battle.

If Pat had a fault, those who knew her would smile, it was being late. She seldom arrived at political functions--even her own--or kept appointments on time.

She became famous for it. Her late arrivals became a lovable Pat Toland trademark. Half the fun of attending some of the functions was wondering how late she would arrive.

During political campaigns she would call The Sun to say she would be over, at 2 o'clock with a political ad or a news release.

"Pat, you know you're not going to be here at 2 o'clock," I would tell her. "I'll be there, definitely," she would insist.

So, I bet she wouldn't and she would bet she would. The wager was usually a good, dry martini.

Pat might arrive at 2 o'clock but more likely the next day or next week. "Something came up," was her explanation.

I think down through the years I lost one or two martinis to her and won the rest.

The committee of friends planning next week's event include Congressman William Delahunt as honorary chairman, Isabel Armstrong, Joyce Baker, Mary Blood, Elaine Clarke, Alicia Coletti, Mary Collins, Norma Gacicia, Alicia Gardner, Ann Kane, Barbara Morris, Gloria Noble, Josephine Shea, Carol Stafford, assisted by Pat's children, Elizabeth Bates, John and Brendan Toland.

Proceeds from the reception will be for a gift to the new Children's Room at the Thomas Crane Public Library. Quite appropriate because Pat loved children.

The Four Seasons Hotel in Boston is offering a Friday and Saturday night stay and Sunday brunch for two in the Ajournd 'Hui valued at $1,200 as a drawing prize.

The Pro-Dixie Jazz Band directed by Dr. Sumner Hirschberg will play at the reception. Sumner and the boys are donating their time because of their affection for Pat.

Tickets are $35 and available from committee members.

Friends agreed that the Neighborhood Club was the appropriate spot for next week's event. That's where they and Pat got together to map her school committee and city council election campaigns and to celebrate her victories.

Next Tuesday evening is going to be an informal celebration of her life.

Her friends like to think that somehow she might be there.

Sheets Sees Ship Work In June

Mayor James Sheets said this week he expected that Mass. Heavy Industries will begin construction on the first of six tankers in June.

"Work at the shipyard is proceeding," he said. "All the modernization is done, and the machinery will have been tested by May 31."

"There will be a keel-laying ceremony in June.

They don't build ships that way nowadays, but there will be a ceremony for the first double-hulled tanker," he said.

Shipbuilding at the former Fore River yard ended in the early 1980s when General Dynamics vacated the premises. It previously was owned by Bethlehem Steel Corp.

Public school children first said the Pledge of Allegiance and saluted the flag during the National School celebration held in 1892. The words "under God" were not added until 1954.

Scenes From Yesterday

SQUANTUM SCHOOLHOUSE, SQUANTUM, MASS.

THIS IS A 1921 POSTCARD view of the new four room Squantum Elementary School on Huckins Avenue. When this school opened, there were only four teachers for about 100 in eight grades. Prior to having their own school Squantum youngsters went to the Quincy School in Atlantic. They went by wagon, sleigh and trolley to the mainland. Sometimes they went by barge. The old causeway was often underwater and at best was not more than a dirt road at the level of the marsh. Several additions have expanded this school as Squantum's population increased.

The Significance Of The North Commons Quarries

Editor, The Quincy Sun,

We did not realize until reading the Feb. 18 edition of The Quincy Sun that the controversial new Highpoint development being discussed in Quincy has been proposed for construction near or on the old North Commons stone quarries.

Back in 1995, when the initial planning was undertaken for the Year 2000 Waterfront Heritage Park in Quincy, significant new research was conducted to document the importance of these early Quincy granite quarries. We learned that the North Commons quarries were responsible for producing at least 50 percent of Quincy's total granite production in the earliest years, and they were of special significance because they produced all the granite which was shipped out of the Old Quincy Canal and through the 1825-26 Canal Lock by the Souther Tide Mills.

The North Commons quarries were worked and promoted by many of Quincy's most influential families and men, including Josiah Adams, John Souther, the Hardwicks, Bracketts, Fields, Derry, and Thomas Crane.

On the basis of these discoveries, new exhibit materials were prepared documenting the paths along which the large Quincy stone blocks were moved, both by Quincy ox cart and Quincy stone sloop. The materials were publicly displayed at the Commonwealth Museum in Boston. Because the Old Quincy Canal was commenced in 1825—before the more famous Quincy Granite Railway—it appears that the North Commons Quarries were among the earliest worked in Quincy, and in large part the birthplace of the world famous stone industry of Quincy.

Based upon the techniques and technology perfected in these early quarries, the "Boston Granite Style" of architecture evolved in nearby Boston, and America's granite industry was born, later leading to quarrying in Cape Ann, coastal Maine, and New Hampshire, which in time adopted the name "the Granite State." To facilitate the work in the quarries, the Quincy Canal was built, and the Souther built stone sloops in their shipyard near the canal.

As new developments are proposed for the ancient North Commons quarry sites in Quincy, special care should be taken to guarantee that the significance of these sites is not forgotten. New owners and developers should be encouraged to erect historic site markers near the quarries, to preserve important remains such as steel pins, ledge outcrops, quarried stone column drums, etc., which remain there as well as to help finance improvements so that new museums and exhibits can better interpret the Quincy Canal, the North Commons quarries, and the Souther shipyard.

families very sad.

As a son of a carpenter and a former laborer myself, let me say that Highpoint and the project slated for Lot 23, though they provide jobs for blue collar workers, are no friend to the working class people of Quincy.

Changing The Character Of The City

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

In 1955, my father, a carpenter, bought his house in West Quincy, where my mother still lives. Will a carpenter be able to afford a condo at Highpoint or on Lot 23 where Mr. O'Connell will build "Luxury Units"? Of course not! The jobs created by these projects for working people will ultimately displace the working people of Quincy.

Scores of older single family homes, especially in West Quincy where the lots tend to be fairly large houses small, have been torn down and replaced by larger ones. While there is nothing wrong with this, the reality is that this is changing the character of the city. Perhaps the "mansionization" of Quincy is inevitable, but I find the displacement of blue collar

Council Action Urged To End Shipyard Strike

By PAUL HAROLD

City Councillor George Burke urged the city council to sponsor talks between union and management in an effort to settle the strike of workers at the shipyard. He said that such powers were in inherent part of the emergency powers of the council.

Councillor David McIntosh, on the advice of City Solicitor Douglas Randall, objected to Burke's motion. He said that while he was desirous of a strike settlement, the council had no power to intervene.

"If powerful men like Congressman Burke and Senators Kennedy and Saltonstall can't do anything, what can a city council do?" McIntosh asked.

Meanwhile, the Navy re-affirmed its position that it could not leave unfinished ships in shipyard closed by strikes. It was considering moving those vessels to Navy yards for completion.

FOUR-ALARM FIRE HITS DOWNTOWN

A four-alarm fire destroyed Beebe's Men's Store at 1468 Hancock St. and severely damaged the Primrose Corset Shop at number 1466.

Other stores suffering damage were Leed's Cut Rate Store, George Stone's Jewelry and the Pilgrim Lunch.

Fire Chief Thomas Gorman estimated damages at $100,000. Fourteen engine crews fought the blaze, including two from Braintree and three from Boston.

Three men hurt were privates Gino Palmer, Thomas Colligan and patrolman Robert Graham.

FERRAZZI ORDERS TOWING

Police Chief William Ferrazzi ordered the wholesale towing of illegally parked cars, following an "avalanche" of complaints that abandoned cars were blocking snow plowing equipment.

The chief noted that the tagging of cars was ineffective.

"The only effective way is towing until people get the message I mean business," he said.

To date 83 cars had been towed.

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Lenten Vegetarian Casserole

Today's vegetarian recipe is great for a Friday during Lent, and if made the night before can give you a "night off" by just turning on the oven.

It comes out in soufflé-style, ready to serve. And with a Caesar's salad you've got it made.

Make-a-head Vegetable Casserole

8 slices bread (can be day old)
2 cups chopped cooked favorite vegetable or mixed
1/2 cup shredded cheddar cheese
6 eggs

1 can low-fat mushroom soup
1/2 cup low fat milk
1 teaspoon mustard
1/2 teaspoon basil
salt and pepper to taste

Lightly grease a medium sized casserole dish. Cut the bread into 1/2 inch pieces and evenly spread half of them in the dish.

Place the vegetables and cheese over the cubes.

In a bowl, beat the eggs, soup, milk and seasonings. Pour over bread-vegetable mixture. Cover and refrigerate for several hours or overnight. Bake in a 350 degree oven until knife inserted comes out clean and top is golden brown. About an hour.

(Marie D'Olimpio has written a cookbook containing many recipes printed in The Quincy Sun.

They are available at the Fruit Basket (near Star Market), Previte's Market, Sumner Street, Nanci's Barbershop, Elm Street, Braintree, Curry's Hardware, Copeland Street and the Cherry Gift Shop at Quincy Hospital.)

Real Estate Tax Exemptions Topic for Squantum Seniors

The Squantum Senior Citizens will meet at 12:30 p.m. March 16 at the Nickerson Post, Moon Island Road, Squantum.

Marion A. Fantucchio, chairwoman of the Board of Assessors, will speak on "Personal Exemptions on Real Estate Taxes." She will cover a variety of options available to senior citizens.

The program is sponsored by Marie and Jim Stamos of Stamos & Stamos Realtors in response to the growing number of seniors who are on fixed incomes and are concerned that their home ownership may be in jeopardy because of increased home and living expenses.

"This program is seen as a means of educating the senior community to the options available to them with regard to tax deferment and other programs that may meet specific needs, thereby enabling them to enjoy their homes for as many years as they wish," said Marie Stamos.

Leon McIntyre, president of the Squantum Seniors, said those interested in attending this meeting should call 617-328-9400 for a reservation.

Hospital Offers Pepper Spray Training Class

A free pepper spray training class will be offered the first Tuesday of each month from 5-8 p.m. at Quincy Hospital, 114 Whitwell St., in Conference Room A.

Comfortable clothing is recommended and advance registration is required.

Call the Hospital Security Department, (617) 376-4175 to register.

'At Risk' Bracelets Available At Beechwood Center

Beechwood Community Life Center is distributing "Special Alert" bracelets designed for persons "at risk" due to memory impairment and other related conditions.

The service is a partnership between Beechwood, the Commission on Handicapped Affairs and the Quincy Police Department.

The need for a "special alert" identification was first prompted by families participating in Beechwood's Alzheimer's Support Groups.

The Police Department and Commission on Handicapped Affairs helped develop the initial plan, with QCHA providing the bracelets.

Beechwood on the Bay distributes the bracelets at the Center, located at 440 East Squantum St., North Quincy. Beechwood then forwards the applications, with family contact information, to the Police Department for registration.

Project Coordinators are Captain Terrance Kelly of the Quincy Police Department, William Murphy, Chairman of the Quincy Commission on Handicapped Affairs and Mary Gougian, Director of Elder Services at Beechwood Community Life Center.

The Emergency Alert Bracelet program is the latest "Project Safe" initiative. Other Beechwood programs designed to serve frail seniors "at risk" include the city sponsored Elder Home Repair Program and the October "Senior SAFE" Saturday installation of smoke detectors throughout the city.

For more information about the Emergency Alert Bracelets, other Project SAFE services or Senior Programs at Beechwood, call 617-471-5712.

Furniture Store Coming To Quincy Center

ing in the team that assisted in bringing The Furniture Market to Quincy Center.

Morde said The Furniture Market offers brand name, moderate and better quality furniture, mattresses, area rugs, and home accessories, at substantially discounted prices. The Furniture Market has a constant flow of new, "one of a kind" items that create an exciting and unique shopping experience for the consumer, he said. The rapidly changing assortment gives the consumer a variety of merchandise to choose from, while creating an incentive to return, he said.

"Customers are going to love the quality and pricing. Fifteen years ago, Quincy had many fine furniture stores. We hope to fill the gap that exists today," he added.

Morde and his family opened The Furniture Market in 1997 in Kingston. This will be the company's second location. The business is both family owned and operated. Jeanne Morde is company CFO, Christy Morde has served as the rug buyer, and Kevin Morde manages customer delivery.

Also Coming

Several other businesses are moving into Quincy.

They include:

- Empire Vision is moving into the former Bank-Boston office at Pilgrim Plaza, 126 Quincy Ave., as of April 1.

- Media One is moving into the former dry cleaning shop at Pilgrim Plaza April 1. A health care facility is scheduled to move into Media One's former quarters at School Street and the Parkway.

- Massachusetts Co-operative Bank completed purchase of the QuinOil building on Quincy Avenue March 1 and is expected to move in soon.

- Allied American Insurance Agency will move into the second floor of the South Shore Savings Bank, which opened in January on the former Eddie's Diner site.

- Executive Auto Glass expects to move into 165 Quincy Ave., the site of the former Twixt Drill.

- Natale's Men's Clothier plans to move into quarters on Quincy Avenue by September.

- Quincy Mutual Credit Union plans to relocate within Shaw's Supermarket on Quincy Avenue. Sale of the property to the credit union is pending, said Sean Kenealy of Key Realty Inc.

- Alarm Central Company is moving into 680 Hancock St.

in Quincy Center the week after Easter.

Surgeon-Podiatrist

WARNING: WATCH OUT FOR DRY SKIN

Like sunburns in summer, dry skin is one of the natural hazards of wintertime. When it comes to the feet, however, dry skin can be more than an uncomfortable annoyance - it can be a serious health hazard. Without treatment, dry skin on the feet can become cracked and painful, and cracked feet can become infected. This can have life-threatening consequences, particularly for people with diabetes. Dry skin is also more of a problem for people as they age, when skin begins to lose its natural elasticity and moisture. In addition, there are several skin conditions, such as xeroderma, eczema, and psoriasis, that can cause dry skin.

No matter what other health problems you have, your feet need to be cared for, too. You may be able to keep them running just fine with a little help and a good care plan. Whatever problem you have with your feet, it is important to choose the best care available. Dr. Hacker is Board Certified, A.B.P.O.P.P.M. We are located at 110 W. Squantum St., N. Quincy. Call (617) 472-3466 today.

P.S. Chronic dry skin around the edges of the heel can be a symptom of a thyroid disorder or diabetes.

Like to be mortgage-free by the time you retire?

Trade your current 30-year mortgage in for a 15-Year Mortgage from Colonial Federal Savings Bank. The monthly payment's a bit higher, but chances are you're earning more now and it's a great form of "forced saving." The benefits? You lock in your mortgage at the lowest rates seen since the 1960s, you save tens of thousands of dollars in interest, you build equity faster and - by the time you retire - you'll be mortgage-free! It's what people dream of and right now the dream is closer than ever.

Come see us and we'll run the numbers for you. Or call Richard or Angela at 617-471-0750.

'Teacher Bashing' Demonstration

Teachers from Quincy, Weymouth and Braintree were expected to stage a demonstration at the Quincy Education Association headquarters on Hancock Street late yesterday (Wednesday) in response to the "teacher-bashing" by public officials in recent months.

This is in response to the teacher bashing by Gov. Paul Cellucci, James Peysner, the new chairman of the state Board of Education, John Silber and the demand for teacher recertification, said QEA president Paul Phillips.

He said demonstrations were planned throughout the state.

"The whole focus is that no one is asking teachers what to do to improve the schools," he charged.

In a prepared statement, Phillips said: "As the folks working every day with kids from all over this area, we think we have some ideas that would have an immediate, positive impact on public education" which would improve student achievement and teacher performance, which would make schools safer, would expand education, would help disruptive students without harming those students who want to learn.

Cut-A-Thon For DOVE At Eugene Thomas Salon

The Eugene Thomas Salon, Hancock St., Quincy Center will hold a Cut-A-Thon for DOVE, Inc. Sunday, March 21

The Quincy based agency provides services to battered women and their children. The Cut-A-Thon will be held from 12 to 5 p.m.

The cost for a cut is $15 per person and all proceeds will be donated to DOVE.

Last year, Dove received

2,570 calls for help on its 24 hour hotline and provided shelter and transitional housing to 152 women and 292 children.

In addition, services were provided to over 1,000 women and children through their off-site office in North Quincy. The owners and staff of the Eugene Thomas Salon are donating their time to raise funds to go directly to women and children in need.

Squantum Point Public Meeting

Construction of Underground Electric Cables

Everyone is invited to a public meeting at Squantum Point in North Quincy:

Thursday, March 11, 1999 at 7:00 p.m.
Marina Bay Company, Cafeteria
500 Victory Road, Squantum, No. Quincy

At the meeting, Massachusetts Electric and New England Power, which are NEES companies, will discuss construction of the Dorchester to Quincy Underground Electric Cable Project which goes through Squantum Point Park and along Commander Shea Boulevard.

Construction will begin in March 1999 in the former runway area and in part of the MWRA parking lot that is farthest from Dorchester Bay. In Squantum, intermittent work on the cables also will take place over the next few months and be completed by year end.

National Poison Prevention Week

March 15-21 is National Poison Prevention Week, a time designated to increase public awareness of accidental poisonings.

Spaulding Rehabilitation Hospital is offering a free safety card with special tips for childproofing homes against poisonings and other home-based accidents.

For your free card, call the public relations department at 617-573-2904. Offer good while supplies last.

Here are a few tips to prevent poisonings in the kitchen and bathroom:

• Store medicines and cleaning products in their original containers with their original labels. If you must transfer a product to another container, boldly label the container.

• Put medication away immediately after use; don't leave it on the counter near food.

• NEVER store a poisonous substance near food, near utensils for preparing food, or near medications.

• If household products are stored in low cabinets, lock the container with Saf-

T-Locks.

• Lockup bathroom cleaners, cosmetics, and toiletries.

• Keep medications in childproof containers; store contraceptives in a high cabinet.

• Periodically throw out old or unused medications; flush pills down the toilet. Do not throw them into the garbage pail where children can easily get at them.

Hospital Offers Free Care Clinic

Quincy Hospital is offering free episodic care for adults without insurance at the Southwest Community Center, 338 Granite St., Mondays from 4-7p.m.

Episodic care helps people who have minor health concerns such as rashes, sprains, and upper respiratory infections, or who are in need of a simple physical or blood pressure check.

Major injuries such as broken bones or those requiring stitches need to be treated in a hospital emergency room.

For more information, call (617)376-5056.

Your Child's Problem May Be A Visual One

(NAPS)—For many children who have difficulty learning, the problem may be visual rather than mental.

A child with poor visual perception can have difficulty with the activities of daily living, school tasks and play. Common symptoms include:

- Difficulty copying from the board, or completing tasks within the time allotted;
- Difficulty remembering what was read;
- Complaints or history of headaches, dizziness, watery eyes, or nausea after reading; and
- Avoidance of reading and writing activities, or fatiguing

Occupational therapy can help children overcome difficulties with visual perception.

easily when reading.

One treatment option is occupational therapy. Practitioners can work with children experiencing visual-perception difficulties, and can refer them to optometrists or ophthalmologists for further visual examination, if warranted.

Occupational therapy for children experiencing learning problems is available in schools through the federal Individuals with Disabilities Education Act. Occupational therapy is also a covered service in many insurance plans.

For more information, or to locate an occupational therapist in your community, call the American Occupational Therapy Association at 1-800-668-8255, or visit the website at www.aota.org.

Choose Right Walking Footwear

(NAPS)—Walking can be a step in the right direction when it comes to improving your health. A brisk 30-minute-a-day walk is now believed to help lower cholesterol, prevent hypertension, diabetes, some forms of cancer and depression.

Since walking requires minimal equipment and involves less chance of injury, it is an increasingly popular exercise choice.

As a result, there's more information available about getting the most out of walking. This includes know-how about the right kinds of shoes to walk in.

"Just as you would not likely play tennis in a running shoe, because each type of shoe is built for a different set of directional and impact forces, you should not walk in a shoe built only for cross training or running," said Dan Doerer, director of research and engineering for NaturalSPORT walking shoes, a division of Brown Shoe Company.

There was a time when jogging/cross training shoes were considered good enough for walkers. However, recent studies show that walking and jogging have different shoe requirements.

One reason is that a walker experiences ground impact forces equal to one and a half times his or her body weight compared to three to four times the body weight of a runner.

As a result, jogging shoes are designed to minimize impact. However, the thick heel and squishy sole which act as a collision mat are counterproductive for the walking gait.

A walker does not need a defensive shoe, designed to absorb impact, but an offensive shoe that will permit the foot to function naturally in its most efficient manner.

How do you decide which walking shoes can help you go the distance?

According to Mark Fenton, champion walker and editor-at-large of Walking Magazine, there are three things to do when looking for a walking shoe:

1. Twist—See how flexible a shoe is by twisting the heel and toe in opposite directions. A walking shoe should have more flexibility than a running shoe.

2. Bend—Grab a shoe at the heel and forefoot and see how it bends. It should bend where the foot does, not under the arch.

3. Poke—With the shoe placed on a flat surface, poke your finger in the heel section. The toe should come up. If you poke into the toe section, the heel should come up.

Since running shoes are designed for impact, says Fenton, the thicker heel material may unnecessarily pull on muscles, causing fatigue and pain.

So, before taking that step, take the time to select a good pair of walking shoes.

TAKING ASPIRIN DURING A HEART ATTACK

The phenomenal news about aspirin just keeps piling up. First it was found that taking small doses of the drug regularly may help prevent heart attacks, strokes, and several other ailments in some patients. Now the medical community has recognized that aspirin may help save lives when taken during a heart attack as well. As a result, many paramedics now routinely give aspirin to patients complaining of chest pain accompanied by sweating, nausea, and shortness of breath. They advise taking a plain, uncoated aspirin if heart attack is suspected, chewing and swallowing the tablet or crushing it in a little water for faster absorption. Of course, the most important step is getting professional medical help - fast.

While aspirin has recently been shown to be more effective than originally thought, it's not a drug to be taken lightly. In high doses, it can cause stomach problems for some and tinnitus for others. If you are taking aspirin regularly for a persistent medical condition, be sure to regularly check in with your doctor about the dosage. At AFFILIATED MEDICAL GROUPS, located at 700 Congress St., Quincy, we listen to your concerns. We are affiliated with Quincy and South Shore Hospitals. Please call us at 617-472-2550, office hours by appointment.

P.S. Aspirin can have serious side effects. Consult your doctor before deciding to take any medication regularly.

Quincy 2000 Entrepreneurial Training Program Starts April 5

Quincy 2000 will begin a 12-week entrepreneurial training program designed to teach entrepreneurs how to start and manage a business on Monday, April 5.

By the end of the program, Quincy 2000 expects each participant will have completed a written business plan with some graduates eligible to submit their plans and loan applications to the Quincy 2000 loan pool for funding of the Quincy business.

"The planning phase is critical for people just starting out in business," said Economic Development Specialist Ann Fisher. "New entrepreneurs need to figure out systematically how to approach each aspect of their business, so that they minimize costly mistakes."

"The Quincy 2000 Small Business Training Course will get people off on the right foot," Fisher said. "They will learn how to plan for their particular business, and come out with a written business plan that they can present to our loan pool."

Quincy 2000 Executive Director Joseph Mannarino noted Quincy 2000 offered a similar course several years ago, called the "Incubation Program" that taught people how to write a business plan. "Since then, we have had time to evaluate the outcomes, the refine our program to produce businesses that revitalize our business district and provide employment opportunities for residents of the city," Mannarino said. Past graduates include John Black, owner of Presidential Camera and Barbara Richardson, owner of Simply Barbara, both in Quincy Center, and Beth Veneto, owner of Ginger Betty's in North Quincy.

"We are looking for participants committed to opening a business in Quincy and submitting a loan application to the Quincy 2000 Loan Pool," Mannarino said.

Experienced teachers who have run their own businesses and worked for top corporations will teach the course. After advertising and outreach to the community, Quincy 2000 anticipates the course will begin April 5. Plans are for the course to meet each Monday night, three hours per evening, for 12 weeks.

The curriculum will cover setting a business vision, bookkeeping, marketing, financial statements and planning, business operations, taxes and recordkeeping. Participants will have a chance to meet with successful local entrepreneurs and hear their stories. They will also have a chance to present their business plans to a panel of entrepreneurs and bankers for feedback.

Enrollment in the program, which will cost $89, is limited to 15.

For more information, call (617) 984-5717, ext. 6.

Grace Murphy Named To Hospital Board of Managers

Grace Murphy has been appointed by Mayor James Sheets to the Quincy Hospital Board of Managers.

"Grace brings a strong background of financial management that will help Quincy Hospital stay competitive in the fiscal climate that hospitals across the country are experiencing," Sheets said. Her skill and experience will be an asset to the hospital's Board of Managers.

Murphy, a Quincy resident, is employed at Citizen's Bank of Massachu-

Flynn Sells Friel Nursing Home To ENC

Daniel J. Flynn and Co. recently represented Isabel Donahue in the sale of the Friel Nursing Home in Wollaston to Eastern Nazarene College for $350,000. The building of approximately 10,000 square feet sits on nearly 13,000 square feet of land on Beach

St. Eastern Nazarene intends to use the site as an additional housing and operating facility. Flynn and Co. CEO Daniel J. Flynn handled the negotiations for the property seller and procured the buyer.

"This is a perfect location for Eastern Nazarene College to set up a new facility," Flynn said. "We were able to locate an ideal buyer for this property. This building will be a great addition to the college."

First-Time Buyers Have Variety Of Mortgage Options Available

By CAROL BULMAN

First-time home buyers comprise as much as 50 percent of today's potential real estate customers. The following mortgage products are available to first time buyers who want to end their days of rental receipts and start building equity in their homes.

•MHFA loans. The Massachusetts Housing Finance Agency offers low-interest loan programs for first time buyers that have flexible qualifying standards and generous allowances for how much the buyers can spend on a new home.

In Quincy, single people and couples qualify for the program if their annual income is less than $60,000; for families of two or three or more, the income limit is $69,000. The maximum purchase price for new, single-home families in Quincy is $148,000, while existing houses have a limit of up to $151,000. For multiple unit properties, the limits increase proportionally, with a maximum of $239,000 for a four-family home.

Conway Financial Services was the first mortgage broker in the state to complete an MHFA loan, which has a down payment requirement of only three percent.

•Fannie 97 Program. Fannie Mae, the second mortgage market giant, offers this program, which requires only a three percent down payment on a home mortgage. Most mortgages require down payments of five to 10 percent of the amount of the loan. For example, to purchase a $100,000 house, the Fannie 97 program would require you to have only $3,000 as a down payment, where traditional lenders may require between $5,000 and $10,000.

•Freddie Mac's 40/40 Gold Program. Freddie Mac, another national lending source, offers this program, which allows first-time buyers to obtain a higher loan amount.

The 40/40 Gold Program allows borrowers to apply as much as 40 percent (instead of the customary 36 percent) of their income towards their total indebtedness. Total indebtedness includes the proposed housing payment (principal, interest, property taxes, homeowner's insurance, and mortgage insurance, if ap-

SPORTS

Quincy Pee Wee A's Win State Championship

The Quincy Youth Hockey Pee Wee A team are state champions after emerging victoriously from a strong field of 16 teams representing 10 district champions from across Massachusetts.

The team hustled, scrambled and banged their way to the top during a grueling schedule of five games in three days. Coach Al Grazioso and assistants Mark Giordani and Steve McGowan said the trophy was especially meaningful because it was the result of a complete team effort in which every player contributed at some crucial point in the tournament.

The finals saw the Quincy icemen hold off a last period surge from a quick Starhawks team from Central Massachusetts to win the championship game, 6-5. Quincy's Josh Giordani started the scoring off a sharp pass from Matt Grazioso with less than two minutes gone in the first period. Matt Germain then scored on the receiving end of a beautiful passing play from linemates Kevin Richardson and Ryan Conley. The third Quincy goal of the first period was netted by Andrew Patten who put one in from an opening at the point created by crisp passes from Ryan Conley and Matt Germain. The Starhawks managed to sneak one in to end the period, 3-1.

In the second period, goalie Nick Manning was outstanding as he fended off repeated rushes from the opposition. Matt Germain scored an unassisted goal and Matt Lavery added to the Quincy lead when he buried a pass from Matt Grazioso on a breakout started in the Quincy end by Timmy Duggan. Hard hitting and hustle by defensemen Jack O'Connell and Steve Kelley limited the Starhawks to one goal in this period.

Third period action started with a Starhawk goal which was quickly answered with a goal by Matt Grazioso on an assist by Matt Lavery. With less than eight minutes to play Quincy was ahead 6-3 but the tough weekend schedule was beginning to take its toll. Defenders Ryan Feldoff and Kyle Carmody dug deep to repel multiple Starhawk rushes and Nick Manning came up with several big saves to insure the Quincy victory.

The semi-final game against Charlestown was a very defensive battle and another nail bitter. Charlestown took an early lead, scoring on the opening shift. That goal was quickly matched when Ryan Conley scored on a pass from Matt Germain after Andrew Patten found him with a pass on the ensuing face off.

The game remained tied 1-1 from the first minute of the first period until late in the second period as Nick Manning in goal anchored a tenacious "rockem sockem" defense behind Timmy Duggan, Kyle Carmody, Steve Kelley, Ryan Feldoff and Jake O'Connell. Continuous all out hustle and strong checking paid off for Quincy when Matt Germain scored the go-ahead goal in the second period with assists from Ryan Conley and Andrew Patten.

Charlestown answered early in the third period to tie the game at 2-2. With four minutes left in the final period, Patrick Maxey muscled the puck across the goal mouth and Liam Powers slammed the rebound home to give Quincy a 3-2 win and a trip to the finals.

The preliminary rounds of the tournament matched Quincy against Cambridge, Martha's Vineyard and SMS, a combined team from Sudbury, Maynard and Stowe. Quincy outscored the opposition 16-4 in the early games which started when they defeated Cambridge in the opening game, 5-1. The defense got offensive as Tim Duggan and Andrew Patten each scored a goal and had an assist. Steve Kelley also scored a goal.

Jack O'Connell and Ryan Feldoff each earned an assist and played great defensively. Brendon Conley scored by finishing an end-to-end passing play from Matt Germain and Kevin Richardson. Ryan Conley had an assist as did Matt Lavery and Matt Grazioso. Liam Power's break away speed and constant hustle netted him a goal.

Nick Manning let in only one goal while turning away repeated Cambridge attacks.

The Quincy offense exploded in the next game against Martha's Vineyard with a convincing 7-1 victory. Quincy took the lead in the first shift when Andrew Patten scored off assists from Brendon Conley and Patrick Maxey. Brendon Conley and Patten later found Maxey in the slot and he scored too. Kevin Richardson scored two goals and had an assist. Matt Germain scored and had two assists while Matt Grazioso scored two goals. Josh Giordani and Ryan Feldoff each had an assist. The scoring was made possible as defenders Duggan, O'Donnell, Kelley and Carmody kept the puck in the Vineyarders end.

The last preliminary game resulted in the 4-2 defeat of SMS which guaranteed the team's advance to the semi-final game. Shuffling players after Kevin Richardson left the game with an ankle injury resulted in a "production line" of Matt Grazioso, Matt Germain and Ryan Conley. Matt Grazioso scored all four goals and Ryan Conley and Matt Germain each had three assists.

The Quincy Pee Wee "A's", which tuned up for the state championship by clinching the Pee Wee title in Kiwanis Club of Quincy's tournament a few weeks ago, will represent Massachusetts in the Northeast Regional Tournament later this month.

Erin Flaherty Earns Soccer Letter At Wesleyan

Erin Flaherty, of Quincy, a sophomore at Wesleyan University in Middletown Conn. earned her second varsity letter in women's soccer at the college this past fall.

A key member of the Cardinal's midfield, Flaherty played in each of the team's 14 games with two starting assignments. Coach Jeff Vagell said she provided valuable support to both the defense and offense, taking five shots at goal over the course of the season. Concluding her second year, Flaherty has appeared in 27 of a possible 28 matches and has passed for one assist to total one scoring point.

The daughter of Ruth and Brian Flaherty of 138 Granger St., Flaherty is a 1997 graduate of Quincy High School. There she won four varsity letters in soccer, serving as team captain and being honored with the sportsmanship award, and was a four-time letterwinner in both indoor and outdoor track.

At Wesleyan, Flaherty is a Cardinal Key tour guide and host to prospective students. She is also a member of the indoor and outdoor track teams.

First-Time Buyers Have Variety Of Mortgage Options Available

all of the closing costs to be financed into the loan. Although you need not be a first time home buyer to apply for a loan through the FHA, many first-time home buyers use this program because of the low cost involved in obtaining the loan, and the leniency offered when reviewing credit and indebtedness.

•FHA 203(k) Renovation Loan. The FHA offers a terrific program for buyers who want to renovate a home to suit their needs and tastes. Once again, the borrower need not be a first time home buyer to apply for this loan, but most customers who utilize the benefits of this program are, in fact, buying their first home.

The reason for this is that the program allows the borrower to buy a property that may need renovation and to add the cost of the work into the loan amount, all while observing the same leniency offered with other FHA loans.

Very often, the borrowers find that by financing with the 203(k) Renovation Loan, the cost of purchasing and renovating the property is less than had they purchased a similar property already improved.

The scope of the work can range from major rehab to minor improvements, such as updating a kitchen, finishing a basement or modernizing a home's systems.
